University Police In Wild Pursuit Of Stolen Car

University police were led on a bullet punctured chase of a stolen car Sunday night through the back roads of Amherst and Leverett at speeds in excess of 90 m.p.h.

The car, a late model station wagon was stolen in South Hadley at about 6:30 p.m. Soon afterward, South Hadley police began the chase as they spotted the car going through the center of the nearby town.

Chasing the car through the Notch, the So. Hadley police notified their Amherst counterparts, and a roadblock was set up in South Amherst. The driver of the stolen vehicle, however, was able to elude the block, and raced on toward Amherst center.

University police officers Francis Mazzei and Donald Zidik took up the chase at the Rte. 9-116 intersection, and followed the car up East Pleasant St., toward Leverett. The car turned off the road, and was bogged in a mud bath, whereupon the driver and a passenger fled.

Police from Leverett, Amherst, Shutesbury, the University, and the Northampton State Police Barracks converged on the scene. A state police bloodhound was brought into the search, and followed a trail to the highway, where it vanished. Police surmised that the pair had hitched a ride from a passing motorist.

Several shots were fired in an effort to halt the speeding car.

MID-SEMESTER GRADES

Advisers will have the mid-semester grade reports for Freshmen and Sophomores just after vacation on Tuesday, April 7th. Each student should ascertain when his adviser's office hours are and arrange a conference with him. At this conference Freshmen and Sophomores are also asked to confirm their major plans, so that pre-registration material may be forwarded to the correct department in May.

Concert Band Spring Concert

by LANGDON F. LOMBARD

On Saturday, March 21 at 8 p.m., the Concert Band of the University of Massachusetts presented its annual Spring Concert which was held this year in conjunction with the Fine Arts Festival in memorial, John Fitzgerald Kennedy. The Ballroom of the Student Union was so full that people were standing in the doors.

The highlight of the concert for those interested in prolonging the theme of the Fine Arts Festival was the second performance of Memorial by Elliot Schwartz, a piece commissioned for the Convocation of Fine Arts held on Tuesday of the same week. Again, the audience found itself centered between the ground bass of the organ and the dissonant interruptions by the band. It made most of the University family wish that Dr. Schwartz was going to be with the University for another year.

The concert began in fine military fashion with Fillmore's Men of Ohio reminding everyone of our late President's military affiliations. His importance to this nation and to the world beyond was touched upon by Peter Mennin's Canzona and Holst's Turn Back O Man—the latter in which the University Chorale took part, the piece being conducted by Larry Lemmel.

But the high point for the concert was Berlioz's Grand Funeral and Triamphic Symphony. This expressed all aspects of the dedication of this year's Fine Arts Festival. The work had its funeral march, a recitative and prayer portraying a "discourse or farewell addressed to the illustrious dead," and an apotheosis based on a theme of glory and triumph. This should have finished the concert.

Yet, after some concluding remarks about the acknowledged improvements in the band and a promise of better things to come, Mr. Jenkins, the band's director, chose to play another piece, "a favorite of the band." It was Sousa's Stars and Stripes Forever, restating the military aspects of Mr. Kennedy.

The world recognizes that our late president was much more than a military man; he was a man of all nations. If the band could not find a piece for all nations like the Berlioz, at least they could have made an attempt to show Mr. Kennedy as a true American by playing The Star Spangled Banner, the logical conclusion to such a concert.

From Where I Sit

The Radical Right

by AL McNAMARA

Thoughts while sitting around the Collegian office . . .

Why is the mail from ultraconservative organizations never signed? This question has plagued me for many months, now, since we've started to get the stuff by the bushel. The usual claims have come through: "Impeach Earl Warren", "The UN—The House that Hiss Built", etc. Whatever the caption on the front, the back of the postcard is always the same—it is never signed.

Why these characters never sign their literature (using the word loosely) is a mystery to me. However, it seems to say something about the person. It shows, I think, a lack of character, perhaps. Maybe it even gives away a basic disbelief of the sender in the stuff he's mailing.

The mail always supports the American "way of life" yet the sender seems to forget that a mainstay of this "way of life" is that a person should have the courage of his convictions, that he should stand and be counted as either for or against a given action. Or, has this part of the American "way of life" gone down the same rose covered paths as the whooping crane, the horse as a means of transportation, and Barry Goldwater?

While we would ask his followers to take an example from him: no matter how silly some of his ideas sound, he at least stands behind them—most of the time.

To the Editor:

Before I write to you about the item on my mind I would like to know what actually happens to the letters addressed to you. Since September I have written four letters to the Collegian, containing appreciative or critical comments about articles I read in it. None was either printed nor did I hear comments of the recipients. If you receive so much mail that you have to disregard a lot, otherwise you could not handle your work, please, let me know it, because time is for me the most precious possession, and I hate to throw it away.

I wanted to comment on the excellency of the Kennedy Memorial Arts Tribute. It showed courage in presenting something os completely different. It was very well done, the music as well as the spoken words. Many guests from the outside were present too, and I heard only highly appreciative comments.

The decoration of the Student Union Ballroom was also in complete harmony with this memorial tribute.

Yet before one stepped in or after one came out, pictures of the Campus Lovelies hit the eyes and the stomachs of the sensitive visitor.

If some students accept this battle as a joke, could they not have their terrific fun at a non-public place?

Several articles in the Collegian dealt with the pajamas party, pith the pros and cons, nevertheless, no mater how one thinks about it, at least they did not take place in the Student Union. This is my suggestion for the next Chest Battle, if such battles have to be at all.

Sincerely yours,
Margarete Kappitz

What Happened To College Pond?

Once upon a time there was a large body of water in the center of the University. This body of water was called the campus pond.

In the Winter, the water in the Pond would turn to ice. If it was a cold winter, the ice would become very thick. Then the students of the University would ice-skate on the Pond. Everybody had a good time.

As Spring approached the ice would begin to turn back to water. Soon there would be lots of water in the Pond. The students would play games on the banks of the Pond during the warm Spring days.

It is Spring. There are no students on the banks of the Pond. There is no Pond. The vast stagnant mass of water is no more. There only remains an ugly mass of mud.

Where is our Pond? Has it disappeared behind that great mass of concrete? Will our Pond ever return? We miss our Pond, and would like it back.

U-T Plays A "Smooth Success"

by DAVID AXELROD

Two plays, written by Raymond Kennedy, a graduate of the University, class of 1960, provide a short but enjoyable evening's entertainment for those who are willing to listen. I Do Not Think I Will Fall In Love Today and The Boat are fashioned in the style of the modern theatre, drawing on limited props and action, and audience directed comments to deliver a message.

The curtain rises on I Do Not Think . . . and several minutes of golden silence that fix the characters in the audience's mind. Then, the chairman of a conservatively-attired committee (Tom Kerrigan) begins proceedings against a young man (Hal Hines) and a woman (Helen Tefs) in what appears to be an incest trial. There is little movement; a few typed head and hand gestures are all that are needed to portray the committee's reaction. The Chairman and the Poet move about, occasionally, but the action is carefully kept down. The real play, the message, the humor, is centered in speech, and the play on that account is successful.

The Boat casts another poet (Steve Orlen) adrift with a dominering female (Sheila Ferrini). The two characters square off for some physical and verbal bouts, seated and rowing in a dingy a'mid stage. There are many humorous lines and, unfortunately, some humorous technical difficulties in sound effects. Action goes up and down, about to lull the audience, when the poet, too, gets tired of it all, and breaks the illusion of the set by stepping out of the boat, and barking orders to the stage crew.

There are many levels on which an audience, seeing the plays for the first time, can interpret speech and action. I Do Not Think . . . is an out and out battle between all that is free and creative, and all the conventions (or perhaps committes) of society. The poet looks, acts, and speaks poetry. He is an aging twenty-year-old, voicing a love for beauty and freedom, and a bit of insecurity too. The Boat mocks the poet, and the institutions accepted by our society.

Presenting and interpreting these two plays seems to have stimulated the mind and imagination of all involved. The right amount of humor keeps our interest; placement of sound—balance of speeches—makes the plays enjoyable. The well coached delivery of all the actors make the plays a smooth success; a triple success, for Doris Abramson, Director, the actors, and Mr. Kennedy, the creator of these interesting one-acters.

One major flaw was obvious in the production. The audience was too small.

Ya . . . hoo!

To the Editor:

When we received the latest edition of "Yahoo," we expected to find many jokes, some racy, but certainly not derogatory. We were especially hurt and very much angered to catch the phrase, "Kennedy publicity stunt," an obvious reference to our late President's assassination, in the first column entitled "Mass Hysteria."

Fun is fun, but this unkind cut does not help the reputation of the University. The staff of the "Yahoo" owes the students and faculty of the University an immediate apology.

Banned In Boston

To the Editor:
Re. J.S.D.

This is a rebuttal to your recent critique of the Yahoo which we found to be entirely circumlocutious, superficial, and "indirect"; as you were entirely undiscerning. Your illogical reasoning has made a traversty of literary justice.

We found the Yahoo to be prurient and capable of being banned in Boston. As wholesome, upstanding members of the Greek faction, we were abashed to the point of a psychoneurotic trauma by your justification of ignominious literature. Such literature is completely out of context with Massachusetts Blue Laws and Christian Brotherhood.

As representatives of the Conservative faction on this campus, we did not appreciate the derogatory references in respect to the highest public office in this nation of 100% Americans.

In the spirit of the Mayflower Compact, the Declaration of Independence, the Platt Amendment, and the Bay of Pigs Fiasco, we the undersigned must resist this definite violation of the Smith Act.

"Credit For Hatch Hours?"

by TERRY STOCK

"I think giving credit for extra-curricular activities would be like giving credit for Hatch Time. The activities provide a wide variety of experience, but how do you measure that experience."

So said Dr. William C. Venman, Assistant Provost, to the Senate ad hoc Committee on Compensation at a meeting Monday night.

Referring specifically to course credit for extra-curricular work, Dr. Venman commented "I have absolutely no objections to this form of compensation.

ONE PROBLEM, he pointed out, is that a course must first be proposed and discussed within a department, then pass through various committees beginning with the College Curriculum Committee, and finally be passed by the University Board of Trustees. This process usually takes a year, and the course might still not be approved.

The Assistant Provost explained that the University Chorale and Band are two examples of courses now being taught for credit.

"Another problem," said Dr. Venman, "is to find a uniform way to evaluate the work being done by activity leaders as well as staff members."

IN DISCUSSING the bonus system as a method of eliminating apathy toward extra-curricular activities, Dr. Venman said, "The only answer to apathy is to drop the activity. I would not be adverse to letting the Collegian drop for a year if no one can be found to do the work. Then if the students want it, let them work for it."

When asked about monetary incentives, Dr. Venman said that he felt the only way such a method could work would be for the activity to get its own funding and administer the money within the group. One possibility suggested was to sell each issue

Lost Child Found At Home; Campus Police Aid In Search

A lost child, subject of an hour's intensive search by police and students, was found safe at home Monday.

Chip Morningstar of Sunderland was being cared for at one of the married students' dormitories in the County Circle complex, when his disappearance was noted at about 10 a.m. The sitter searched for the child until 3:02 p.m., when University police were notified. Chief Alexander Blasko and Off. Francis Mazzei responded, and aided by Amherst police searched the campus for the child.

STUDENTS FROM Middlesex Dorm were praised for their help in attempting to locate Chip. The students canvassed parking lots, in hope that he would be found sleeping in one of the parked cars.

Pelham police searched the swamp area to the rear of the County Circle area, using a Land Rover to traverse the muddy terrain.

State police stood by with bloodhounds.

At 4:20 p.m., police were notified that a motorist had picked the child up on campus, and had returned him to his home in Sunderland.

Saltonstall Tells Peace Corps "To Stay Young And Adaptable"

by PAM BRADY

Dean of Students William F. Field introducing William Saltonstall, Peace Corps Director in Nigeria, said that "he represents the single most exciting idea and concept in recent years." Tuesday morning in the Commonwealth room of the Student Union Saltonstall spoke on the aims of the Peace Corps as a whole, and more specifically of the Peace Corps in Nigeria.

"The Peace Corps is an organization which is resolutely trying to stay young and adaptable." Saltonstall said. He said that the question is how fast it should grow in order to help the development of emerging nations, yet still remain a temporary. The Peace Corps as a permanent fixture in a society runs the risk of being accused of educational neocolonialism.

SALTONSTALL SAID that Nigeria needs secondary teachers in science, math, and English. All teaching is done in English as there are 250 languages in this country.

In addition to his job, the Peace Corps representative has the chance to work on special projects during his leaves. He said that many people have found great satisfaction working in leper colonies. Others have worked in manual labor, leadership training programs, and this year will take part in community development projects.

The Peace Corps representative gives friendship, competence, and shares his own sense of values with the people of a land often very distant in culture as well as miles. Saltonstall said generally those young people who have worked in the Peace Corps have left that through this experience they have gained maturity, and a new perspective on themselves and their country.

Injured Prof. Rushed To Hospital By Town Firemen

A UMass professor of mechanical engineering was injured yesterday when he fell 8 feet to a concrete floor in the Engineering Annex.

Prof. John D. Swenson had climbed a 13 foot wooden ladder to open a steam valve when the top rung gave way causing him to fall to the floor.

University Health Service physician Thomas McBride was called to the scene, as was the Amherst First Dept. ambulance. McBride said that examination on the scene seemed to indicate that Swenson had "hurt his back".

The ladder appeared to be constructed of 2 x 4 wood, serving as beams, and 1 x 2 boards serving as rungs. The rungs of the ladder were nailed to the outside of the beams; the ladder itself was fastened to the wall of the steam laboratory.

The steam lab had been principally built by Dr. Swenson, who, according to those on the scene, had scavenged most of the demonstration materials from around the area.

Prof. Swenson was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in the Amherst Fire Dept. ambulance, where he was reported in fair condition.

Sgt. Daniel Swartz and Off. William Pendergast investigated for University police.

Former Senate President Jon Fife felt that Buck had done a "tremendous job, while working under the strain of multipersonalities and of students growing up."

The residence plan will draw on faculty members from a number of disciplines and will include only those faculty members who wish to participate in the program.

It is expected that some small classes will be conducted within the dormitories. There will also be informal seminars on a regular basis. More important, the plan will give young student-scholars an opportunity to work with more mature faculty scholars on an informal basis.

The experimental plan is the result of several studies and many suggestions from members of the faculty and administration. The final plan is based on a proposal developed at a Danforth seminar held last summer and of another more specific proposal developed as a result of a $500 Danforth grant to work out a residential plan.

Student participation, for both men and women students, will be on a voluntary basis. Students are urged to consider the pilot program during the spring vacation period. After the vacation, a series of open meetings will be held at which students may question Prof. Varley about the residence plan.

Basketball Playoffs Recur; Do They Fulfill A Purpose?

by JOHN GOODRICH

That time of the year is here again. What time is that did someone ask? Well it's not baseball time, that's for sure. The Red Sox are performing brilliantly, having won two exhibition games so far and allowing the opponents to get up around 10 runs a game. No, it's not time for that yet.

It's play-off time. The annual money making scheme in professional sports is on again. Now, don't get the idea that this writer feels that playoffs are useless. In case of ties, yes, but now, no.

The rational escapes me at this time The Celtics have battled through about 80 games and have been at the sport since early October. They have faced each team in their division about 12 times and those on the other side of the wall about 8 or 9 times. Yet they face a good chance of elimination at the hands of the Cincinnati Royals. I ask you, is this necessary? It would be great to see the Royals win if only to break the perpetual domination of the league by the Celtics. So give them another banner to unfurl in the rafter of the Garden and the Royals and I will wait for another year. At the height of the season the Garden is about half full for a Celtics game. For the next few weeks, it will be full for every game.

THE TEAMS HAVE ALL PLAYED 80 GAMES and there have been just three teams eliminated. And surprisingly enough, they are the same three the experts predicted would bow out. If Cincy bows to Philadelphia or is even forced to the fifth game in the best of five series, a few questions should be raised over the legitimacy of the system.

Perhaps a simple seven game series between San Francisco and Boston would suffice to determine a champ, rather than this other foolishness.

If basketball, pro-style, is bad, then hockey is terrible. The NHL is a simple six team league that plays a 70 game schedule among these friendly clubs. Hockey fans are slightly more loyal than Celtic or pro-basketball fans and one can expect the arena to be packed for every game. Even the lowly Bruins, the league doormats, draw consistent full houses. Montreal beat out my Black Hawks, so give them the Stanley Cup and wait to next year (that sounds familiar). No, first we have two seven game semi-finals then we play for the championship. WHY???? The other teams got beat and that's all, so let's stop this money grabbing and wasting of time.

THERE IS A METHOD IN PRO-BASEBALL AND FOOTBALL. When the opposing division titles play and have not played before, this means something. The occasional fact that the pro football teams might have met is only a small problem. They only faced each other once at the most in regular season play. A champion here means something.

Even in college sports, the playoffs mean something. A bowl game is a just reward for a season of hard work, but it can also mark the shattering of an image for a loser. Most football fans watched the Texas-Navy game in the Cotton Bowl. This game had meaning as the two were ranked 1 and 2 in the country. This rests with the schools. A bowl acceptance is not assential, but can be worthwhile.

Basketball has both the NCAA and the NIT. The former draws the best of the major schools and, while they hate to admit it, the NIT gets what is left. The former is the real determinant of a national champion. The latter rewards other good clubs.

The whole problem seems to lie with just two sports, Pro basketball and hockey. Again I ask, WHY????

Davis—NL batting champion the last two years—was second to Aaron with three times as many votes as third-place Dick Groat of the Cardinals and Roberto Clemente of the Pirates.

Fifty-three players cast votes for Camilo Pascual of the Twins as the AL's leading pitcher. The Yankees' Whitey Ford was a close second with 51 votes, while 28 players chose Jim Bouton, who was third in the voting. A third Yankee, Al Downing, tied for fourth place with Steve Barber of the Orioles.

Baseball Team To Sun And Practice In South

by JOHN GOODRICH

While most of the students on the campus are looking forward to a chance to relax and catch up on some of the reading and term papers, some 25 members of the student body will be performing a very pleasant task themselves. These are the members of the 1964 University of Massachusetts baseball team, who will launch their annual southern trip tomorrow. The team will be on the road for 10 days and will play eight games during that stretch, weather permitting.

Coach Lorden is anxious to get the team outside for some real work. The confines of the cage are not the best in which to conduct a baseball practice, but it at least provides a chance for the players to get the feel of the bat and work the kinks out of their throwing arms.

The first game for the Redmen will be Saturday against Michigan State at Camp Lejune, North Carolina. The positions for that game are tentatively set, but the present starters are being pressed by some of the other members of the squad. The catcher should be Ken Kamena, a junior letterman, but Ray Yando, a sophomore, is pressing him. First base is presently the domain of captain John Awdycki, but Peacock is working hard to unseat him. Senior Joe Apicella is presently at second, but Caisse is right behind him. Shortstop is occupied by Bill Crane with Jim Neary as the back up man. Third base has footballer Jim Kuczynski on top, but Cleary pressing him.

THE OUTFILELD HAS A STRONG CONTINGENT of three lettermen, but one has been pushed aside by a promising sophomore. Tony Simoni will hold down one position and Steve Wojnar another. Both of these men won their letters last year. Senior letterman Neil Harris has given way to Dennis Della Piana at the other slot. Nordberg and Stewart hold down the second positions now. Reserves Street and Smith will also be making the trip.

Six potential hurlers will be given a long look by Coach Lorden during the trip. The staff has to rank as inexperienced due to the loss of the two big guns, Dick Wilson and Lou Pia. Rod Corey figures to be the workhorse right now. He is the only pitcher with a great deal of varsity experience. Basketball cocaptain Mike Johnson will also see plenty of action this year. Rick Farrell and soph Ross Piken figure to give the other two plenty of rest. Jim Ritchie and strong armed Mike Brita will be

Connecticut Host For Clinic

STORRS, Conn.—The University of Connecticut's newest varsity coaches will lecture at the 19th Annual Connecticut Coaches Clinic, to be held at the University campus on August 18, 19, 20.

Basketball Coach Fred Shabel and Football Ciach Rick Forzano were announced by UConn Athletic Director J. O. Christian as lecturers for the clinic which is being so-sponsored by the University, the Connecticut High School Coaches Association and the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference.

Previousiy announced as a guest lecturer was Hugh (Duffy) Daugherty, head football coach at Michigan State.

Shabel became New England's most successful collegiate coach this past winter as he directed the UConns into the NCAA Eastern finals in his rookie year as a varsity coach. A graduate of Duke University in 1954, he was assistant basketball coach at his Alma Mater

Upland Institutes Trimester

Upland, Calif. (I.P.)—A Trimester plan, providing for a year-round education program at Upland College will begin next fall. The new calendar calls for three terms of 14 weeks in length: September 14 - December 18, January 5 - April 9, April 19 - July 30.

A REVISION OF THE CURRICULUM into larger block courses will require the student to take only three courses per term. The student will thus be able to concentrate his efforts instead of dividing his time among five to seven courses as the more traditional semester curriculum demands.

Nine trimesters (27 courses), that is three full years of classes, will meet the requirements for the Bachelor of Arts degree. Eighty per cent of the students on this campus responding to an opinion survey conducted by a Student-Faculty committee indicated that they would favor a year-round calendar and support it with their attendance at all three terms. The overriding concern of the students was the question of how best to meet the increased financial requirements of a third term during each of the three years.

TO ANSWER THIS CONCERN the college has revised

Lacross Team Prepares For First Encounter

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The University of Massachusetts lacrosse team, last year's New England champions, returns this year with a very strong offense supported by a good midfield group and good goal-tending. The team's big problem will be on defense where graduation took the Redmen's four top defensemen.

Coach Dick Garber now in his 10th season at UMass, has a strong, fast trio for his starting attack unit in Co-Capt. Steve Harrington, Fran Casey and Charlie Glew. Sophomores Fred Thompson, Bob Edmonston and Waldo Banks will fill in for the starting unit.

Co-Capt. Frank Infusino, Gordie Webb and Dick Brown will start at the midfield position with veterans Jim Mahoney, Al Morris and Steve Vengrow behind him. Also Sophs Dave Jarrett, Bill Houde, Charlie Avakian, Walt Gustavsen, Jim Goodwin, Jim Gaffee and Bob Kelley should se plenty of action.

On defense Hal Ryder and Don Rosatti both returning lettermen are joined by Joe Doktor, Ed Feeley, John Meilbye and Ed Toner.

Dick Baird is a returning starter in the goal. He's backed up by Sophs Bob Lawson and Tod Fiaherty.

In two scimmages this year the Redmen beat Nichols College 7-1 and the Connecticut Valley Lacrosse club 6-3. Tomorrow UMass plays Trinity in a scrimmage at 4:00 on the upper athletic field. During vacation the team plays seven exhibition games including encounters with Harvard, Army, Rutgers and Yale.

The first regular season game is April 8 at Wesleyan and the first home game is April 11 against Brown. The rest of the schedule includes: April 18, Bowdoin, home; April 22 at M.I.T.; April 25, Tufts, home; April 28, Holy Cross, home; April 30, Trinity, home; May 6 at Amherst; May 9, Middlebury, home; May 13, at New Hampshire; May 16 at W.P.I.

Varsity Trackmen Take Fourth In UConn Relays

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity indoor track team closed out its 1964 season last Saturday at the UConn Relays. The Redmen placed fourth in a field of 22 teams. Northeastern won with 45, then came Rhode Island (33½), Providence (26), UMass (25), and New Hampshire (23½).

BOB "DIGGER" BROUILLET paced the team with a second place finish in the 2 mile and a fine anchor leg in the distance medley relay that took third. Craig Erickson, Bob Pendleton and Tom Panke composed the relay team with Brouiliet.

The 2 mile relay team of Bob Pendelton, Bob Larson, Dave Sullivan and Bob Molvar took a third also. Pendelton was running his first race in a year and did a very creditable job. Bob should be a big help in the 440 and 880 this Spring. Craig Erickson ran a good double as he also competed on the mile relay team with Jim Collins, Jim Wrynn and Gene Colburn to take second. Wrynn also took a fourth in the mile.

BOB RAMSEY RAN A FINE RACE as he took a fourth in the 2 mile. John Mederios was fourth and Doug Sloane was fifth in the 60 yard dash. The Spring track season starts almost right after Easter vacation as the Redmen will take on New Hampshire in a dual meet at home on April 18.

Ballplayer Pick Yankees, Dodgers To Win Pennants

NEW YORK, March 26 — The Yankees and the Dodgers are picked as pennant winners for the second consecutive year in SPORT magazine's 12th annual pre-season poll of major-league baliplayers.

Mickey Mantle of the Yankees and Willie Mays of the Giants also are named in SPORT's current issue as the players' choices for Most Valuable Player in the American and National Leagues.

OF 190 VOTES FOR THE YANKEES, only 30 were not for first place and none were for lower than third. The Dodgers received 130 first-place ballots out of a total of 194 players. No one picked them to finish lower than fourth. The Twins, with 15 votes, were the only other AL team to gather first-place votes in double figures. In the NL, 33 players chose the Giants and 27 chose the Cardinals to win.

Mantle drew 75 MVP votes to 53 for Al Kaline of the Tigers. Nineteen others, including seven Yankees, got at least one MVP vote. Mays edged the Braves' Hank Aaron 57 to 55 for the NL MVP title. Sandy Koufax—MVP in 1963—gathered 25 votes and Dodger teammate Tommy Davis 12. Frank Howard and Jim Gilliam were other Dodgers among the 15 players who won MVP votes.

Civil Rights Drive Grows; UMass Students Go South

3 Students Jailed One Is Hospitalized In Williamston

It was rocky going for a number of members of the UMass community who participated in civil rights demonstrations in the small town of Williamston, North Carolina.

Three UMass students, Bradford Brayton, James Stevenson and Pat Winship spent varying lengths of time in the local Williamston lockup.

In addition to being arrested, Brayton was attacked as he walked alone down the town's main street one night. Jumped from behind by two men, Brayton was clubbed with a baseball bat and had acid thrown at him. He was hospitalized but not seriously injured.

Yesterday, he told a Collegian reporter that he has so "internalized" the philosophy of nonviolent action that even while being attacked he refused to strike back.

The attack on Brayton occurred while he was out on bail. He had been arrested Thursday evening at a sit-in demonstration at a local restaurant.

Stevenson, the President of the UMass Chapter of the Christian Association, Winship and four other people including two Amherst High School youths were arrested while singing songs on the steps of the County Courthouse. They were later released on bail.

Also participating in Williamston demonstrations were the Reverend Harold Cooper and his wife. Reverend Cooper is a chaplain at the University for those students who are members of the United Church of Christ.

Neither of the Coopers made it to jail, but Mrs. Cooper was spat upon by whites as she walked down a street in Williamston. The Negro man whom Mrs. Cooper was walking with was beaten as she looked on helplessly.

Collegian editor Jeff Davidow, in Williamston in the capacity of a reporter, was also attacked.

Voter Registration Goes Peacefully In Atlanta, Ga.

All was not violence and racial strife in the cities of the South during Easter vacation. Atlanta, Georgia, was the site of a peaceful campaign for Negro voter registration. Four UMass co-eds, under the joint sponsorship of the YWCA and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), spent their vacation doing door-to-door canvassing work in Negro neighborhoods of Atlanta.

The four women, Helen Symons '65, Sheila Cooper '65, Dani Ostrow '67, and Virginia Myers '65, were part of a group of almost a thousand who worked on the project. During the 6-day session, the girls stayed at predominately Negro Clark College along with 35 other students who came from as far away as Wisconsin.

The aim of the SCLC project was to get as many Negroes registered to vote as possible. Of the 150,000 eligible Negroes in Atlanta, only 50,000 are registered — leaving an important 100,000 without a voice in the government.

Necessary but exhausting work was done by door-to-door canvassers who worked both day and night to reach as many families as possible. They stressed the importance of voting and the weight each individual Negro vote would carry in breaking the infamous "white powers" of Atlanta. Generally, the students encountered little, if any, hostility on the part of the Negroes. They did, however, meet open fear. A 90 year old woman whom two students approached is a good example. This Negro was afraid that if she tried to register, "they'd just throw dirt in my face." The fact that for the first time in Georgia history there are 39 Negro registrars, helped to dispell her anxiety. In the poorer areas which were canvassed, people were found who could not read

University Accepts 4200 As Frosh; Incomplete Dorms A Possibility

by ELWIN McNAMARA

The University has accepted over 4200 high school graduates for admittance into the class of 1968, yet it appears possible that many of those who accept may have no place to sleep.

IN A BOSTON HERALD ARTICLE, President John W. Lederle was cited as saying that 4200 high school students had been accepted, with the feeling that about 2600 would actually come to UMass. However, feelings have been voiced that the increasing prestige of the University will result in more actually accepting.

A reason for apprehension is the dormitory complex still unfinished on Van Meter hill. These same dormitories were the subject of a furor last September when their incomplete state necessitated severaly crowded dormitory conditions. Harry Hugill, physical plant director, told the Collegian that "I don't know whether they will make it. The construction shcedule is very tight."

HOWEVER, an official statement issued from the President's office states that the dorms will be finished by September. It goes on to say that counselors have been appointed, furniture purchased, and funds allocated for the new residence halls.

A carpenter's strike is presently in effect at the new dorms. Mr. Hugill states that "this won't do us any good." It was not know whether the other unions on the job are honoring the strike by not working on the struck buildings.

PRESIDENT LEDERLE cited figures showing an approximate application increase of 58% over 1963. He further mentioned that about 8000 high schoolers will not be accepted due to a lack of space.

When asked whether the acceptance figure of 4200 was excessively high for vacancies numbering 2600, the President answered that the figure was more conservative than previous years, taking into account the prestige gained by successful College Bowl and football teams.

JFK Reading Room Set Up; Committee Asks Book Gifts

The Student John F. Kennedy Memorial Committee is now running a contribution booth in the Student Union Lobby for the John F. Kennedy Memorial Room.

All contributions received at this booth will be used to purchase books for the John F. Kennedy Memorial Reading Room. The Reading Room will be situated in the Library; it will contain a duplication of the White House Library, one of the most comprehensive collections of books by and about Americans.

The fund-raising drive will only run to May 1, so all members of the campus community are urged to contribute as soon as possible. The booth in the Student Union lobby will be open from 8 to 4:30 every day. A listing of all books for the Reading Room will be available at the booth. Donors may purchase any specific book in the listing, or they may make an unrestricted contribution. Copies of the books themselves may also be given. Any questions which a contributor may have will be answered by the student representative at the booth.

THATCHER GOES

Director of Housing Jack Wells has recently announced that with the beginning of the 1964 fall semester Thatcher Dormitory will be a men's residence hall.

Univ.PeaceSeminar To Study Problems Of Food & People

On March 25, the Peace Seminar heard professors Wickman and Morris of the Department of Economics discuss the national and international implications of disarmament. Professor Wickman spoke on the implications for the domestic economy. His thesis was that the economy is becoming less resiliant, and that this would create problems with any reallocation of productive facilities, for anything less then full reallocation would probably result in increased unemployment. He offered the following partial solutions, all of which entail some degree of government control:

1) increases in tax cuts
2) war on poverty
3) public health, education, welfare, conservation
4) public transportation
5) increased foreign aid.

This week, the fifth session will be held on Thursday, April 9, in Bartlett Lounge at 4:00 p.m. The principal speakers will be Professor Driver of the Department of Sociology, and Professor Johnson, of the Department of Agriculture. Professor Driver will speak on population and the effect that sparse and excessive population has on aggression and the possibility of peace. This will also include a discussion of the desirability and possibility of population control.

A general discussion will follow the formal presentation, and all are invited to attend and to participate.

Reflections On The South

A short trip to that other country which by an accident of geography and a twist of history is regarded as the Southern portion of the United States is, among other things, an enlightening experience.

Greater insight into the mood and attitude of both Southern races is the inevitable harvest that is reaped from the seeds of even a cursory and hurried study of the present situation.

Already, there has been much written on the actions of the Southern Negro, but there has been a paucity of written material dealing with the philosophy which underlies his movement.

The doctrine which guides him in his present battle is essentially a religious and moral one.

An increased understanding of the civil rights movement comes when one comprehends that its greatest impetus lies in the Christian church and its doctrine. The book of tactics being used by the Southern Negro in this, his most important battle, is the Gospel.

What passes in many churches as nothing more than a prelude to the collection is to the Southern Negro a philosophy of life.

When he speaks of all men being "one with Christ" he is putting the age-old religious statement of the brotherhood of man into a vivid and contemporary context.

Not often in history, and certainly not in this century, has such a battle been fought with a moral philosophy that is equal to or warrants the name of a Christian cause.

The actions of some Northern and Southern Negro churches, of some Northern white churches, and eventually and hopefully of some Southern white churches, portends far more and projects far beyond the current human rights struggle. After two thousand years Christianity is coming of age.

From Where I Sit

Our Year In Review

by AL McNAMARA

Today, as some may know, marks the last issue of the Collegian produced by the present slate of officers. I think that it would be apropos to wish the new officers the best of luck in what can sometimes be a very difficult and thankless job. It would probably also be in order if I were to reflect a littleupon some of the events of the past year that we have reported, andattempt to show how they have affected our lives.

There can be no doubt that the assasination of President Kennedy was the "biggest" story that we printed this year. However, at the time, the printing of the extra had an effect that few on campus knew. The shock which came with the death of the President struck the University hard. But its blow was lessened for us of the Collegian by our being able to immerse ourselves in the work needed to put an extra on the streets. Thus, in this case, the work which we sometimes dispised was a welcome relief from cruel reality.

Any discussion of this past year would not be complete without mention of the Yamasaki episode. Here we had what was felt, both by us and by many in the administration, to be a gross example of a state official fouling up a very important contract. Whether this was deliberate, a result of incompetance, or just an honest mistake, we shall probably never know for sure. But, there are those of us, including myself, who still feel that there was something wrong—people don't usually make those kind of mistakes.

I don't suppose that the above has given anyone an insight into what has made us do what we did in the way that we did it, and at this point, I'm not going to attempt any lengthy explanation, but, as far as I was concerned, news was of top importance. By this I mean real news, not just the daily bulletin filling many of our pages, but the real thing. We attempted to show the student the full picture; not just the good side of UMass that the News Office likes to have printed, but the shady side that gives the occupants of South College ulcers. This, I think, adds to the education a student receives. It shows that life is not always good, and that the nice guy with the pleasant manner may, in actuality, be stealing the University blind.

In short, I have attempted to treat the reader as an adult. Whether this approach has been successful or not, I do not know. I would greatly appreciate any comments that anyone might make.

From Buckingham Palace

Ed Note: This letter was received in reply to a letter of congratulations sent by the Collegian to Queen Elizabeth on the birth of her child.

To The Staff of the Massachusetts Collegian:

I am commanded by the Queen to thank you all for the good wishes which you have sent Her Majesty on the birth of her son.

The Queen desires me to tell you how touched she is by your kind message, and I am to express to you all Her Majesty's most sincere thanks.

Girls Of Thatcher Protest

To the Editor:

On behalf of the girls of Thatcher Dorm we would like to air the following comments:

1. Thatcher was one of the only two women's residence halls that had a "freeze" put on it during last year's General Room Choosing. Because very few women moved out, there was no room to accommodate women desiring to move in.

2. We have the least turnover of women. The majority of us who come here as freshmen remain for the four years. Because of this, we have been known with pride as an "upperclass" dorm.

3. We have a minority of girls who belong to sororities. We therefore invest a great deal of time and money into our rooms since the dorm becomes our HOME.

4. There is an undefined unity which is shared by members of the four classes alike. This is aided by the fact that we are a small dorm.

5. Although this was once a men's dormitory, there are other women's residence halls which are better equipped for conversion—having also once been men's dormitories. Also, a burglar alarm system has been installed at the side doors so no one can enter or leave by these doors after curfew. Very useful in a men's dorm with no curfew!

6. In past years an endeavor at establishing a close relationship among the counselors and students in each dorm has been attempted. Here in Thatcher this has been overwhelmingly successful.

7. One of the more attractive aspects of the dorm is its age. Although it is sometimes referred to as "dark and gloomy," we find it relaxing and more homey than the newer residence halls.

This has been a sincere although incomplete attempt at expressing our feelings for this dorm. It is necessarily incomplete because most of our sentiments are felt rather than expressed.

Make It Lewis Not Thatcher

To the Editor:

Monday night in Thatcher's rec room Dean Curtis, Mr. Welles, Head of the Housing Office, and Miss Jan Clement, an assistant in the Housing Office, came to discuss the plight of some 152 residents — 125 discounting graduating seniors.

On behalf of many residents in my constituency, I feel I must register my protest, which has been voiced by so many other residents since we found out that Thatcher was to be relinquished to the male students in the fall.

As Miss Curtis explained it, Dean Field notified her last week that within 24 hours he had to have the name of a girls' dorm for the male students' use in September. After consultation with as many of her colleagues as possible in the short time available, Miss Curtis decided that Thatcher was the easiest dorm to make the change.

I feel that in the short time the administration had to make this very important decision some significant facts were overlooked.

First of all, the administration feels that Brooks, which would seem to be the logical choice for conversion back to male living quarters, is not a good choice for they have set as their goal the eventual mixing of both quads. I concede that for this reason and others, Brooks may not be the best choice.

Miss Curtis then proceeded to say that the choice had to be between Thatcher and Lewis. With due regard for all the girls who I know have enjoyed their time spent living in Lewis, I feel Lewis would be a much more reasonable choice. Statistics alone show that fewer girls would be affected. It is obvious that the class that feels this switch the most is the present junior class who number 34 in Thatcher and only 23 in Lewis. The other class most affected is the present sophomore class who number 47 in Thatcher and only 39 in Lewis. Here you have only 62 of next year's juniors and seniors having to be ousted from Lewis as opposed to 81 from Thatcher.

The present freshmen who would be the least likely to object to the move number only 41 in Thatcher as opposed to 55 in Lewis. All in all Thatcher would have to relocate 125 girls whereas Lewis would only have to relocate 117.

Much more could be said in favor of switching to Lewis. Lewis already has plumbing to accommodate male students. Lewis has been painted this year, but I think it is about time the guys get a break and get a painted dorm for which they don't have to pay extra (as in Brett and Gorman).

Another reason given for this unfortunate decision is the fact that due to illness our Head of Residence will not be returning. Is it easier to relocate one housemother or 125 girls!

For all these reasons I feel that Lewis instead of Thatcher should be considered. I realize that with my strong attachment to Thatcher my convictions cannot be completely objective, but the facts are objective. The facts point to Lewis. The decision that has been made is not irrevocable.

The Beer's Family

Psongs For Psaltery

by ANN BAXTER

On Wednesday, March 25 at 8 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom, the Beers Family—Bob, Evelyn, and Martha—gave a concert. And that is an understatement. It might be more accurate to say that the Beers family presented to a delighted (and sizeable) audience a solid evening of solid entertainment. Seasoned professionals, but wonderfully informal, the trio swept the audience with them back to that old Colonial parlor, to the hoedowns, the ballads, the "cowsongs" of 100-plus years back.

The songs were all tremendous. The added punch which made this the most enjoyable concert this reviewer has ever seen was the variety—and the instrumentation. Foremost among the array of novel instruments was the psaltery, a stringed instrument somewhat akin to the harpsichord or the autoharp, whose ancestors date back to Biblical times. Bob Beers, needless to say, did an excellent job with it. More conventional instruments included a 'banjo, guitar, two fiddles (with rattlesnake rattles inside—any oldtime fiddler worth his salt will tell you they make the fiddle sound better) and a small drum. On the unusual side were fiddlesticks (they really do exist!) and a straw—not the drinking variety, more like a very thick broomstraw. Both are rhythm instruments, the former used to hit the strings of the fiddle being played, the latter used to strike against just about anything—the psaltery, the spare fiddle, somebody's head, etc.

Another feature was the set of dolls known to Revolutionary times as the "Yankee Doodle Dolls." ("Privately," says Bob, "we call them the Bubbies.") Made of wood, with loose joints, the pair was made to do some precision dancing on top of a thin board which Evelyne hit with her fist.

The evening was chock full of instrumental and vocal surprises. Evelyne and Martha both have extremely pleasing soprano voices, while Bob sings in a husky baritone. One very well-received number was "Lord Arling," sung by Evelyne and accompanied by Bob on the psaltery, and presented with all the passion, anger and pathos that the theme affords. Another good song was "Spade the Flow," which featured the straw-playing. Typical of the many humorous "rousers" was "The High Wind That Blew The Low Post Down."

The voices, the variety, the humor, the stories, and the timing were all good; the entire evening was unforgettable.

Explanation To Freshmen

Letter to the Class of 1967:

Having decided not to run for re-election as Vice-President of the Class of 1967, I feel that I should state my reasons so that my classmates who elected me last fall will not think that I am running out on them. I have done my best to fill a responsible office, and hope that I have succeeded.

I am now living off campus, with no telephone, compounding the difficulty of keeping in touch with the other officers and Executive Council members. This could lead to misunderstanding in our socially busy Sophomore year. Most important, I am now engaged, and will be married at the end of my Sophomore year, relinquishing the office then; I feel it only fair to let your new Vice-President have a year to learn the ropes before having to delve into the intricacies of planning the Winter Carnival in our Junior year.

Elections will be upon us this month: KNOW the candidate you want to vote for—ask questions; only through active competition will the best interests of our class be furthered.

I wish to thank all those who gave me this opportunity to serve the largest Freshman Class at the University, and also two people in particular who brought order out of the chaos of last fall: Mr. Watts and Miss Mary Alden, both of the R.S.O. office; words cannot express the gratitude which I, and my fellow officers, feel for their invaluable assistance and proddings.

Donald P. Hawkes
Vice-President, Class of '67

More On Thatcher

To the Editor:

I have been so upset since I heard that Thatcher House will become a men's dorm. As a foreign student, I would like to tell you what a wonderful time I have in Thatcher. When I first came here last September, I felt very sorry to be this far away from home, which is in Taiwan, China. Yet, the housemother, and all the kids, and Thatcher House itself have given me such a home feeling that releases me from homesickness. I thought I might live here for the coming years. Now, it seems to be impossible. Still, I sincerely hope that Thatcher will be a girl's dorm for the next year. This is not only my hope, but also the other girls! Will you take this into consideration and do something for us? We, especially I, will feel grateful to you.

Can you avoid living in "Jamsville"?

It won't be easy. By 1980 most Americans will live in 40 large metropolitan areas—each with more than a million population. To keep your community from becoming a "Jamsville" will take people with ideas — ideas that can help cities move more traffic swiftly, safely and economically.

Some of the ideas come from the men and women of General Electric who, in effect, form a "Progress Corps."

In major cities, they're helping to develop balanced transportation built around rapid rail-transit systems . . . and they're providing advanced equipment to power and control the trains. They're also developing a TV monitoring system that enables a single engineer to control miles of auto traffic . . . a jet engine that speeds commuters in a hydrofoil ship over the waves . . . and another jet engine to lift travelers over traffic via turbocopter at 150 mph.

Traffic is only one of many problems General Electric people are working on. Their numerous projects, in this country and around the world, demand a variety of talents: engineering, finance, marketing, law, physics and many others.

If you'd like to join the "Progress Corps" after graduation, talk to your placement director. He can help qualified young people begin their careers at General Electric.

Mudbath Has Been Diluted

by SHERRY SPEAR

The campus mudbath has been diluted—the trees are sprouting the green stuff while the monsoons return along with scrumptious spring. Yes, spring is spranging on the UMass campus and a seasonal skip through the record libe has found "Musicale" programming Coplands "Appalachian Spring" and Strauss's "Voices of Spring" tonight at 8 P.M.

SPEAR HEARS: Louis Armstrong's disc of the title song is climbing the survey charts and Carol Channing has a Broadway hit on her hands with "Hello Dolly". This Sunday, Gee Nason will be playing the original cast album on "Showcase'". Requests are yours by dialing the MUA Musical Madline of 545-2425 off campus and 2425 dorm.

Station members, it's a lovely gavel. Ron Engel the new station manager is planning to use it tonight. Why don't you drop in tonight at 7:30 to hear its mellowed tones?

"Around the World" it's all in the family as hostess Mary Louise Apelian has her sister as guest. Peggy, who recently arrived from Cairo, Egypt will give you an idea of the latest songs from her niche of the Nile.

Cross examine your favorite campus cop as Colonel Marchant faces the mikes on "Interaction" this Sunday. Hostess Pat Barnett and George Michaels will discuss the new fire regulations in the dormitories, closed doors in the dorms and any questions, complaints or laudits you ask on the open line 2425. (Sunday, 7 P.M.)

A modest Bill First, a self-labeled "authority" has declared his new Wednesday folk session of "Night Shift" (12-2 A.M.) will be the "greatest show on campus". That's Bill First, modesty man of the month at WMUA.

1. I've come across a fascinating fact about the population.

Do tell.

2. There are more females than males in the U.S.A.

Where are they all hiding?

3. If you really want to find out what's going on with the population you should go see The Demograph.

The who?

4. The Demograph—it's this gigantic population counter that Equitable put up at the World's Fair.

It tells you where the girls are?

5. It gives you the up-to-the-minute story of the population explosion.

I've noticed more people around lately.

6. Tells you how many babies are being born, how fast the population is growing. Stuff like that.

Can it explain how come, if there are more females than males, I have so much trouble meeting them?

History Department Conference Hosts 100 High School Teachers

In an effort to establish closer working relationships with high schools in the Commonwealth, the history department at the University of Massachusetts will hold a day-long conference for 100 high school history and social science teachers on Friday, April 10, to discuss mutual areas of interest.

According to Dr. Howard H. Quint, head of the University's department of history, the conference is a starting point in a "mutual investigation to consider areas of most effective cooperation."

THE UNIVERSITY IS particularly concerned with the improvement of standards for teachers of social studies in Massachusetts. Discussion of this problem will center on the University's preparation of students to become social studies teachers, and whether or not the University's general liberal arts and history requirements give adequate preparation to teach in these fields.

The question of when a person should take graduate training—immediately after completing B.A. requirements or after having worked as a teacher—will be discussed. The best method of supplying high schools with top personnel will also be explored.

The results of the University's questionnaire on what is currently being taught in the high schools, the number of hours devoted to subjects, and methods of teaching and giving examinations will be presented to the group and then discussed.

Finally, the participants will explore various programs of continuing education that the University could offer to high school social studies teachers, and the possibility of the University helping to develop new curricula and instructional programs.

THE CONFERENCE, to begin at 10:30 a.m. and end at 4 p.m., will be devoted almost entirely to small discussion groups. Following the luncheon, Dr. Norman MacKenzie, professor of political science at Williams College, will address the conference participants.

Arabian Coffee In Durfee Conservatory

How many of these questions can you answer?

1—Where is Durfee Conservatory?

2—Where can you find the Bird of Paradise flower?

3—Where besides the Hatch can you find Arabian coffee?

4—Where can you find bananas and orchids growing on campus?

This quiz has been designed to attract your attention to an intriguing but little known building on campus: Durfee Conservatory. It is the greenhouse located immediately across from the Infirmary and the Landscape Architecture Building, and the old white Conservation Building.

Here is a free opportunity to spend a few minutes wandering through a tropical garden with a coffee tree, bananas hanging down, scented geraniums, beautiful orchids, Hawaian bird of paradise plants, and numerous other sights that will combine to give the most book wearied mind a pleasant portion of refreshment.

Why not make a plan to visit Durfee Conservatory—the hours are 8 A.M. to 12 noon and 1 P.M. to 5 P.M., Monday through Friday. This Saturday, April 11, there will be a special open house from 10 A.M. until 3 P.M. When you come please use the door opposite the Infirmary or the door opposite the other greenhouses.

Tau Beta Pi Holds 15th Initiation

The Tau Beta Pi Association, a national engineering honor society which has been established at the University since January, 1956, will hold its 15th initiation of new members this week. This Association is for the engineer what the Phi Beta Kappa is to others in liberal arts. It's purpose is ". . . to mark in a fitting manner those who have conferred honor upon their Alma Mater by distinguished scholarship . . ., and to foster a spirit of liberal culture in the engineering colleges of America."

Tau Beta Pi will accept sixteen new members this semester. As part of initiation exercises, pledges will be seen on campus wearing a large, highly-polished bronze emblem known as a "Bent." The Bent is hand polished by pledges as part of their pledge duties and must pass a rigid inspection. Its flawless, untarnished finish symbolizes the exemplary character of all those who wear it.

Musigals Swing Out With Tryouts

The Musigals, now in its fourth year as an organized group at the University, is fast becoming one of the most popular vocal groups on campus. Since their formation in 1961, the Musigals have developed a style all their own, with an easy swing that injects a special flair into anything from barbershop to modern jazz.

THE GROUP, directed by Debbie Lindberg, is composed of 16 girls from all classes. The Musigals have delighted audiences ranging from business groups to other college campuses. Standard appearances each year include Winter Carnival and the Intercollegiate Sing at which vocal groups from many colleges are invited to participate. In the spring of last year, the girls competed in the National Intercollegiate Music Competition, held at Lycoming College in Williamsburg, Penn., where they captured second place. Added to their success is an outstanding LP recording which displays the talents of this group in 11 of their favorite tunes.

Each year, Musigals holds tryouts for each of the four parts and encourages all girls who enjoy singing and are interested in joining to audition. This year, tryouts will be held for 1st and 2nd. sopranos on April 14th and 1st and 2nd altos on April 15th. If you like an easy rhythm in a swinging style, why not audition and "Swing Out" with the Musigals in '64.

School Of Ed. Hosts 200 Teachers

The University of Massachusetts School of Education will be the host for 200 Bay State science teachers on Saturday, April 11, in the first of what is planned as an annual series of Science Education Conferences.

Donald E. Hall, Robert King, and Verne Thelen of the School of Education, co-directors of the conference, said the meeting was initiated because of the statewide interest shown in mathematics education conferences sponsored by UMass over the last three years.

According to the organizers, the conference will provide teachers with an opportunity to become acquainted with the latest developments in elementary and secondary school science instruction.

GUEST SPEAKERS include Dr. Pearl Nelson, a specialist in elementary school science at Boston University; Erwin Hoffart of Educational Services, Inc.; and William Meadows, coordinator of science instruction at Park School in Brookline.

Dr. Nelson will speak on "What's New in Elementary School Science." Dr. Nelson's background ranges from consultantships in education workshops to teaching as far away as the University of Alaska. Her articles appear regularly in major professional journals.

Mr. Meadows will teach a demonstration fourth-grade science class in the School of Education's special observation classroom.

Mr. Hoffart, a high school physics teacher before doing research with the Physical Science Study Committee, will speak on "The PSSC Junior High School Program."

WHAT'S NEW IN THE APRIL ATLANTIC?

"Must the Colleges Police Sex?": John T. Rule, former Dean at M.I.T., in a provocative article, says "To deny a student the right to have a girl in his room is to punish him for what he might do with her".

"U.S.A. Revisited": John Dos Passos takes a new, kaleidoscopic view of our country — its turnpikes, motels, huge publicity parties, and some of the men who have formed the sinews of our society.

Phoebe-Lou Adams: "A Rough Map of Greece": The first of a new series on traveling in Greece alone by car. Real caviar.

Gerard Piel: "Abundance and the Future of Man": American surpluses can be converted into dynamic benefits for India, for other developing nations in the free world, and for the American economy.

Boston Center For Folk Music

by DICK DOHERTY and DAVE GRITELSOHN

PERHAPS ONE OF THE most underrated centers of good, honest folk music is the greater Boston area. It is here that many of this country's outstanding artists received their starts. Such people as Joan Baez, Jackie Washington, and Eric von Schmidt are all alumnae of the "Harvard Square set."

Because many casual visitors to Boston may not be aware of the several coffee houses and night spots that do feature folk music, we would like to take this opportunity to mention a few of those we consider to be worthwhile.

Most outstanding is the Club 47, in Harvard Square. Each weeknight, one of the "regulars" performs. To mention just two: Monday evening's program features Jackie Washington, and Tom Rush appears each Tuesday. On weekends, featured artists include such well-known New York performers as John Hammond and Dave von Ronk. For those of you who enjoy listening, or participating in hoots, the '47 sponsors an amateur evening each Sunday.

An auditorium rather than a coffee house, Donelly's offers folk concerts that run the gambit from Baez to the Kingston Trio. Although tickets are a bit expensive, these performances feature the finest artists in the country.

In addition to these two, we would also recommend the Unicorn, on Newbury Street; the Outside In, on Brookline Avenue; Someplace Else, Joy Street; the King's Rook in Ipswich, Mass.

NEW BAGELS, OLD BLARNEY: This Saturday evening will find Odetta at Smith College. The concert should prove to be one of the finest in the western Mass. area this year. Those interested should check the local newspapers for information concerning tickets, etc.

Also appearing at Smith in the near future will be the Chad Mitchell Trio, who will present a program on April 15th. Many of you will remember their performance at our own Winter Carnival last year, and the wonderful response they received. Again, check your newspapers for information.

THE VENACULAR

"We Have The Op.Cit."

by INEZ BRAND

They were playing your tune the other night at St. John's University, Minn., if you're slowly cracking up from campus crush. It seems somebody was swinging with an out-of-tune zither and a concertina to the light of the full moon. Ear witnesses to this Walpurges Night swear they were hearing a sackbutt, a dulcimer and a tuba. A freshman (it's always a freshman) bounced out of bed at the sound which he thought was an air raid siren. He subsequently conducted his whole floor to the shelter area in the basement, where he sandbagged the door and kept everyone until morning singing "Tenting Tonight." He was described as "maintaining admirable composure the whole time the attack was going on."

A journalism student, eager to read everything on his course list, asked the college librarian if she had a book called "The Ibid." "No," replied the librarian, "but we have the Op. Cit." (If you don't get the joke, ask a future librarian.)

Did you know that centuries ago, English criminals could escape hanging by proving that they could read? (Therefore no English criminals were hung who had read the Vernacular. Doesn't that make you feel elite?) Moreover, if a man could read the "neck verse"—the first verse of Psalm LI, beginning "Have mercy upon me, O God"—the court ruled that he was a clergyman and let him go with a slight punishment.

I've been enlightening myself by reading the Village Voice, which has oodles of interesting ads. There is one for "New Ideas in Shelves—Jack's Shelf Shop. Ask about our 99 cent shelf." Girls, is that a bargain or is that a bargain! And here is a memo to adventurous intellectuals: "Most Americans have become Akwizombs (Acquisative Zombies) inhabiting an enchanted bubble. Non - Akwizombs sought for serious revolt." PoP.

Buddy Morrow, Olympics Highlight Greek Week

Fraternities and sororities at the University of Massachusetts have six jam-packed days of activities scheduled to celebrate the annual Greek Week, starting tomorrow night.

Festivities will start Tuesday evening with the annual dinner meeting of the Fraternity Manager Association's board of directors.

On Wednesday, the campus sorority houses will hold exchange dinners in which each sorority invites girls from all the other sororities to dinner.

The Greek Banquet, a fixture of the annual week-long celebration, will be held Thursday evening at the Wiggins Tavern in Northampton. Prof. Leland Varley will be the main speaker.

Buddy Morrow and his orchestra will be on stage Friday evening at the Student Union ballroom for the Greek Ball. During intermission the queen of this year's Greek Week will be crowned.

Activities will move outdoors on Saturday. Greek Olympics will be held in the morning, starting at 10:30 on Alumni field. After a 1 p.m. procession, chariot races will get under way on Ellis Drive.

The week will wind up Sunday afternoon when the Four Preps, an outstanding singing group, give a concert at 2 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.

New Officers Elected For Roisters

In a recent election Roister Doisters, the campus drama organization, chose its Executive Board for 1964-65. Three of this year's officers were re-elected:

Sheila Ferrini Business Manager

New officers elected were Christina Ryan, Secretary, and Patricia Long, Publicity Director. The new Executive Board will begin later this year to consider one-act plays for next winter's program.

Roister Doister members who have plays to suggest are urged to contact members of the Executive Board.

Also on the agenda of the meeting was the choice of a new faculty advisor. Mrs. Hogan of the English Department was chosen by the Roister Doisters to replace the late Albert Madiera, former faculty advisor.

UM Instructor Receives Grant In Mathematics

"Free products in abstract groups" will be the subject investigated by Dr. Ronald A. McHaffey, assistant professor of mathematics during this summer.

Dr. McHaffey is one of the ten instructors who received $1,000 fellowships from the University for research in their fields for eight weeks this summer.

Dr. McHaffey will conduct his research at the University of Wisconsin where he will be concerned with a fairly new concept in the field of abstract algebra.

The research program is being administered by the University Research Council and is designed to help faculty members working in areas not normally supported by outside research grants.

The Committee on Faculty Growth Grants considered evaluations of teaching ability in choosing the ten recipients, as well as an active investigation in research which will enrich their teaching and knowledge.

Dr. McHaffey graduated from Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute where he received his B.Ss. He went on to Iowa State College where he got his M.Sc., and received his Ph.D. at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

He has taught in the Mathematics Department at the University for three years, and lives in Amherst with his wife and two children.

A strong Esat Carolina College team edged the Redmen, 3-1, at Greenville, N.C. on Wednesday. Coach Lorden used most of his sophs, who combined with several veterans to play an outstanding game. Johnson pitched seven strong innings allowing seven hits and only one walk and Ritchie retired the side in order in the eighth. The Redmen scored their only run when soph John Peacock was hit by a pitch, moved to third on soph Ray Yando's double and scored on Apicella's line-drive single to left.

After a rain-out at Fort Eustis, Va. on Thursday the Redmen won a 7-3 decision from Fort Lee, Va. Friday. Piken retired the first 12 batters in succession without a ball getting out of the infield. He surrendered a home run in the bottom of the fifth then mowed down the next three batters. Ross allowed another run in the sixth and Rod Corey hurled the final three innings. Piken struck out 10 in six innings.

Della Piana paced the Redmen at bat with three singles and a 360-foot home run for a perfect day. Awdycki hit a 390-foot, two-run homer and also singled. The UMass home runs came on successive pitche sin the top of the fourth.

Johnson's second straight good the finale at Loyola. Big Mike overpowered the Baltimorites, who got nothing resembling a base hit until Burchell's line drive in the ninth. UMass meanwith Awdycki slamming a twowhile pounded out nine hits run homer and a single while Wojnar and Kuczynski also got two hits apiece.

or write. These were recommended to special citizenship schools which SCLC has formed for that purpose.

The students worked in teams of two; a Negro and a white when possible. The group, armed with leaflets, canvass sheets, and information, invaded housing developments, apartments, and city buses. SCLC directors concentrated their efforts on two large areas where voter registration had been quite low. Free transportation and free babysitting were offered to aid people in getting to the registration points. Sound trucks cruised in the neighborhoods blaring out time and place information. Radio stations gave free air time to publicize the project.

While part of the students were canvassing, the others were working in the SCLC office. The group of 40 was not permitted to demonstrate because of lack of bail funds. Although some white hostility was encountered, there were no incidents of violence. The police did, however, break up the inter-racial group while they were having a farewell gathering. The party took place in a middle class white area and the neighbors apparently called the police on the pretext that the group was noisy. The students drove away just as the police paddy wagon approached.

Lambda Chi Alpha CampusChampions

In their division of I.F.C. competition, Lambda Chi suffered but one loss to a strong TKE five. However, Kappa Sigma edged TKE to form a three-way tie for first place in this division. In the resulting playoffs TKE reversed their defeat by sliding by Kappa Sigma while Lambda Chi drew a by. Opportunely, Lambda Chi avenged their only loss by defeating TKE for the championship of this division, while in the hotly contested finals of I.F.C. competition, Lambda Chi avenged themselves on Sig Ep for their defeat in last year's finals — swamping the spunky five by twenty points.

Thus, as I.F.C. champs, Lambda Chi entered the playoffs for the campus championship. They first met the dorm champs, Butterfield, whom they trounced, winning by twenty points. In the contest for the campus championship between Lambda Chi and the P.E. Majors, this year's Independent champs, both teams went all out. Paced by Ferranti and Garsys in the scoring department, Lambda Chi, with Fohlin and Rana controlling the boards and Varin repeatedly stealing the ball, went on to win 43 to 31 over the hustling team of Swanson, Smith, Schroeder, Dominico, and DeRose.

All YanCon Basketball Selected By N.E. Coaches

KINGSTON—Toby Kimball of Connecticut and Steve Chubin of Rhode Island are unanimous choices for the all-Yankee Conference basketball team, it was announced today. The selections were made by the coaches at the six New England state universities.

For both Kimball and Chubin, whose teams battled to an unprecedented tie for the title, it was a repeat performance as both were named to the team last season. Both are juniors.

Joining them on the first club are PETE BERNARD, scrappy back court man from Massachusetts; Jim Rich of New Hampshire, the conference scoring champion, and Dennis McGovern from Rhode Island, who was runnerup to Rich in the scoring race.

THE SECOND TEAM comprises Frank Nightingale of Rhode Island, John Gillette of Maine, Nick Mandravelis of New Hampshire, Dom Perno of Connecticut and CHARLIE O'-ROURKE and RODGER TWITCHELL of Massachusetts. Twitchell, an all-conference performer for two years, was bothered by injuries most of the season and had to be content with a tie with teammate O'-Rourke for the fifth spot.

Honorable mention went to Dave Strassburg and Layne Higgs of Vermont, Ron Rothstein of Rhode Island and Dave Svendsen of Maine.

Gymnastics Club Reorganizes As Result Of Keen Interest

On Thursday evening, April 9th, at 6:30 p.m., there will be a meeting of all persons interested in participating in the re-organization of the University of Massachusetts Gymnastic Club. The meeting will take place in room 249 of the Boyden Physical Education Building, and the Auxiliary Gymnasium will be available for use after the meeting. The meeting is open to all students and faculty of the University of Massachusetts and the Stockbridge School of Agriculture.

THE GYMNASTIC CLUB WAS ORGANIZED ORIGINALLY IN 1958 with the purpose of "the promotion and advancement of gymnastics," and was active until about 1961 giving exhibitions and participating in meets throughout the Northeastern United States. In 1959 the club attended the Nation Gymnastic Clinic in Sarasota Florida during the Christmas Vacation. With the formation of a varsity team the club became inactive.

In recent years, there has been a steady call on the part of schools and clubs for clinics and demonstrations of gymnastics. One of the purposes of the club would be to provide such demonstrations. Any proceeds from these demonstrations could be used for the members benefit, for example, defraying the cost of travel and entry to such events as the National Gymnastic Clinic or the national gymnastic championships.

WITH THE INCREASE IN GYMNASTIC PARTICIPATION by the high schools in Massachusetts, there are many students with skills and interest who do not have the time for or interest in varsity participation. Here is an opportunity to use and improve those skills whether they be in tumbling, triple balancing or trampolining. The club is open to girls as well as boys, so come on out to the meeting on Thursday. Boyden Building, Room 249, 6:30!

Lacrosse Team Returns North

The University of Massachusetts opened its 1964 varsity lacrosse schedule with a round of seven exhibition games during the annual Spring vacation period.

The Redmen open their regular-season slate April 8 at Wesleyan.

The Redmen figure to be stronger offensively this year but face a major rebuilding task in the defensive unit. This will make it difficult to approach last year's 12-2 mark. The top four defensemen graduated and there are no seniors among the current crop. Hal Ryder (Saugus) and Don Rosati (Springfield) won their letters last Spring but neither was a regular. They are joined by junior Joe Doyle (Worcester), and sophs Ed Toner (Lynn), Joe Doktor (Cushman), John Meilbye (Nantucket), Ed Feeley (Ashland), Dave Wanless (Lexington), and Brad Stokes (Somerville) in a wide-open battle for the three starting berths.

The real strength of the team lies in the attack unit led by Co-Capt. Steve Harrington (Milford). Harrington has netted 31 goals and 21 assists in two seasons and appears headed for his best year. He will team up with seniors Charlie Glew (Framingham) and Fran Casey (Saxonville) in what should be a swift, powerful trio.

Letterman Dick Baird (Bedford) returns to the nets to give UM capable goal-tending. The Midfield group is smaller physically than in 1963 but features better stickhandling and appears to be better in overall ability. Co-Capt. Frank Infusino (Hull), senior Gordie Webb (Atkinson, N.H.) and junior Dick Brown (Melrose) will probably be the starting unit.

Baseball Team Returns After Successful Swing

by JOHN GOODRICH

Coach Earl Lorden's Redmen baseball team completed a successful Southern trip last Saturday by whipping Loyola College of Baltimore, 8-0, to finish the week with a 3-4 record. Righthander Mike Johnson, 6'7" senior, pitched a one-hitter striking out seven while walking only two. Johnson missed his no-hit bid when Loyola's Ed Burchell hit a line-drive single down the right field line with one out in the bottom of the ninth.

Statistics for the trip show that junior rightfielder Steve Wojnar paced the team with a .389 average. Wojnar had seven hits in 18 at bats. Soph centerfielder Dennis Della Piana had eight hits in 21 at bats for a .381 mark. Dennis included a double, triple and home run with five runs batted in among his totals.

Soph outfielder Al Nordberg hit .364 with four hits in 11 trips. Capt. John wAdycki was the only other .300 hitter with a .318 mark. The senior first baseman notched seven for 22 which included two home runs, a triple and six rbi's.

The Redmen opened the trip on Saturday, March 28 by facing a potent Michigan State team in a morning game. The Spartans had already won five straight games while the Redmen were making their initial outdoor appearance. Senior righty Rod Corey allowed seven runs in the first inning as Michigan State combined three Redmen errors with a grand slam home run by catcher Bruce Look. After the shaky first the Redmen played decent baseball, but dropped a 12-2 decision. Soph lefty Ross Piken surrendered a two-run homer in the fourth before junior Jim Ritchie finished up with four well-pitched innings. Infielders Joe Apicella and Jim Kuczynski got two hits apiece for the Redmen.

Hard hitting junior STEVE WOJNAR appears to have regained form which made him top prospect for Redman berth.

In the afternoon game against Camp Lejeune Coach Lorden used an almost all-soph team which lost 6-1. Mike Johnson worked four innings and allowed three runs, Rick Farrell gave three runs in three innings and lefty Mike Brita plitched one inning, striking out the side. Brita also blasted a 335-foot home run in the top of the ninth. Dick Stewart and Nordberg got two hits apiece.

The Redmen broke into the win column on Monday by twice coming from behind to top Camp Lejeune, 10-7. The Marines jumped on starter Awdycki for three runs in the first inning. The Redmen rallied for two runs in the fourth and four in the fifth while the Marines scored one in the fourth and three in the sixth, all against Piken. UMass broke loose in the top of the eighth fo rfour runs with the big plays being a well-executed suicide squeeze bunt by Apicella and a two-run single by Della Piana. Della Piana led the Redmen with a triple and two singles while Awdycki hit a triple and single. Johnson got the victory with three scoreless innings although he issued seven walks.

The final game at Lejeune saw Marine righty Harvey Oxendine baffle the Redmen with a 9-0, five-hit shutout. Brita, Covey, Farrell and Tony Simone pitched for UMass. The Redmen ran out of pitchers when Farrell was blasted for four runs in the sixth and outfielder Simone came to the rescue with two and two-thirds innings of good

Intramural Wrestling

The final round of the UMass Intramural Wrestling tournament will be held on Thursday, April the 9th. The matches will begin at 7:00 p.m. and will work from the lower weights through to the unlimited class. The final round of the tournament will be held in the auxilliary gym and the public is invited to witness the outcome.

Over fifty boys have entered this tournament in hopes of winning a trophy and now the field has been cut down to a mere handful. By Thursday, the field will have been cut down to eighteen as all of the semi-final matches will have been completed. Among these select few are several boys either defending the titles that they won last year or returning to try to win their

Stockbridge Riflemen Outshoot Holy Cross

Returning to campus early for a shooting date with the Holy Cross Freshmen, the Stockbridge Rifle Team closed out its match schedule on Saturday with a shoulder-to-shoulder win over the Crusaders from Worcester. Hal Anderson posted a score of 274 to start the match off and spark the Stockbridge team in its 55 point margin of victory. Holy Cross had a 272 fired by team captain Bill Riemer to brighten its day, but lack of range facilities for the greater part of the season (the Holy Cross campus is also torn up with redevelopment) was reflected by the low team total of 1297.

Dodger's Koufax Pictures Thirty Wins Per Season

NEW YORK—Sandy Koufax says he could have won 30 games last season instead of 25 if he hadn't been relieved in some close, low-scoring games.

..ACCORDING TO KOUFAX, "I go 14 innings 1-1, I go 11 innings 1-1, I go nine innings 0-0. I pitched only two real bad ballgames all year. If I'd been left in longer, I could have won more. But I could have lost more, too. The ballclub could have lost more, which is more important. I don't want to be relieved, but if I haven't got it and you're going to bring in a Perranoski, you're not going to embarrass me."

About working on four-day rotation, Koufax says, "... it's what you're conditioned to. You can condition your body to different things. Everyone's different. I could pitch every other day, I think."

In discussing the tricks pitchers use, Koufax explains his attitude candidly: "I think pitchers have been trying to get away with anything they can for as long as baseball's been played. And I don't think you'll ever stop it as long as the pitcher and only the pitcher, no one else, has 'won' or 'lost' after his name. As far as the pitcher's concerned then, all that counts is not how you play the game, but the winning or losing of it."

Asked about Whitey Ford's statement that there is a "pitchers' union," Koufax answers: "That's true. Pitchers sort of stick together. If they're getting a guy out, they tell you how. If our ballclub is not getting somebody out, I'll walk up to a guy on another club and ask him how he's been pitching to him and if I find out he's doing something different, I'll try it."

Koufax considers the pitcher to be at an advantage: "We are in a time when a whole generation of top young pitchers has matured all at once. Years from now, we may get into another cycle of sluggers. But there is no question but what the pitcher starts off with an initial edge. It boils down to this: nothing is going to happen until I throw the ball. And I am going to get the best hitters out two times out of three."

On the subject of knockdown pitches, Leon Wagner was asked by an interviewer whether he thought Negroes got knocked down more than whites: "There was a time I thought that. I know I talk to Aaron and Mays and Robinson and they seem to think the colored ballplayers go down more.

To which Koufax replies: "Hold on now. The reasons those guys get knocked down it not that they're Negroes, it's

by DON JOHNSON

The Forensic Society and selection procedure ffor members of Women's Judiciary came under heavy fire at Wednesday night's meeting of the Student Senate.

A BILL CHARGING the Forensic Society with "gross negligence and fiscal irresponsibility" was first introduced as a formal motion, then withdrawn by Senator Joe Piecuch (Baker). Piecuch's withdrawal of his motion precluded Senate action on the gist of said motion, which recommended that the Senate "revoke all financial support to and suspend the constitution of the Forensic Society upon any future discrepancies with regard to finances, trips, membership, etc. ."

Immediately after Senator Piecuch withdrew his motion, Senator Bill Landis (at-large '65), rising on a point of order, moved to suspend the rules so as to have a member of the Society attempt to rebut Senator Piecuch's charges. However, this motion was defeated. The Senate then acted favorably on a request by the Forensic Society for a grant of $100 to cover all expenses incurred during their trip to the New England Regional Debating Tournament. The Senate Financing Committee had recommended that the request not be approved, but the Senate disregarded this suggestion and approved the granting.

During debate it was pointed out that the Forensic Society has been duly submitting all category changes to the Finance Committee since binding clauses, specifying that they do so, were issued to the Society last fall. Specific mention was also made of the winning record of the Society and of its contribution to University prestige.

Senator Maureen Flanagan (Leach) set off a spark which threatened to burn Women's Judiciary when she charged that the Women's Affairs Committee had allowed the Judiciary to follow "unfair and vague practices . . . setting up informal by-laws illegally and not following them and . . . taking it upon itself to choose those who would succeed them."

Senator Carol Ricci, questioning the allegations raised by Senator Flanagan, requested exact instances of the "unfair and vague practices" to which Senator Flanagan had referred.

Senator Flanagan retorted that the "unfair" was in reference to a complaint made by a member of the Freshman class; the girls were choosing those who would succeed them. "Vague" referred to the fact that there are no provisions for elections. She was supported by Senator Dave Mathieson (at-large '64) who told the Senate that no existing law allows Women's Judiciary to have a "'selection committee" and that the constitution specifically states that an election shall be held.

Senator Wendy Hall proposed an amendment to the bill, deleting "unfair and vague" practices, and instead of the establishment of an Ad Hoc Committee to investigate and recommend legislation governing the selection of members of the Judiciary, she called for the Constitutional Revisions Committee to undertake the job. Her motion carried and the bill was

by DAVID B. AXELROD

After listening to the comments of two guests from the Student Senate, the Faculty Senate voted, yesterday, to allow a one day reading period for finals this semester. The bill that has passed the Senate will eliminate classes on Thursday, May 21st, to allow at least a full day reading period before any Friday finals. To make up for any imbalance in the number of scheduled days of classes a complicated sounding calendar adjustment was also made.

On Tuesday, May 19th, morning classes will follow a regular Saturday morning schedule. Regular Tuesday afternoon classes will then be attended. That is, students go to Saturday morning classes on Tuesday and then follow their regular Tuesday afternoon schedule for the rest of the day.

The change in Tuesday's class meetings will assure an equal number of classes (14 in the semester) on each of Saturday, Tuesday, and Thursday, for a minimum number of total meetings, 42.

The initiative for the newly authorized reading period was taken by Student Senators William Landis and Tom MacMullen, who were given special permission to enter the Faculty Senate to present their proposals. In a ten minute talk, Senators Landis and MacMullen related the plight of the student body in regard to a reading period and suggested a temporary solution. Senator Landis' proposed schedule change was accepted almost without change by the Faculty Senate after he and Senator MacMullen had left the chamber.

Senators Landis and MacMullen made several other suggestions to the Faculty Senate, all of which were acknowledge as worthy of investigation and put into proper committees for further action. A three day reading period, prefered by the majority of students in a recent poll by the Student Senate, is now being considered as a regular allowance in coming semesters.

A reconsideration of the Math and Science requirements for a Bachelor of Arts degree at the University, has been sent to committee in light of a Student Senate survey of other colleges that suggested fewer semesters of required sciences.

A more exact grading system, possibly incorporating a plus-minus break down, and the report on the Student Opinion Poll on trimester were aired. The majority of students polled had said "no" to trimester, though not a large enough difference in opponion was recorded by the poll to make valid comment possible.

The Faculty Senate voted to commend the two Student Senators and the Student Senate for the well presented body of suggestions made at yesterday's meetings.

Former Teen Stars

Four Preps Appear Sat.

The Four Preps, a vocal group that made a successful transition from teen-aged wonders to mature song stylists, will be the featured performers of the traditional Greek Week at the University of Massachusetts.

The young quartet will appear on Sunday, April 12, at 2 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage. Tickets are now on sale at the Student Union box office and will be available at the door on Sunday.

Their concert will end the week of festivities sponsored by the Inter-fraternity and Panhellenic Councils at UMass.

The Preps got their start—in a small way—at Hollywood High School in 1955, when they were the only male entrants in a school talent show.

With this inauspicious beginning the four young singers caught on with the California public and by 1957 began recording for Capitol Records.

In 1958, the Four Preps, then one of the youngest groups cutting records, hit the national spotlight with a million-selling rendition of "26 Miles".

Since that first big hit, there have been other big records, plus a growing string of albums and successful personal appearances.

Of the four members of the quartet that came together in Hollywood, only one—Ed Cobb—is a native of the film city.

Glen Larson was born in Long Beach, Marvin Ingram in Shreveport, La., and Bruce Belland in Chicago.

As an added feature of Greek Week the Student Union Program Council is presenting a special movie on Saturday, April 11 at 7:30 in the Ballroom. This movie has just recently been released for rentals. The movie is Cape Fear, starring Gregory Peck, Robert Mitchum, Polly Bergen.

"A stunning masterpiece of suspense is achieved by a brilliant cast marshalled for one of the screen's most dramatic thunderbolts of excitement . . . the story of a family's happy home that is slowly turned into a nightmare of fear when an ex-convict arrives in town. It reaches a plateau of suspense so gripping that audiences are asked not to divulge the climactic developments."

JFK Memorial SurpassesExpected Campus Support

In its first three days of collections, the Student John F. Kennedy Memorial Committee has gotten off to a surprisingly successful start in its campaign to establish a John F. Kennedy Memorial Reading Room on campus.

Several student organizations have already pledged large donations to the Student Memorial Committee.

John Burke, a member of the Interfraternity Council, has announced that the IFC has donated $500 to the Student Memorial Committee.

Mortar Board, the Senior Women's Honorary Society, has pledged the proceeds from a car wash they will hold soon.

Kappa Alpha Theta became the first sorority to contribute with each girl pledging a one dollar donation. The indications are that the other sororities on campus will follow the lead of KAT.

Individual members of the campus community are urged to make their contributions at the JFK Memorial Reading Room booth in the Lobby of the Student Union. It should be noted that all contributions, no matter how small, will be most gratefully accepted.

Patting Heads

Congratulations are due the two senators, Bill Landis and Tom MacMullen, who made a special and successful appearance before the Faculty Senate yesterday. It is actions like theirs that justifies the existence of a Student Senate after the occasional long and tiring personality hassels.

The Faculty Senate must also be congratulated on its reassuring show of concern and respect for the student, by allowing the two Senators to present their suggestions; and by taking prompt action on the matters brought for consideration.

It is our hope that more and more such congratulations will be in order from the Collegian and the student body.

Editor's Notebook

GREETINGS!

from AXEL

All articles that I write are carefully pasted into a job-notebook. It doesn't seem to matter when I look for a job; the interviewer hasn't time to look at the work anyway. My friends, of course, are bored by it; but all that stuff in print is still impressive as the devil to me, and the effort has provided a title for this "general-interest" column.

A good newspaper has a personality all its own. It has life, constructive controversy, human interest; it talks to its readers. The personality of the paper grows out of the writings of individuals—people will take the time to state personal opinion or research editorials and news.

The "Editor's Notebook" introduces the first person singular—my personal observations—to the editorial page with the hopes of bringing the emphasis back to individuals on campus and in the paper. Though I am editor, the contents of this occasional column should not be construed as Collegian policy or opinion.

However, I think my opinions after having survived three years at UMass in "newsy" positions, will be of value to you. If you disagree with what I have written you may picket my office, sit-in, make threatening phone calls, or even write a letter to the editor.

If your reactions are generally favorable, we should be able to cover some interesting topics. The Collegian will also be doing write-ups of intersting personalities on campus. If you don't watch out, we will get you!

"Let Not Your Hearts Be ..."

by DON JOHNSON

In the light of recent developments in the integrationist movement in the south (I speak of repeated instances of violence perpetrated by southern racists on demonstrators pledged to non-violence) many former advocates of these peaceful demonstrations would now have Negroes abandon the fight for liberty and justice and return to their homes in full recognition of, and by implication respecting and consenting to, the ungodly southern status quo. All this because they have seen the ugly insides of the South, and felt the convulsive manifestations of a vicious system caught in the throes of prolonged rigor mortis. The rationale behind this kind of thinking is that these demonstrators (by now agitators) merely create social unrest, resulting in what is called Trouble.

However, "Trouble" is relative, a matter of semantics; therefore, I submit that when a man is not allowed to vote, when he cannot attend a good school or accredited college peacefully, when he has no chance at descent housing, when he is not allowed to get a decent job with fair wages, when he cannot get justice in a court of law, when his home and church are bombed and his children killed, when he is kicked, beaten and spat upon, all because of race, color, or creed—then that man is in Trouble.

When the above occurs in a nation "dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal," then that nation is morally in trouble since they are as fundamental to a democratic society as universal suffrage, freedom of the press and freedom of speech. Let those who would call for an end to demonstrations consider the fact of the effectiveness of non-violent demonstrations, and the fact that the antithesis of non-violence is violence.

I have nothing but the deepest respect for anyone with the ability to repress anger and to convert into righteous conviction, but I wonder how long can a man, working under such a handicap, keep anger repressed, not letting it turn to hate.

If a man is constantly beaten, abused, cursed and bombed out of his home without lifting a finger to defend himself or his loved ones, can he retain any human dignity? The respect of his children? His own self-respect?

While questions like those above trouble the heart of our nation, Congress deliberates. Growing unrest, violence, threats, beatings and killings . . . still the filibuster goes on. We go on about our daily business, untouched, unaware, and hardly caring.

But we're safe, you and me, aren't we?

SENATORIUM

The Maturation Of A Governing Body

by MARC CHEREN

Last Wednesday, the council chambers saw a Senate meeting without precedent. Preparation on the part of most Senators participating (and most did participate) was exceptional. Recommendations for the improvement of Maroon Keys by Senator Kiernan's Honorary Societies Committee and Senator Jones' motion to investigate the possibility of holding a State University Conference on Student Government were excellent, as were many other actions by the body. While there was definitely more than one action which seemed unfortunate, the most important concerned Senator Flanagan's bill asking for a study of the alleged "suggestions of unfair and vague practices" in the selection procedure for Women's Judiciary. This was watered down and sent to the Constitution and By-laws Committee without directions for procedure or outside representation. The body acted too hastily, perhaps, to protect the good name of Women's Judiciary by deleting suggestions of "unfair and vague practices" from the motion.

The selection process for Women's Judiciary elections has never been set down to be approved or disapproved by those members of the Senate not on the Women's Affairs Committee, or so that it could be known fully or objected to by any non-Senate, non-Judiciary member. To this extent, and only to this extent, is the present process unfair or vague. But the situation does exist, and the Senate doesn't change that fact by deleting words in a motion. The intent of the motion was clearly not to cast dispersion either on the Women's Affairs Committee or on Women's Judiciary. It was meant to shed light on a situation (by calling a spade a spade) and suggestions how it might be improved.

While the matter will probably be handled properly by Senator Mathieson and his committee; that will depend mostly on the individual involved. If, for example, Senator Mathieson were to resign from his chairmanship, and a less capable Chairman were to take over, the Senate might then wish it had spelled out composition and procedure concerning the matter for the committee, as Senator Flanagan requested. Let's hope that doesn't happen.

Now what is behind this investigation? Simply the fact that for as long as anyone can remember there have been no independent women students on Women's Judiciary.

As far as can be seen, however, this is not at all the fault of Women's Judiciary. It is the fault of independent women for not trying out for the position. Because the ratio of Greek to Non-Greek application is usually something like 5 to 1, if that, the odds are simply against that body being what some people would consider truly "representative." ("Representative" here is like balancing the Supreme Court of the land equally between Conservatives and Liberals).

When, as was the case this year, the one Non-Greek out of four persons applying for one position is turned down, hairs split, and brows wrinkle. Again, the only way for this situation to be remedied is for more independents to make application for membership on one of the most important bodies on campus.

The meeting was definitely the best this year in terms of matters considered and the majority of actions taken. But something might possibly be learned from the above by Senators, non-Senators and especially independent girls.

ME, MADNESS, HUMOR

Bomb Swatter

by MIKE HENCH

This column on the Air Force will deal with its need. Not what it needs, but whether we need it. Now, are there any readers who believe that the Russians are going to attack us with bombers. Hold up your hands. Good. After the missiles they'll send bombers. And our great fighter-interceptor forces will take off from their strategic locations in Florida and Kansas and intercept them at the DEW line or over San Francisco. A few air-to-air refuelings won't take much time. But it's really our bombers that will deter the enemy, isn't it?

The deterrance force will take off and five or six hundred bombers will descend on the Soviet Union and China and deter the Hell out of them. Several won't make it, but a few will get through. How many? I don't know. But this hog-wash about sneaking in under radar doesn't jell in my mind. For four years I worked with precision radar using MTI, a moving-target indicator. It's a complex little piece of equipment that blots out the frequency of ground clutter and shows only moving targets (a super-heterodyning process for you physics majors). When it works it's quite good, and since it isn't classified, I'm sure that the Russians have worked it out too. So much for the undetected low-level attack by bombers designed to fly at high altitude.

But those in the know will point to ECM, our vast complex of electronic radar jamming equipment, the so-called "little black boxes". Some can blot out a radar frequency (if you know the frequency). Others spread a chaff, strips of tin foil cut in such a way that they block out that certain known frequency. This is old stuff and very effective if dropped right over the radar site. Only what is the enemy supposed to do if their MTI picks up the target at two hundred miles? Should they wait until the plane gets over the site and drops its chaff? If they're playing the game, they will, at least that's what we did in practice.

Every now and then we play the war game and call it "Blue Streak" or "Big Shield" or some other quaint name. The Air Force has discovered that if both sides don't know anything, we usually lose most of our cities, bombers and fighters, plus a few stray civilians and an occasional straffed cow. Hence, everyone knows about the "big event" weeks ahead of time, and we all have fun watching fighters vector into position to shoot down bombers over the cities.

Why do we have bombers? Why fighters? Well, for one thing, because "they" have them. And for another, perhaps more important, you can't get flight pay for sending up a missile. Can't afford to lose flight pay. Nor is an admiral going to command a nice invulnerable submarine, when he can command a nice vulnerable aircraft carrier.

To the Editor:

Next fall, there will be approximately 8,000 student numbers on campus. Next year, also, about 125 of these nameless figures will be evicted from Thatcher House and be forced to find housing elsewhere, when the quadrangle becomes co-ed with the conversion of Thatcher into a men's dormitory. Why Thatcher? Perhaps the marvelous view has something to do with the proposed change ... Beware, residents of almost every other dorm in the quad. You'd better plan on keeping your shades down 24 hours a day, unless you wish to provide free matinee and evening performances for Thatcher's new inhabitants. You'd also better plan on sunbathing in ski outfits.

Perhaps, though, the proposed change of Thatcher into a men's dormitory has some reasoning behind it. Is this, perhaps, another step in the University policy of HIGHER learning, more widely disseminated?

Shelly Gerrig '65

To the Editor:

Where, Oh, where has justice gone? Why are some students paid embarassing wages for their hard work? The minimum wage paid by most employees in this area is approximately $1.15 per hour. But, as in many instances, the University is different, and has set up its own standard of payment.

The result is that numerous students on campus are working for as low as 90¢ per hour doing difficult jobs that regular campus help will not do. I realize that the University is not the richest college in the country. However, raising the rate of student payment to at least $1.25 will not put UMass into the poor-house. It will help students pay for their college expenses, which are increasing every year.

It is about time that campus employers look at the situation with realism, and insure that the students receive adequate compensation for their work.

UMass Guiding Hand

The Child Guidance Center is located in an ordinary looking house at 444 No. Pleasant St. The facade is deceiving; for inside is found a dynamic and efficient clinic supervised by Dr. Harold Jarmon, an Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychology at the University of Massachusetts. The primary purpose of the clinic, according to Dr. Jarmon, is to aid the training of doctoral students in Clinical Psychology.

Secondly, the Center provides a limited amount of free service to the community. Psychological evaluation, psychotherapy, and counselling are offered to both children and their parents.

Dr. Jarmon is assisted by Mrs. Janice Stevens who is a part-time psychiatric social worker, by a part-time receptionist, and by a number of doctoral students enrolled in the Clinical Psychology program.

"We would have to increase our services radically if we are to begin to meet this community's needs for psychological services."

The clinic opened in November, 1963, but got off to a slow start. Now, in Director Jarmon's words: "We are extremely busy. Our waiting list for some services extends into the fall. We hope to expand our facilities next fall, to help alleviate the problem."

The clinic, supported by a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health Training, offers individual psycotherapy to children, counselling and psycotherapy for parents, and joint counselling of both parents and children. Soon the clinic hopes to offer group therapy.

Located in a reconverted home, the clinic boasts a functional, homey, interior. The first floor contains Dr. Jarmon's office, the reception room, and a playroom stocked with trucks, puppets, doll houses, and other toys appropriate to children's interests at a variety of ages. The second floor contains Mrs. Steven's office and two interview rooms.

Dr. Jarmon feels that children's problems require the full support of the parents; and without that support, treatment is ineffective. "Our orientation if family-centered. If we don't have the cooperation of both parents, it is unlikely that we will be able is ineffective. "Our orientation is or accomplish much with, the child."

For further information, Dr. Jarmon should be contacted at the Center by telephone or by mail.

Women Go Off-Campus

Los Angeles, Calif. (I.P.) — Dean of Women, Mary Laing Swift, of Occidental College recently announced that next year's senior women would be allowed the option of living off-campus. She commented that this "marks a real departure from the past, in terms of residence plans."

Dean Swift was quick to add that although the policy will go into effect next year it will certainly be reviewed again in light of any new circumstances. The new policy is the result of much consideration and stems mainly from the low rate of attrition here. Dean Swift pointed out that dormitory crowding was brought about not because more women were being admitted but because few women left Occidental before graduation.

Seniors electing to live off-campus must be 21 by January, 1965, and have a letter of parental approval filed with the office of the Dean of Women as well.

The situation became critical this year when fifty-eight women were either promised rooms or on the dormitory waiting lists. Dean Swift, while saying that this new move was a departure from the present, made clear that Occidental still considers the residence experience as an integral part of the total educational experience.

Senate Recommends Changes In Keys

Special Report From Senate Public Relations Committee

During the past five weeks, the Senate Ad Hoc Committee for the Study of Honorary Societies has been looking into the position, duties, and organization of the Maroon Key Society. They have made many recommendations toward its improvement, all of which were accepted without opposition at the Senate Meeting Wednesday night.

The committee discoverd that the prestige of the Maroon Keys is not very high, and that this was due, in part, to an increasing limitation of the role of the Keys on this campus. The loss of functions was attrubuted to a lack of interest and responsibility.

THE COMMITTEE RECOMMENDED that the Keys; 1. try to build itself the reputation of maturity, dedication, and responsibility; 2. that the Keys search out areas in which they may be of assistance, such as guides for guests and freshmen orientation; 3. that they raise their standards for membership by raising the required cumulative average; and 4. that they provide some form of continuity from year to year.

The Society in the past, according to the committee, has enjoyed a position of respect and importance, and with these improvements, can again become effective. Perhaps this year's freshmen can belong to an improved society which will truly deserve the name "Honorary."

The Committee, which will eventually investigate all the campus honorary societies, is headed by Senator Tom Kiernan (Hills So.), and is composed of five senators, as well as representatives from the five honorary societies, Adelphia, Motar Board, Maroon Keys, Revelers and Scrolls.

THE COMMITTEE WAS ESTABLISHED by the Student Senate to study and help solve the problems of the societies and to help coordinate their activities on campus.

Open Meeting Monday To Explain New Dorms

The plan for a residence section that will be developed in the new Orchard Hill dormitories will be explained to the campus at an open meeting on Monday, April 13 at 8 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

President Lederle announced last week that Professor H. L. Varley of the English Department will act as Master for the new complex of the building. With him will be a group of about twenty faculty who will serve as residents, advisors, preceptors, staff members, soon to be selected by a faculty committee. This committee, with some changes in its membership, has been studying the residence plan all winter. Their initial investigation was begun under a Danforth Grant which financed a conference held on Nantucket in November. Subsequent meetings in Amherst have further defined the proposal.

The new residence plan will introduce social, cultural, and educational programs into dormitory life. The intellectual activities will include small and special classes in the conference rooms and seminar rooms of the new buildings.

The four buildings will house persons from all classes and many majors. Men and women students will have access to the social rooms. It is expected that two of the finished buildings will be for men, two for women, and it is further expected that the buildings will be ready for full occupancy for the opening of college in September. Indeed, with the enrollment figures already announced, it will be imperative to have this space.

Students on campus who are interested in residing at Orchard Hill will be given first chance to show their interest, but some freshmen will be housed here. Students who have questions to ask or suggestions to offer will be especially welcome at the meeting of April 13, at 8:00.

UT Casts New Play 'All The King's Men'

Question: What else did all the King's men do besides not put Humpty Dumpty back together again?

Answer: They got cast in a play called of all things, All the King's Men.

There are obvious other questions which can be raised concerning this play or at least its title. For instance, who is this King and moreover what is he King of? Author Robert Penn Warren never really tells, not at least to anyone who hasn't seen the play first. It's a kind of a "come and see for yourself" situation. And your University Theater guarantees satisfaction. A guarantee that if you come, you'll surely see an eyeful. The production designed and staged by Harry E. Mahnken promises to give the campus community an evening of fine theater that it won't soon forget.

Jim Wrynn and Pat Long, both long familiar on the University Theater scene, leads a cast of fresh new talent. Said Director Mahnken of the group: "Readings for this play were excellent. Many good people read. We hope to build up the pool of talent we have here so that even larger cast shows may be done by University Theatre in the future. I want to thank all of those that did read and invite them to return next fall to read again."

The program will start at 8:30 p.m.

Blustine, a mathematics major at UMass, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Blustine, 84 Reed St., Agawam. He is a 1960 graduate of Springfield Technical High School and a member of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

David Tasgal, a 1960 graduate of Classical High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell H. Tasgal, 42 Leyfred Terrace, Springfield. He is majoring in psychology at UMass.

Senate . . .

passed as amended.

IN OTHER ACTION, the Senate approved a bill sponsored by Senator Ross Jones (Brett) calling for investigation of the possibility of holding a conference on Student Government on this campus in 1964-65. Citing the large volume of mail requesting outline of our Student Government, Senator Jones said that the University has "sent many people to many conferences and we've gained a lot from them . . . It is time we shared a tradition of over thirty years of fine Student Government." This motion met with unanimous approval.

Senator Don Boyd (Greenough '65) called it "one of the most important bills to come before this body this legislative year."

Under provisions of the bill, invitations would be extended to all state colleges, community colleges and technical institutions supported by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and those institutions as the committee deemed necessary.

THE SENATE also approved legislation financing the Flying Redmen's trip to Washington, D. C., to participate in the Cherry Blossom Festival and to the Sailing Club for purchase of a hull.

Approval was also given and funds provided for sending delegates to a conference on Commuter Problems and Organization at Pembroke College, a Student Government Conference at Orono, Maine, and a Conference on Housing to be held at Columbia University.

Twilight Concerts Scheduled

The University of Massachusetts Concert Band, conducted by John A. Jenkins, will present two twilight concerts on the steps of Stockbridge Hall on May 10 and 17. Each concert will feature a new program. Among the repertoire for the Band's final concerts of the year are Broadway shows, popular marches and a variety of concert music.

GSS Initiates Pledges

The Ginny Rodgers Pledge Class, named after one of the co-founders of Women's Service Organization and first president of GSS at UMass, was initiated on March 17. At their first pledge meeting, they elected Elaine Taylor as president, Marilyn Gates as Secretary-Treasurer, Jan Kelleher as song leader, and Nancy Cockrell as Historian.

The remaining pledges are: Pat Angelori, Dot Cahill, Margaret Carey, Carol Cheika, Bonny Clapp, Linda Coughlin, Muriel Derrick, Nancy Devlin, Jean Gaitenby, Dorette Gelzinis, Jan Hartz, Karen Jokisaari, Laura Liben, Ruth Loff, Jean Macleod, Jane Meagher, Diane Albyrck, Ann O'Sullivan, Judy Azuransky, Sarah Packard, Ethel Pike, Diane Robinson, Rita Smith, Jan Tanzer, and Cynthia Tetrault.

The Pledge class discussed pledge policy and various projects including work with the Amherst Girl Scouts, making novelties for Clark School for the Deaf, and an auction to be held with the sisters. At this meeting, the pledges also learned the identity of their big sisters.

There Is A Premium On Marriages

ACP—After the decree that married men of draft age would not be considered eligible for the draft, the Daily O'Collegian set out to learn student reaction. Here are sample quotes from the campus Oklahoma State University, Stillwater:

A senior coed commented that if anyone could find her an available man to save from the service, she would make the sacrifice.

Howard Moore, junior, said simply: "I'm available." But, after some thought, he decided he would rather "have a four-year contract with the army than a lifetime contract from which I could not get an honorable discharge."

Said Jim Bednar, senior: "I'm seriously considering marriage for the first time in my life."

One girl thought: "It will cause an increase in marriage rates, and I hate married men, but ..."

Underclassmen Watch Out For Hems-Down Policy

ACP—The Record, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana, prints this "Form A-1" for underclassmen to fill out and follow:

(1) Underclassmen shall devote the whole of their time, attention and energies to the performance of proper social conduct, and shall not, either directly or indirectly, alone or in partnership, violate the existing Hems-Down Policy which blankets the Goshen College campus.

(2) The said underclassmen shall follow diligently the Hems-Down Policy which prohibits the following and similar breaches: Holding hands under library tables, crashing dinner line when upperclassman is looking, engaging in or hitting any upperclassmen in water fights, discarding gum wrappers in petunias, wearing any garment with hem above knee cap, snoring through alarm on Sunday morning, reading any printed material including letters in chapel and whistling at any girl except to the tune of Beethoven's Fifth.

Sororities Lose Recognition; Anti-Discrimination Cause

Long Beach State College withdrew recognition last week from six of its seven sororities for failure to comply with campus rushing rules.

Robert Wells, manager of the Long Beach State news bureau, said the six groups withdrew from campus supervised rushing without consulting the college.

College spokesman said the sororities sent letters to members stating that off-campus rushing would avoid compliance with proposed anti-discrimination rules that become effective next September.

Trustees of the state colleges in California have ruled that sororities and fraternities must sign pledges by Sept. 1, 1964, in which they agree not to discriminate against members on the basis of race or religion.

The unrecognized sororities at LBSC, all chapters of national organizations, are Alpha Delta Phi, Delta Delta Delta, Delta Zeta, Gamma Phi Beta, Sigma Kappa, and Zeta Tau Alpha. Delta Gamma complied with rushing rules and is still recognized by the college. However, Delta Gamma has not yet signed an anti-discrimination pledge.

In announcing the action, college president Carl McIntosh said, "I have today withdrawn recognition of the Long Beach State affiliation of six national sororities. It is unwise for any college to permit auxiliary groups to choose which responsibilities they will respect and observe, and which they will ignore."

Redmen Optimistic In 78th Season

Coach Earl Lorden enters his 17th season as head baseball coach at UMass with a team filled with uncertainties. After a month of indoor workouts the Redmen appear to be a team that has talent and enthusiasm but lacks experience. Eight valuable lettermen graduated from the group that compiled a 36-17-1 record over three varsity seasons.

While the UMass hitting fell to a disastrous team average of .188 the pitching in 1963, along with solid defense, carried the team to a 10-7 mark. Lorden has to mold a new staff and hopes that senior right hander Rod Corey will become the leader of the pitching corps. Corey, used mainly as a reliever the past 2 seasons, hurled a complete game victory over Boston University and lost a tough 3-0 decision to Connecticut, on two unearned runs, in his 1963 starts. Senior righty Mike John, 6'7" made one appearance and that was a 13-inning 3-2 win over Tufts. Top soph prospect is lefty Ross Piken who chalked up 38 strikeouts in 19 innings with the frosh. Other candidates are juniors Jim Ritchie and Mike Brita and senior Dick Farrell.

The catching department is in the capable hands of Karl Kamena. Karl worked his way into the lineup last Spring when veteran Dave Krukonis injured his hand. Good-looking soph Ray Yando will back up Kamena along with soph Mike Smith.

Only Capt. John Awdycki returns from last Spring's strong infield. Awdycki, an All Yankee Conference and All N.E. first base choice, is an adroit gloveman and steady hitter. Senior Joe Apicella has the inside track on second base but faces competition from juniors Paul Caisse and Jim Neary. Shortstop is another question mark, although junior Bill Crane has been impressive in pre-season drills. Crane has the tools to be a good hitter and fielder. He is facing competition from Neary, who could move into either keystone position. Two good-looking sophs are battling for the third base job, that was excellently handled for 3 years by slick-fielding Tony Williams. Although Bill Cleary hit .318 as the frosh third baseman, hefty Jim Kuczynski is making his presence felt. Kuczynski won his letter as a center on the undefeated football team last fall. He owns a rifle arm and can hit with power.

Baseball ...

PIKEN only hurled 12 innings but came up with 19 strikeouts. He was the start of the 7-3 victory over Fort Lee in which he retired 12 batters in a row, gave up a home run, and put down 3 more. He also struck out 10 in the six inning stint.

Lacrosse Team Rebuilds; Must Replace Top Defense

Coach Dick Garber's 10th varsity lacrosse team at the University of Massachusetts could be one of the strongest offensive units he's ever had. And yet Garber looks to the coming season with apprehension. The Redmen defensive unit is a completely rebuilt group—one that is made up of entirely juniors and sophomores. And only two of them, Hal Ryder and Don Rosati, won letters last year, although neither was a starter.

Joining Ryder and Rosati in the battle for the three starting defensive berths are junior Joe Doyle and sophs Ed Toner, Joe Doktor, John Meilbye, Ed Feeley, Dave Wanless and Brad Stokes. "I really haven't decided on my starters yet," Garber stated before the Redmen embarked on their exhibition game trip. "Graduation took our four top defensemen, Paul Majeski, Tom Kirby, Jon Kallio and Dutch Ditierle. They'll be hard to replace."

The goal situation is in the capable hands of senior Dick Baird. Converted from a midfielder to a goalie last Spring, Baird won the regular berth and was a vital cog in the UMass drive to the New England Championship and the University's finest lacrosse record. This Spring Baird has shown excellent agility, and stickhandling movements and has won high praise from Garber during practice sessions. He is backed by a pair of inexperienced sophs, Bob Lawson and Ed Flaherty.

The midfield group is smaller physically than in 1963 but features better stickhandling and appears to be better in overall ability. The first two units show experience with some scoring potential. Co-Capt. Frank Infusino, a hard-working sparkplug, will probably be joined by senior Gordie Webb, a much-improved player, and junior Dick Brown, who lettered last year. The second unit will have junior Steve Veagrow, senior Al Morris and junior Jim Mahoney. Vengrow and Mahoney are lettermen. Behind them are four promising but inexperienced sophs—Charles Avakian, Dave Jarret, Bill Houde and Wait Gustavsen.

The real strength of the Redmen lies in the attack unit. Led by Co-Capt. Steve Harrington, who will be joined by seniors Charlie Glew and Fran Casey, this should be a swift, powerful trio. Harrington has notched 31 goals and 21 assists in two varsity seasons and appears ready for his biggest season. Casey has been converted from a midfielder and has been very impressive. Glew was injured in the opening scrimmage last year at Army and missed the entire season. After completing a career as one of the all-time UMass hockey greats, Charlie should be set for an outstanding lacrosse season. Reserve strength will come from three sophomores—Waldo Banks, Bob Edmonston and Fred Thompson.

Lorden In 17th Season

UMass Baseball Prospects

The University of Massachusetts baseball team opens its 78th varsity season Saturday by hosting Coast Guard in a 2 p.m. game at Alumni Field. Coach Earl Lorden stated he will probably use both senior Mike Johnson (Quincy) and soph Ross Piken (Brookline) against the Cadets, although he hasn't decided who will get the starting assignment.

JOHNSON, 6'7 righthander, was the top Redman pitcher on the recently-completed Southern trip. Mike pitched 23 innings with 16 strikeouts. He allowed only four earned runs. Johnson's top effort was an 8-0, one-hit shutout against Loyola College of Baltimore Saturday. He struck out seven and walked only two, and lost his no-hit bid with one out in the ninth.

PIKEN worked 12 innings and fanned 19. His top performance came at Fort Lee, Va. Ross retired 12 straight batters without the ball geting out of the infield, allowed a home run, then mowed down three more. He struck out 10 in six innings.

Coach Lorden was well-pleased with the overall performance down South as UMass won three and lost four. Unfortunately the first outdoor session for the Redmen was a game against a Michigan State team which already owned five straight wins. The Spartans made it six straight with a 12-2 win but UMass improved steadily after the opener.

Top hitters on the trip were junior rightfielder Steve Wojnar (Holyoke) .389, soph centerfielder Dennis Della Piana (Malden) .381, soph leftfielder Al Nordberg (Worcester) .364 and Capt. John Awdycki (Gardner) .318. Awdycki hit two home runs, while Della Piana and junior Mike Brita (Milford) also homered.

Lorden indicated his opening-game lineup may be composed of either junior Karl Kamena (Teaneck, N.J.) or soph Ray Yando (Springfield) catching, Awdycki at first base, junior Bill Crane (Marblehead) at second, senior Joe Apicella (Milford) shortstop and soph Jim Kuczynski (Westfield) at third. The outfield will have Wojnar in right, Della Piana in center and Nordberg or senior Tony Simone (Lee) in left.

WHO SAID

Foreign Study is for Language Majors Only.

Of course, it's for them, too.

But it's also for undergrads in history, political science, international relations, economics, psychology, philosophy and some other fields.

We know. Over half the students in our university centers in Europe aren't language majors. They're pursuing studies in their own fields, and giving them a fresh, European dimension—without interrupting their college careers.

Foreign study may suit you, too. (It isn't for everyone.) This is the time of life when the experience of Europe can mean most. It will mean most if you use it to deepen and extend your formal studies.

You might look into it—and learn about our programs, including a new one opening next fall at the University of Madrid.

Our centers don't offer mere "civilization" courses. They aren't cozy little "ghettos" for Americans. Institute programs immerse you in a great European university as deeply as your abilities allow. (We supplement and guide your studies, as necessary, to make sure they satisfy U. S. requirements.)

Redmen Versus Coast Guard In Baseball Season Opener

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts baseball team will open their regular season slate with a Saturday afternoon 2 o'clock game against the Coast Guard Academ at Alumni Field. After a successful trip through the South, Coach Earl Lorden is hopeful the team can get off the mark in winning style.

A group of power hitting underclassmen have set out to remove the seniors from the starting lineup. At present, Lorden plans to start only two seniors, not including the pitcher. Captain John Awdycki who hit at a .318 clip and two home runs will open at first base.

Joe Apicella will be at the shortstop position, after being shifted over from second base during the southern swing. That is about all the seniors.

Second base will be manned by junior Bill Crane, who changed slots with Apicella. The coach felt that Crane would be more at ease in this slot and would still be able to keep the potential hitting power.

JIM KUCZYNSKI will be at the third base slot. The big footballer has a rifle arm and is just starting to hit. He had two hits in the last game against Loyola of Baltimore.

The outfield is were the power hitting on the club really seems to lie. The three probable starters all hit well on the trip with the lowest of the three hitting at a .364 clip.

AL NORDBERG had the average listed above, and has proven to be a sound hitter. However, he is being pressed for a slot in left field by senior Tony Simone, a veteran letterman.

CENTER FIELD IS WELL SET WITH SOPH DENNIS DELLA PIANA, a .381 hitter on the trip. This young fellow is expected to be one of the really bright future stars of the Redmen.

Right field will be manned by the leading hitter on the trip, Steve Wojnar. The big guy banged the ball out at a .389 clip. Wojnar exhibited a lot of promise as a frosh as he hit at a better than .400 clip. He also hit well in the Tri-County league, a circuit made up of top flight college ball players and recent graduates. This year, he seems ready to fulfill the high expectations that Lorden has for him.

The catching position will not be decided until Saturday when Lorden will pick between letterman Ken Kamena, a junior, and sophomore Ray Yando. While neither burned up the opponents with big hitting, both did a very capable job of handling the pitchers.

THE PITCHING DUTIES will be split between Mike Johnson and Ross Piken. The big 6'7" senior Johnson had a fine trip down south. He hurled 23 innings and allowed just four earned runs. His top effort was a one hitter against Loyola. He struck out sixteen men in his 23 innings of work.

BIG MIKE JOHNSON from North Quincy to carry Redmen hopes against the Coast Guard Academy Saturday afternoon at Alumni Field.

Lacrosse Team Downed 7-2 As Weather Foils Offense

by MORRIS SHUBOW

Middletown, Connecticut had three days of rain before Wednesday and it rained hard throughout the game. The field was a quagmire of mud and water. Under these conditions the Varsity lacrosse team bowed in their first game of the season to Wesleyan University 7-2. It was the Redmen's first loss to the Cardinals in the eight games played over the past ten years.

THE REDMEN'S STRENGTH is their speed and maneuverability, while their main problem is lack of size. The existing conditions clearly nullified the good speed that the team possesses especially on the first attack unit of Charlie Glew, Steve Harrington, and Fran Casey. Regardless of this the Redmen still outshot Wesleyan 38 to 18; but a good number of the team's shots were off the mark.

UMass jumped off to a one goal lead in the first 35 seconds on Middle Dick Brown's unassisted goal, but the Cardinal evened the score at 1-1 in the first period and went ahead 5-1 with 4 goals in the middle of the second period.

THE SECOND HALF, played under almost unbearable conditions, was fairly even with Wesleyan scoring twice and the Redmen's Charlie Avakian getting an unassisted goal in the 4th period. Bob Messing had four goals for Wesleyan.

Further evidence of the Redmen's poor shooting is that the team was not able to capitalize on any of ten extra man situations.

SATURDAY the Redmen play Brown University at 2:00 on the Upper Athletic Field. The Bruins are one of the East's better teams having already defeated the University of Delaware aware 11-4 and losing a close one to perennial power Maryland 9-7. In Tom Draper they possess one of the country's best players. This midfielder scored 47 goals and 13 assists last year and 32 goals in his sophomore year.

Two years ago the Redmen beat Brown 10-5 here in Amherst. Last year at Brown UMass lost 8-5. While the Redmen are a definite underdog, it should be a very exciting game.

Determined Squad

Golf Team Rebuilds

Varsity golf Coach Gladchuk isn't exactly bursting with optimism over the University of Massachusetts prospects for a successful season. But Gladchuk, while stating that "the outlook isn't good," feels he has reasons for encouragement because of "a conscientious, determined squad."

THE REDMEN FINISHED 9-4 LAST YEAR with a third in the Yankee Conference. But Graduation took the top three players, including John Roche, the Conference Medalist. The returnees are led by Capt. George DeFaico (Sutton). Other letternumber four player. Other lettermen are senior Bill O'Donnell (Newton), and juniors Bill Glass (Beverly) and Frank Pluta (Chicopee). Senior John Donasky (Westfield), a letterman on the 1961 Conference championship team, returns after two years in the Army.

Junior Paul Krzynowek Housatonic) competed in several matches last Spring but didn't letter. A highly-promising junior is newcomer Charlie O'Rourke (Hadley). The 6'7 Redman basketball star has the ability to become a standout golfer. Coach Gladchuk stated that while he doesn't have an exceptional group of sophomores he may get help from George Wells (Lee), Bob McNeil (Leicester) and Howard Atkinson (Springfield).

THE REDMEN OPEN THEIR SEASON APRIL 16 at Lowell Tech. Gladchuk hopes his team will show steady improvement in order to make a creditable showing in the Yankee Conference Championships and New England's. The Redman Coach feels that defending Conference Champ Rhode Island will be even stronger this year, followed by Connecticut with UMass and New Hampshire fighting for third and fourth.

Half Mile: Lavoie, Jant, Young.

880 Yard Relay: Team III, Team V, Team IV.

50 Yard dash: Knutsen, Parnell, DeHart.

In Saturday afternoon's Chariot Races, Kappa Sigma won with a time of 44.3 seconds, Zeta Nu was second (45.4) and Alpha Sigma Phi third (45.9).

As usual, Greek Week ended on a musical note, as the Four Preps filled a Spring afternoon with many of the favorite songs on U.S. college campuses.

The concert, held in Curry Hicks physical education building from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, featured popular songs and witty banter by the former teen-age stars turned vocal stylists.

Warsaw Ghetto Commemoration On Thursday

A commemoration of the uprising of the Warsaw Ghetto will take place on Thursday, April 16 at 11 a.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

The program will consist of short talks by the chaplains of the Protestant and Catholic faiths, Reverend Jere Berger and Father Joseph Quigley. There will also be short readings by representatives of the three faiths. The master of ceremonies will be Rabbi Louis Ruchames, chaplain to the Jewish students on campus.

The featured speaker will be Rabbi Jacob Duschinsky, who was born in Hungary and educated in Hungary, Czechoslovakia, England, and the United States. During World War II, he was deported to the copper mines in Yugoslavia by the Nazis and was liberated by the Yugoslav partisans at the end of the war.

From 1945-1948, he served as

Civil Rights Week Features Bob Dylan

by DAVE HARACZ

Students for Civil Rights will present a concert by the famed folksinger, Bob Dylan on Sunday, April 26 at 8 p.m. in the Cage. The concert will be the climax of the activities of Civil Rights Week, April 19-26 at the University.

The week will include panel discussions by civil rights leaders on the progress of the fight for equality in the United States, talks by students and ministers who participated in rights demonstrations in St. Augustine, Atlanta, and Williamston two weeks ago, and a Freedom Rally outside the Student Union.

During this Civil Rights Week, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) buttons and stickers will be sold by workers from Students for Civil Rights in the lobby of the Student Union, at the panel discussions and at the Freedom Rally.

The proceeds from the Dylan concert and the sale of the buttons and stickers will go to SNCC, which is the largest and most active student group in the nation working for civil rights.

Concentrating on registering Negro voters in the South, SNCC workers have made an outstanding contribution to destroying the walls of prejudice all over the nation.

Bob Dylan, who has been called "the most brilliant folk lyricist of the 'new generation'", is chiefly concerned in his music with the suffering of the Negro, exemplified by "Go Tell It On The Mountain", and his restless search for a new world, as expressed in his "Blowin' in the Wind."

Tickets for the Dylan concert will be on sale at the Student Union Ticket Office beginning this Thursday. There are two prices, $2.00 and $1.50, so that those who wish to support the civil rights movement financially may purchase the $2.00 tickets.

Greenwich Quartet In Concert Wednesday

The Greenwich Quartet,. a young and unusual musical ensemble, will appear in concert on Wednesday, April 15, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

Tickets will be available at the door.

The Quartet's concert is the final eevnt in this year's series sponsored by the Concert Association.

The Greenwich Quartet consists of Herbert Rogers, pianist; Guy Lumia, violinist; Myron Rosenblum, violist, and David Everhart, cellist.

All are well known for their separate solo performances as well as their work with the Greenwich ensemble.

The Quartet's program reflects the virtuosity of its members, and will include duo and combination pieces as well as works for instrumental quartet.

Critics have cited the group for its musicianship, for its love of music, and for its youthful ardor in music-making. The group's average age is 26.

The Quartet's name refers back to its origin. Rogers, Lumia, Rosenblum, and Everhart first started as an informal ensemble, meeting in the homes of friends in New York's Greenwich Village.

"Boyfriend" Next U.T. Production

The Operetta Guild, in association with the Opera Workshop, announces that its spring production of THE BOY FRIEND will be presented two weekends—May 1, 2 and 8, 9. All performances will be at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Theatre. Stage direction is by Mrs. Aibert P. Madeira; musical direction is by Paul R. Bartsch.

This is the musical comedy that hilariously lampoons the era of speakeasies, cloche hats, dresses with no waistlines and hems at the knee. It ran for well over three and a half years in London, where it was born. New Yorkers thronged delightedly to it for over sixty weeks after its thunderous opening night there in September 1954.

CAESURA ON TARGET

by OLEH PAWLUK

The winter issue of Caesura is definitely on target, for it has hit the bull's eye of its career. The long wait for this issue has been compensated by the outstanding quality of the material printed.

The cover design, done by Neil Blatte, has a unique and eye-catching appeal. Highlighting the issue is the great selection of colorful poetry. Susan Tracy and Steve Orlen have augmented their work in previous issues by once more providing the reader with vivid and well-written poems. Another treat comes in the form of exchange poems contributed by Judith Kroll, editor of "Grecourt Review" at Smith College.

In addition to the poetry selections, there is much excellent material for lovers of art and fiction. Photos by Don Crasco capture the common but beautiful objects of life. "Primus Ave" is perhaps Crasco's most impressive photograph. Although more fiction selections could be desired in this issue, the stories that were included provided very enjoyable reading.

Caesura Editor Deidre Haley, staff members, and the numerous contributors are to be commended on creating an issue which is certain to prove one of the best in the literary magazine's history.

THE SEX HEX

by KENNETH FEINBERG

It's not the fact that sex and the college attitude are becoming a mundane, discussable topic, for the recent remarks in Newsweek and earlier, the Harvard Crimson, although informative, were magnificently tactful. This does not present a feeling, an atmosphere of anxiety and confusion, for regardless of the ability of the tacticians the majority of Massachusetts students can read gargantuan quantities of written material describing the vices of the pleasant pastime. In fact the UMass coed is thankful that society offers the written word, for society is the sex hex instigator.

Yet, we are college students, and the tactfulness of the news media does not dampen the consciousness of guilt that seeps into the minds of each one of us as individuals. One need not be a Harvard grad or attend the sex "haven" at New Haven, for the problem, however carefully presented, affects all college students, wherever they matriculate.

Some feign disinterest but the apathetic soon become the pathetic and the interested cringe, "where's it leading us." To blame the sorority-fraternity set is failure to realize the basics of the argument, for the problem originates in the moral atmosphere of our society, and cannot be dissolved by boarding up a fraternity. The colstudent at UMass or Harvard is the sponge, sopping up the advantages of sex stressed in the constitution of society. The tact of the muckrakers cannot lead the UMass student out of the sexual maze. He must lead himself out, for the society that put him there offers superficial solutions.

(Part II will consist of the question of visiting hours in the dormitories, and sexual expression on campus.)

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Now that Spring is here and the Campus Pond has been filled again, things are great. But not quite! Anyone who has seen the pond lately has probably noticed its muddy color. Now is the time to clean it before it acquires the algae which gave it such a sickening look last year. The ducks, which are supposed to keep the pond clean, don't seem to realize their job. Since we have so many specialized areas on campus which seem to know so much about this problem, there should be no problem in keeping the pond clean.

Now is the time to act, before the pond ceases to exist under a deluge of nauseating algae and scum.

A Pond Lover

To the Editor:

I must vehemently protest against the past activities of the maintenance department. I awake in the morning to the sound of a buzz-saw as it cuts down the trees in back of Mills and Brooks. As if this disturbance of my sleep were not bad enough, this horrendous sound continues into the afternoon, which makes studying all but impossible.

To compound this intrusion of my privacy, I now find that the shrubbery and trees in the President's Gardens have also been cut. Now I have no privacy. When I stroll through there now in an attempt to commune with nature I feel as if I am being watched. Car lights are distracting, but more important, I find that the soft moonlight filtering through the trees is no longer existent. What is one to do? Where is one to go from here?

I.L.

To the Editor:

We would like to thank a number of people who were instrumental in helping us secure a one-day reading period for the end of this semester: Larry Golonka '65, Ron O'Neill '66, and Dave Gatonska '65, who suggested the solution to the academic calendar; Mr. Frank Balsley and Mr. H. H. Skillings, of the Scheduling Office; and Dr. William C. Venman, of the Provost's Office. We further wish to thank the members of the Faculty Senate for their most thoughtful consideration — both in allowing us to speak before them and in voting on the bill. Too often too few people receive credit where credit is due.

Student Protests Ban On Campus Food Deliveries

To the Editor:

Once again the narrow-minded administration at UMass has shown its ignorance where the wishes of the students are concerned. A recent ad in the Collegian has stated that the Tastee Tower will no longer be able to deliver anything but pizzas to campus.

Of course we all know the dorm vending machines don't dispense pizzas or any other snacks. Whether this is a move to force students to have their snacks at the Hatch (which is being investigated for high prices) or to force students to eat more candy from the vending machines (which are owned by the athletic department) is not known.

Students of the University your rights to have food delivered to your rooms has been curtailed without any explanation from the administration. We expect that this editorial will force the administration to issue a statement giving its reasons for such an unprovoked move.

We will not cease to inquire about this authoritarian action until the following questions are answered:

1. What is the reason for the sudden change in attitude towards Tastee Tower?

2. If the grinder wagon can sell on campus, then why can't Tastee Tower deliver on campus?

3. Why hasn't the administration issued a statement giving reasons for its action?

4. When, if ever, will the administration at least give students a right to express their opinions in matters such as this before the administration acts?

To the administration we can only say what we, the students, have heard so many times, "Grow up! Act your age! Consider the consequences upon others before you act!"

H.G.

Mills House

To the Editor:

Once again the administration has shown its unique ability to do things at the wrong time. The case in question is the present painting of the rooms in Mills House. While it will not be argued that the rooms do need painting, I question the inappropriateness of the time.

The rooms were painted starting about three weeks ago. Besides the inconvenience of having to move all the furniture into the halls and then back into the rooms, the students also had to put up with the cold weather. Anyone knows the only way to remove the smell of paint from a room is to air it out by opening the windows. However, the weather three weeks ago was anything but warm. Why couldn't the rooms be painted in the summer?

I also question the time involved by the painters to paint the rooms. When they first started the job there were four painters and they painted four rooms per day. Now there are six painters and they are only painting three rooms per day.

Sacrifice At Cleveland

by LEWIS LUCHANS

Tuesday, April 7, will long be known as a day of infamy; the day the police, the all-mighty school board of Cleveland, and a construction company tried to play God; the day they killed a man of God. The Rev. Bruce William Klunder, a white Presbyterian minister, civil rights leader and father of two children was crushed to death by a bulldozer. His crime was attempting to stop construction of a school that would further perpetuate defacto-segregation.

The police immediately detecting a riot in its formation sent its riot squad and reinforcements. Tear gas was used; force was used.

Is this to be the fate of the civil rights movement? Is it going to be forced to resort to violence?

There is no class fighting for civil rights. There are no special people fighting for the rights of man or all mankind. Men of God, men of good will, mothers and children, factory workers, and executives are classless people who are fighting for civil rights.

The day before this horrendous incident twenty pesons were arrested for picketing and for placing themselves in front of machinery being used on the project. Brought before Judge James T. Cassidy, they were each placed under $500 bond until their appearance next month before a panel of their peers. At the appearance the judge said, "It's about time some intelligent judge had the guts to take a stand in this matter." This comment was from a so-called impartial, unprejudiced courtroom member.

Is civil rights forever to be stymied by narrow minded government officials?

Let us not forget: at any cost, We shall overcome!!

National Chemistry Contest Open To Undergraduates

A national contest in colloid and surface chemistry is offering attractive prizes to undergraduates for either a research report or a review essay in this field of science. The best essay and the best report will each receive prizes of $500 and the second best $200 each under contest regulations. Honorable mention prizes of $50 each are also provided.

Students at all accredited colleges and universities of the United States and Canada are eligible if they are regular undergraduates on April 1, 1964. In past years winners have come from all parts of both countries and from large universities as well as small colleges.

The contestants enter a report on a project done in undergraduate research or an essay on the subject "The contribution of W. D. Harkins to the theory and experimental technique in the field of monolayers on liquids." The late Prof. Harkins taught for many years at the University of Chicago.

The contest is administered by the University of Southern California and is sponsored by the Continental Oil Company of Houston, Texas, and Ponca City, Oklahoma. Further information and entry blanks may be obtained immediately by writing to Prof. Karol J. Mysels, Chemistry Department, University of Southern California, University Park, Los Angeles, California 90007.

The deadline for submitting entries is July 1, 1964.

University Theatre Needs Properties

Attention UMass community! Does anyone have any of the following articles: 2 telephones, 2 whiskey bottles (any brand — we're not fussy), several "plain drinking glasses", a sheaf of papers, a tennis racket, 2 bottles of orange pop with straws, several cigars, newspapers, a manuscript of a "speech not clipped together", one choice comic book, a small automatic pistol, a .38 caliber revolver with shoulder holster, miscellaneous papers, a stethoscope, and several unused telegram blanks—the latter to be used by the prop girl of University Theatre's upcoming production of All The King's Men to send for help. Help, that is, in finding, arranging, dusting, refreshing, watching, guarding, and ultimately (hopefully) returning all these articles. Each of them plays a significant part in University Theatre's next production. How, you ask, can a bottle of orange pop play a significant part in any play, even if it does have a straw in it. Ah ha! We're not telling and neither is Robert Penn Warren, author of this work placed in contemporary America.

Who said "Seeing is believing"? We agree and so will you if you want to find out just what that bottle of orange pop with a straw does to the characters of Warren's play. See it and believe it in the Student Union Ballroom three weeks from today. (Incidentally, tickets are going fast for this show. Don't wait for the box office to open. Call the Department of Speech now!! Mail orders also accepted. Tickets are $1.50 each.)

Eta Kappa Nu Presents Outstanding Student Award

Eta Kappa Nu, the National Electrical Engineering Honor Society, held their spring semester initiation banquet on the evening of April 8, 1964.

The new initiates included the head of the Department of Electrical Engineering, Dr. G. Dale Sheckels, a professional member who has distinguished himself in his field.

Student initiates were Richard Filmore and James Paulin.

To be eligible for consideration as a student member of Eta Kappa Nu, one must be majoring in Electrical Engineering and be in either the upper quarter of his junior class or the upper third of the senior class.

Membership is not confirmed by academic standing alone; character, professional potential, and leadership qualties are also criteria of membership.

The evening was highlighted by the anual presentation of the Outstanding Student Award, which was presented to Leon W. Heselton by Dr. G. Dale Sheckels.

This year's outstanding senior is active in Tau Beta Pi, the National Engineering Honor Society, I.E.E.E., and Eta Kappa Nu. He was chosen by his classmates and the department faculty. The certificate presented to him states that the recipient has distinguished himself by outstanding leadership, scholarship, and interest shown in his profession and school.

The banquet was climaxed by a speech delivered by Prof. Robert Stanfield of the Department of Sociology.

4 College Courses To Be Offered

Students are permitted to register for courses at the colleges in the Four College area with the permission of their advisors and deans (provost at the University).

Students may consult catalogs at the libraries or at the offices of department chairmen. There are three conditions to be met: (1) the course is one which the student needs; (2) the student is able to carry the course satisfactorily; and (3) there is no similar course at his own institution.

Each year an increasing number of students find that the other colleges provide a desirable supplement to their own college curriculum.

What can an Air Force career mean to you in tangible gain? The opportunity to take on executive responsibilities you might otherwise wait years to attain. And a head-start into one of a wide range of possible careers in the exciting Aerospace Age.

As an Air Force officer, for example, you may be flying a supersonic jet...helping to keep America's guard up. Or you may be in an Air Force laboratory, working to solve an intricate scientific or technological problem.

Doing jobs like these, you can hold your head high. In addition to being essential to your country, they're the beginnings of a profession of dignity and purpose.

INQUIRING COLLEGIAN

ED. NOTE: Yesterday the parents of the freshmen students being initiated into the Honor Society were ambushed in various corners of the Student Union. Their candid comments on the campus are:

In the Hatch—"If I were a student, I'd spend as much time as I could in the Hatch—and also study."

On the Collegian—"I get a big kick out of the editorials. They're controversial but good."

On the campus, Steve Kiupsky volunteered, "I like the Men's Health Ed swimming pool best."

On the people: (visitors from New Jersey) "People are friendlier and easier to get along with."

On sending students to a state university—"The whole family's here."

On the College Bowl—"I'm impressed. "Campus prestige has risen."

On WMUA broadcasting live from the Student Union Lobby—"Good for public relations."

On Housing—"They should accept only as many students as they can room."

On dorms—"There should be restriction in men's dormitories."

On the reporters, "What ever gave you this nutty idea anyway?"

The following parents were interviewed and grilled by Ann Werner and SS and sneakily photographed by Harold Gushue. They are: Mr. Henry Clauss, Mr. Irving Shumann, Mr. Croteau, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bennett, Mr. A. Edward Godek, Mrs. Kaufman, Mrs. Hurbetz, Mr. Lock, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bouley, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sheehan and Roger Lebel.

Boyfriend . . .

This spoof on the period of the Charleston, hip-flasks, coonskin coats and Rudy Vallee was written by Sandy Wilson.

The spiot unfoids in and near a fashionable giris' finishing school on the Riviera in 1926, and concerns a rich man's son who has to earn a living as a hotel page-boy. Page-boy meets giri-pupil, who is also the offspring of wealth. The difference in their stations, of course, complicates their romance—though the audience has never a doubt as to how it will come out!

The cast sings comic, sentimental songs; the male chorus wears white flannels, blazers and straw boaters; the giris wear the flat-chested dropped - waistline monstrosities of the period—as well as the swim-suits of the era when they sing a number called "Sur Le Plage"—and the dances include everything from the Charleston and the tango to tap-step routines in unison.

Margaret McRobbie will play the show's heroine, Polly Brown—the roie in which Julie Andrews made her American debut in the New York production. Peter Fink will be seen as the object of her affection, Tony, the socialite in modest disguise. Elizabeth Cotton, Jerri Siegie, Jean Footit, and Eilen Nathan will be her schoolmates, whose boy friends will be portrayed by Jon Hutton, Ron Julius, Roy Blitzer, and Howard Schlosberg.

Off Campus Housing Eased By New Form

Assignment in hand, I made clock clobbering time to Draper Hall and the doorway designated Housing. Letting my ancestors trail-following instincts dominate, I finally arrived at the Housing office via a series of arrows. Mr. Robert Van Vleet' a very busy man now that President Lederle has announced the acceptance of 4200 freshmen, is the head of the student placement off-campus.

People who still remember the problems of last year with the incomplete dorms, the problems of obtaining permission will be happy to hear that a new one trip dorm has been advised and a more competent housing listing set up. Effective April 15, the Housing Office has new IBM punch cards for housing listings, a very attractive and functional green slip that you complete by merely filling out. The only slight complications are students under 21 must obtain the permission of their parents. Five University Rules are listed. These are:

1. Students live off campus only with the permission of the University. They may be required to return to University Residence Halls if it is in the best interest of all concerned.

2. Students are expected to abide by all written rules of conduct in the University of Massachusetts Bulletin and Handbook.

3. Students must receive clearance from the Men's Housing Officer before making any future changes of off-campus address.

3. Women undergraduate students from the University of Massachusetts are not permitted in the privately rented houses, apartments, or rooms of single men.

The Housing Office even supplies the student with hints on how to arrive at mutual agreements between landlords and tenants. But the Housing Office does not become a party to any agreement nor does it mediate or decide any conflicts that might arise.

Any possible charges of descrimination are looked into and in general the Housing Office does all it can in its powers to help students, married, faculty move offcampus with minimal problems and discomforts.

Any students who are interested in moving off campus next semester should see Mr. Van Vleet as soon as possible to find out what they must do in order to be able to move-off campus without any unnecessary complications.

The Vernacular You Dirty Rats

by INEZ BRAND

What newspaper has a picture of an electric chair on the upper right hand corner of every issue? Answer: The Mentor, publication of Walpole, Mass. correctional institution.

A philosopher in Plato's cave? Among things written in The Mentor's feature column cleverly called "The Walled-Off Astoria" was this little item: "Henry (Bones) Bunt has taken to reading the Bible every night before retiring. Some say that maybe ol' Bones is cramming for his finals."

The oldest piece of music extant in the English language is "Sumer Is Icumen In". It was composed at Reading Abbey in the 13th century.

Another case of "you dirty rat" has been exposed by the Los Angeles county clerk. Entering the narcotics evidence storeroom, he found dozens of happy hyped-up rodents munching on marijuana. Upon being discovered, the culprets didn't mickey-mouse around. They growled and charged, forcing the clerk to flee the scene of the crime. The clerk then called the county exterminator who laid out poison. All those poor iittle mice died like rats. Morai: Justice will prevail.

Bowling enthusiasts, did you know that in the third century, your game was a kind of religious exercise? Clergymen in Germany encouraged the laity to "keigel" the "Heide"—club the heathen—by throwing a ball at a set of pine representing pagans. A high score ment the bowler was leading a good life.

Sporty Massachusetts Review fans may be interested in trying the Irish game of road bowling, in which a stone is rolled from one town to another.

Having trouble finding textbooks? Count your blessings. In the Middle Ages, textbooks could only be rented, not bought, because of their scarcity. Moreever, it was a crime for anyone to take his books home with him when he graduated.

Judith Karafin will appear as Mme. Dubonnet, the headmistress of their French school. Ed Cole will be Percy. Dick Morril and Sharon Williams will play Lord and Lady Brockhurst. Others in the cast include Penny Eskot, Betty Costa, and David Bachmann.

UMass And Butterworth Place In New Englands

Culminating four years of intercollegiate firing, Team Captain Harold F. Butterworth won the high individual award at Hanscom Air Force Base, Bedford, Massachusetts on Saturday, March 21, 1964 with a score of 294 out of a possible 300. Butterworth's performance was his best of a distinguished shooting career for the Redmen as he fired a perfect kneeling score of 100.

The top two teams in each division of the New England Conference Rifle League, North, Central, and South, met to determine the final New England rankings in a six team tournament. The Redmen and the sharpshooters from Maine represented the Central Group placing first and second respectively during the year's battle for Yankee Conference supremacy.

Another UMass Rifleman, Alfred J. Davis continued heavily to the team outcome by firing a 286. Also in the category of high scorers was James T. Carswell with a respectable 283. Homer Davis and Michael Greene anchored the team with 279 and 277 respectively. The team score of 1419 was the highest fired by the Redmen in shoulder to shoulder competition this year and counterbalanced the disappointing performance of the squad in the National Rifle Association Sectionals held at the US Coast Guard Academy on March 7, 1964 when UMass placed teams in 6th and 8th positions in the sixteen team tournament. The score also enabled the team to better their fifth place record of last year by edging out M.I.T. by a one point margin.

With the final round of the 1963-64 season fired the team is looking forward towards continued improvement next year with three men graduating and seven returning. Coach Roy Fowler made the comment that the team still needs talent if it is to continue the high standards established in recent years. The top six teams in the NECRL all had yearly averages of above 1400 per match in a field of twenty one teams. Additionally, a contract has just been signed committing UMass to fire against West Point, one of the nation's finest groups in rifle firing. It was pointed out that all male undergraduates are eligible to try out for the team. Those interested in riflery should contact Capt Fowler at the Military Department in Dickinson Hall. A little known fact is the existence of a woman's Rifle Team sponsored by the ROTC Instructor Group for those female undergraduates who wish to develop or continue previous rifle firing experience.

pretty well determined by how the field events turn out. If the team can keep even in the field events, the strength in the running events should be enough to enable the team to defeat most opponents. This Saturday will be the Redmen's first test, as New Hampshire beat them at the Yan. Con. Indoor Championships this year. If the team expects to stand a chance of producing as fine a record as was turned out last year they must defeat New Hampshire.

single to right. Jim Kuczynski was hit by a pitch, and off an attempted bunt by Piken, Nordberg was forced at third. Yando grounded slowly between third and short and the ball was dropped at second to fill the sacks. Hanna's replacement who had been working well, Dennis Parker, then struck out pinch hitter Mike Brita. After that it was all Apicella.

The ninth saw Coast Guard retired without any threat as Piken continued to baffle the opposition with a combination of pitches. The batters never had a chance to really get set against him. All of the trouble he got into was from his early unsteadiness, but he looked great in the last four innings.

Gymnastics Second At Salem

Sunday, March 22nd, members of the University of Massachusetts Gymnastic Teams participated in the New England Open Gymnastic Championships at Salem State College in Salem, Massachusetts. The meet was open to all gymnasts in the New England area, and many high school standouts competed along with gymnasts from the University, Springfield College and Southern Connecticut State College.

Captain David Williams placed second in the all-around competition and third on the side horse. The only other local medal winner was former captain David Yates who placed third on the high bar in addition to a sixth place finish in floor exercise. Other place winners were: David Lizotte, 4th in floor exercise, Dan St. John sixth in side horse and Williams 5th in parallel bars and rings. Other participants for UMass were Stan Brallier, Felix Mosakewicz and graduate student Ernest Furblur. As a team the Redmen placed second to Springfield College. The highlight of the men's competition was Eastern and National champion Russel Mills winning routine on the side horse. Mills, a senior at Yale, is rated by many as the best side horse man in the world. The New England Judges confirmed that as they rated his exercise a 9.7 out of a possible 10.

Five members of the girls gymnastic club also participated in the meet. Although only one place was taken, the inexperienced team represented themselves very well and gained much valuable experience for the future. The one place winner was Barbara Albert '67, who placed sixth in vaulting. Other participants were Elaine Baxter '64, Charlyn Webster '66, Christine Dzioba, '67, and Marjorie Smith '67. Marianne Davis '67, the sixth member of the team which met Springfield College in a dual meet earlier in the year, did not participate due to an injury.

It is very difficult to win when the opponent can come up with 7 goals a game. Also the offense is missing a good deal of their shots.

Next Saturday Bowdoin visits the University. Last year in the first game played between the teams the Redmen came up with a 13-2 victory. The game starts at 2:00.

Little Redmen Prepare; Meet Maroons In Opener

Freshmen baseball hopes of bettering last year's 7-1-1 record hinge on Wednesday's opener at Springfield College. The Little Maroons were the fly in the ointment of Coach Dick Bergquist's UMass frosh last season when the Redmen received their tie in the home opener and the loss at Springfield in the season's finale. This season the squad doesn't appear as strong at the 1963 edition, but Coach Bergquist feels a win against the Maroons will start his team off in good shape for the coming season.

Though the opener is only two days away, the starting lineup is still very much in doubt. Practice opened with 60 candidates and now the squad is down to the final 21, but the starting jobs are up for grabs. The roster carries six pitchers, five catchers, seven infielders, and only three outfielders. The pitching corps is headed by righty Carl Boteze of Pittsfield and Roy Lasky, a 6'4" left hander from Wilbraham. Jeff Bell, Ken Ohlson, and Bill Russell will also see hill duty for the freshmen as will Mike Russo, a good pitcher who presently has arm trouble.

Catching should present no problems since there are five candidates from which Bergquist can draw. Ray Johnson, last fall the freshman football quarterback, Bill Breen, Buddy Kruse, Gil Silva, and Don Tudryn all are fighting for the number one slot, but at least one is likely to be converted into an outfielder to help fill a weak spot there.

Another place where there is a surplus of ball players is the infield. Bergquist has seven choices for the four positions though Jim Babyak, star of the frosh basketball team will see only limited duty. Bill Kirrane has a good chance at shortstop, but none of the slots are clinched yet. Others in the running are Charles Dever, Larry Liederman, Ed Polchlopek, Bill Skowyra, and Ron Sroczynski.

Marc Greenberg, Jeff Whitney, and Frank Stewart are the only listed outfielders on the roster, but the reserves at the other positions will provide the bench strength. Stewart, another basketball player, is the brother of Dick Stewart who is on Earl Lorden's varsity nine.

After the Wednesday game at Springfield Coach Bergquist will have a better idea on what his lineup for the season will be. The home opener will be Saturday against Leicester Junior College with a contest against the Amherst frosh on the following Saturday.

Sailing Team Ties Coast Guard

Sunday morning the sailing team traveled to the Coast Guard Academy to participate in the first regatta of its history. The team, not knowing what to expect, made a good name for itself by ending up with a tie for third place with Coast Guard, in a seven school field.

With a brisk 15-24 knot breeze, Chuck Peters and Doug Pearsail alternated at the helm of the Coast Guard's 24 foot sloops, the Raven. Since course was triangular with a long leeward leg, the agile foredeck men Pete Schaffer and Andy Hanson, used the spinnaker, a tricky sail to great advantage.

The day's high point for the UMass sailors was Doug Pearsall's skippering his boat to first place in race number five. After an excellent start, UMass rounded the windward mark close astern Harvard and downwind of Coast Guard and Brown.

Redmen Down Coast Guard, Overcome Early Deficit; 8-7

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts got the regular season off to a good start as the Redmen baseball team downed the Coast Guard, 8-7, in an uphill battle. The game featured the team coming back from a 7-2 deficit after 4½ innings of play.

Joe Apicella was the big hero for the Redmen as he lined the first pitch to him for a two run single in the bottom of the eighth to put the club on top. The bases were loaded and two were out when Apicella came through in championship style.

Neither starting pitcher, Mike Johnson of UMass nor Bob Hanna of Coast Guard were around at the conclusion of the game, and neither figured in the decision.

UMass scored its first runs in a decisive manner. Bill Crane hit a fly to right-center that fell in for a double. Apicella got an infield hit and John Awdycki drove in the first run with a base hit. Dennis Della Piana followed with a single to drive in the other run.

Johnson started off by retiring the first nine batters that faced him as he recorded five strikeouts. But then in the top of the fourth inning the roof fell in. Johnson hit Don Polk, Ron Davies lined a single to center, Win Risinger lined out to left and Johnson retired Bill Thompson on a slow grounder. Bob Walker then lined a single to right and Coast Guard tied the game at 2-2.

The fifth saw the end of Johnson. John Curran opened with a single and was sacrificed to second by Hanna. Polk walked and Davies singled. The relay from Awdyckl to Jim Kuczynski got by the third baseman and two more runs were across.

Ross Piken then replaced Johnson. Risinger greeted him with a broken bat single to drive in another run. Thompson and Walker walked to load the bases. Tom Livingston hit a ground ball that scored a run, and when the ball got passed Karl Kamena another tally crossed the plate. Piken then got himself out of trouble to end the inning with the score 7-2.

DENNIS DELLA PIANA singled sharply to drive in second run of the game. Della Piana and Nordberg represent strong 1-2 sophomore punch.

Mass got two in the bottom of the fifth. After Bill Crane walked, Apicella hit into a fielder's choice. John Awdyckl hit a long double, and Della Piana followed with a single, and the score was 7-4.

Mass had Hanna hanging now, and removed him from the scene with two more runs in the last of the sixth. After hitting two real long flies earlier in the game, Al Nordberg finally had one fall in, or rather out, as it landed along the right field line and hit the hedge at the 377 foot mark for a triple. Piken reached first on a swinging bunt down the third base line. Coach Lorden then went to his bench and used Neil Harris as a pinch hitter. The senior letterman came through with flying colors as he tripled to right-center and Mass was only a run down.

Piken, meanwhile, had settled down considerably, surrendering harmless singles to Risinger and Walker in the sixth and seventh. Mass didn't score in the seventh and Piken went to work on the Coast Guard. He struck out the first man, and followed by striking out the second, but a passed ball by Ray Yando put this man on first. Piken walked Polk, then proceeded to strike out two more men to record four for the single inning.

Mass got the deciding eighth going when Al Nordberg rifled a

Lacrossemen Dumped As Brown Shines

by MORRIS SHUBOW

It was Greek Weekend and the UMass lacrosse team played host to Eastern power Brown. The weather was ideal and a good Saturday afternoon crowd was present for the eighth meeting between the two Universities with the series tied at 3-3-1. Unfortunately for the Redmen the big, swift, and powerful Bruins played an almost flawless game to come up with an 8-1 victory despite the absence of their star midfielder Tom Draper who was out with an ankle injury.

The game was close for the first period with Brown holding a 2-0 lead at the end of the period. At 2:18 of the 2nd period Mike Healey scored his second goal for Brown making the score 3-0. Then at 5:20 Fred Thompson of the Redmen set up Charlie Glew alone in front of the goal and Charlie fired his shot past Bruin goalie Dick Alter for the goal. The score was 3-1 but Brown came back in 10 seconds with another goal by Healey and from then on the game was all Brown.

The score was 5-1 at halftime and Brown added 2 goals in the third period and one in the 4th to make the final score 8-1.

Mike Healey who had 10 goals and 9 assists coming into the game got 4 goals Saturday to lead his team. Bob Seiple and Chris Eustis each had two goals for the Bruins. John Parry, Brown's All-East end in football, looked right at home on the lacrosse field playing a fine game.

The Redmen as evidenced by this game and the 7-2 loss to Wesleyan on Wednesday will have to tighen up their defense.

Trackmen Open Vs. UNH Prospects Bright

by GENE COLBURN

The Varsity spring track team will open its 1964 season this Saturday when it takes on New Hampshire at Alunmi Field, starting at 1 p.m. Last year the Redmen compiled a 7-1 record and this year's team will be hard pressed to equal it. Although the team will field a strong running team, it is hurting in the field events.

The main cause for the Redmen's weakness in the field events can be summed up in one word—inexperience. In the javelin, both Phil DeLue and Eric Mussen are sophomores, while Dan Connors is a junior. Doug Renwick, a junior, will carry the team's hopes in both the discus and the shot-put. Milt Morin will also be competing in both events, but he will be limited by spring football practice. The same is true of Bob Ellis, who is slated to compete in the high jump and the broad jump. Sophomore Dick Karagosian will represent UMass in the 16 lb. hammer.

Sophomore John Mederios will once again carry a heavy load, as he is to compete in the high jump, broad jump, triple jump and the dashes. In the dashes with Mederios will be sophomores Doug Sloane and Ed Cody. This trio should prove hard to beat. The hurdles have perenially been a weak event for UMass, but this year could see a switch. John Harrington and Ed Cord will compete in the high hurdles. In the 440 yard intermediate hurdles, a new event this year because of the Olympics, sophomore Bob Larson has looked really good and should prove to be very tough to beat.

In the 440 yard run, senior Craig Erickson and sophomore Doug Sloane will carry the Redmen's hopes, with strong backing from junior Basil Robinson and sophomore Jim Collins. Erickson ran a :50.5 quarter last year, and should break 50 this year, with Doug Sloane right with him. In the 880 senior Bob Pendelton and sophomore Bob Molvar will be the best. Both boys are strong runners and should do well. Sophomore Dan Campfield and senior Gene Colburn will give the boys strong backing.

The mile and 2 mile will once again be the Redmen's strongest events. Senior Bob "Digger" Brouillet, the greatest distance runner ever to carry UMass colors, will be seeking to go to the Nationals and to get a chance to qualify for the Olympic trials this summer. "Digger" will compete in both the 1 mile and 2 mile, as well as juniors Tom Panke and Bob Ramsey. Senior Jim Wrynn will be running in the mile, as well as an occasional 880 or 2 mile. This group of boys should prove very tough to beat.

The track team's future will be

New Buildings Constructed To Serve Expanding Campus

The University, expanding at the rate of 1,00 students a year, has $16,000,000 in building construction now under way, and a number of new buildings in the planning stage, many of which are included in the model prepared by the master planning consultant firm of Sasaki Walker and Associates of Watertown.

CURRENTLY UNDER CONSTRUCTION are an addition to the physics building, scheduled for completion this May; the School of Business Administration building with its two auditoriums, also to be completed this May; the fourth and final section of the Justin Morrill Science Center, to be completed for on a self-liquidatoing basis.

Construction will begin in the near future on the addition to Machmer Hall, classroom and faculty office building. Preliminary plans have been approved on the new administration building, and it is expected that it will be completed in 1966.

BIDS WILL BE RECEIVED shortly on the new dormitory complex that will include two 22-story dormitories, four regular dormitories and a dining commons. Work will begin as soon as possible on this new living area, to be located on the southwest corner of the campus.

The Master Planning Committee has a number of construction plans for the next few years under consideration. These include the Fine Arts Center to be designed by Eero Saarinen Associates and completed by March, 1968; addition to the current liberal arts building, Bartlett Hall, to be built by January, 1967; a research center to be completed by September of 1967; a continuing education center; a Nuclear and Chemical Engineering building; a life Sciences building; a School of Nursing, and a plant science building.

The majority of these buildings will be built with funds approved by the State Legislature.

in August, 1965; an addition to the Food Science and Technology building that should be completed around February, 1965; and an engineeroing building that will be ready early in 1966.

Also, four seven-story dormitories and a new dining commons are now under construction and due for completion late this summer. Construction on the new football stadium will get under way this June. These three projects are being built at no cost to the taxpayer under the University of Massachusetts Building Authority, a special agency established by the Legislature to provide certain University facilities to be paid

Dr. Oswald Tippo Named Provost, UMass Chief Academic Officer

Dr. Oswald Tippo, outstanding educator and scientist, has been named Provost of the University.

In his position as Provost, Dr. Tippo will serve as chief academic officer. Dr. Tippo comes to the University from New York University where he is Executive Dean of Arts and Science. He will take up his new post as Provost and professor of botany on June 1.

According to Pres. Lederle, the University conducted a nation-wide search to fill the Provost's position vacated in December 1963 by Dr. Gilbert L. Woodside, who left UMass to join the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development in Bethseda, Maryland.

DR. OSWALD TIPPO

A GRADUATE OF UMASS in 1932, Dr. Tippo has had extensive administrative and teaching experience in major public and private institutions of higher learning.

After receiving his M.A. degree in botany and Ph.D. degree in biology at Harvard University and teaching there and at Radcliffe College, Dr. Tippo joined the faculty of the University of Illinois as an instructor in botany. There he advanced from the position of instructor to professor, acting head of the department of botany, chairman of the department of botany and then chairman of the Division of Biological Sciences. In 1953 he was

J.F.K. Memorial Well Supported By Campus

by RICHARD RYAN

After a week of operations, Art Labrie '65 and Sandi Knight '65, co-chairmen of the Student John F. Kennedy Memorial Committee, say they are enthusiastic about the progress of the fund-raising drive to establish a John F. Kennedy Memorial Reading Room on campus.

According to Art Labrie, individual student donations are rapidly mounting at the Kennedy Memorial Reading Room booth in the lobby of the S.U. Many students who pass by the booth dig into their pockets and donate whatever money they can, whether it be twenty-five, fifty cents, or a dollar. Others contribute enough money to buy a specific book that they would like to donate.

Many of the faculty are contributing to the Student Memorial Committee. In a method of giving a book popular with faculty members, Professor Arnold Silver of the English department donated several books from his private library.

All the books in the Kennedy Memorial Reading Room are from the White House Library collection, one of the most comprehensive collections of books by and about Americans. The collection covers 32 categories including such diverse ones as military science, literature and land and agriculture.

Sandi Knight, co-chairman of the Student Memorial Committee and a member of the Pan-Hellenic Council, states that almost all of the student organizations on campus are donating at least one book, and most are donating several, to be placed in the Kennedy Memorial Reading Room. The Women's Interdorm Council, for instance, has donated three books.

Many of the student organizations are giving unrestricted gifts to the Student Memorial Committee, the largest so far being the $500 gift of the Interfraternity Council. The Senior class has donated $50 in a similar manner.

The election for the Senators at Large of the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman classes will be held tomorrow in the Student Union lobby from 8:30-5:45.

Hoot To Benefit Retarted Children

A folk festival for the benefit of retarded children in Hampshire County will be held at 8 p.m. on Friday, April 17 at Northampton High School and Saturday, April 18 at Amherst Regional High School.

The Valley Hoot, sponsored by the Hampshire County Association, will feature singers from the four-college and Pioneer Valley area. All styles of folk music from blues and ballads to bluegrass will be represented.

THE HOOT FEATURES Win Fay and the Ridge Runners, and the Cumberland Mountain Folk. The University is represented by the Pelham Hill Log Jammers, the Hillside Singers from Boston, Ann Baxter and Gail Fratar.

The Pelham Hill Log Jammers are a group comprised of six students: Ronnie Reynolds, Don Eaton, Jim Byrnes, Dave Cain, Bob Wilfong, and Taj Mahal—plus a variety of instruments. Ann Baxter and Gail Frater have both been active in campus folk-singing for several years.

A donation of $.99 is requested ($.50 for children under 12), proceeds to go to the Hampshire County for Retarded Children. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Senate Is Asked To Censure Jones

by ELWIN McNAMARA

For the second time in this legislative year, members of the Student Senate will be asked to censure Senate Treasurer Ross Jones.

The motion, initiated by Sen. Ethan Pollack ('64 Wheeler) states simply: "Moved that the Student Senate censure Ross P. Jones."

Sen. Pollack told the Collegian that "the converter bill was handled in such a manner that information was withheld from the Senate in order to assure the bill's passage."

The "converter bill", passed by the Senate two weeks ago, appropriated $450 for research and devlopment of a converter prototype. This was to be set up in various dorms across campus in order to determine whether such a system would be feasible.

Is Censure Necessary

We have heard that the Student Senate will be asked to consider a motion tonight which calls for the censure of Senator Ross Jones (Brett).

We believe that such a motion can do no good for the Senate and, if passed, can only do harm to a man who has been one of the most able and hardworking of Senators, as well as a very efficient Treasurer.

It is unfortunate that such a motion should come before the Senate. A motion for censure carries with it a connotation which Senator Jones does not deserve. The small minority trying to push this bill through would do well to remember that, in addition to traditional rights, it also has certain obligations. One of these is responsibility.

Editor's Notebook

Cruising For One

from AXEL

The other day I walked by the Senate office. That's funny. Did you ever walk by the Senate Office (second floor Student Union)? Well it's funny I tell you. It's like walking by a battle field—Senators mapping stategies in one corner; Senators whispering rumors over an amplifier from another corner; Senators planning an Ides of April for other senators in a third corner.

Well I'm running out of corners to describe . . . but I don't think I've run out of causes to decry. The purpose and necessity of our Student Senate have been on my mind since I first attended a Wednesday night meeting, early in my Freshman year. Now, with more knowledge of what the Senate does, I still question its need.

This year has been a rough one for the corps. Personality squabbles and bills for internal reconstruction dominate the floor of the Senate. The number of achievements that have been made of benefit to the student body seem few in light of time spent; in the light of funds and personnel available.

More important, the few actions of note that the Senate has made could probably have been made more efficiently by another form of student-representative body. The Senate, if it continues at its present rate, may find itself up for appraisal by its constituents.

I can picture a group, somewhat akin to the present RSO Committee, that could do most of the Senate's present labors without the present duplication of effort. The present RSO Committee already spends much of its time doing things that are needlessly forwarded to the Senate for token approval.

Proposing abolishment of the Student Senate is dangerous business. My ideas for a student-representative body to replace the Senate may not be feasible. I would advise you to attend tonight's Senate meeting and make your own judgment.

The Sex Hex (Conclusion)

by KENNETH FEINBERG

With the construction of the new dormitories nearing completion, the question of visiting hours in dormitories has, once again, become a subject of conversation. The critics are divided into two camps, those that feel the University should follow a policy similar to those initiated at Harvard and Brandeis, allowing the female sex to visit boys' dormitories at specified hours, and those that argue parietal hours increase sexual freedom on campus, pointing to the increased tension between administration and student body at Harvard. From this maze of bickering a few objective conclusions are discernible.

The primary problem here at the University is the dormitory system itself, and for this reason the administration frowns on the parietal theory. The advantages and disadvantages of the factory system of housing evident on campus will not be discussed here, but the system differs widely from the exclusive housing evident at Ivy League schools. Seven story dorms with three students to a room personify the problem and the spaciousness of the rooms does not support the parietal argument.

However, the theory of the less restricted sex, advocated by critics as a reason for the present policy, is invalid and should be discarded. One may be opposed to visiting hours in dormitories because of the nature of the housing system, NOT because it will increase sexual integration on campus. To those critics I stress the fact that love in a room at Greenough might be an invigorating experience for them, but it hardly offers the couple involved the environment they deserve. Support of administrative policy should not mean belittling the intelligence quotient of the student body. Here lies the tension producing mechanism.

Morrissey Reports Student Pay Raise

To the Editor:

Re: "Substandardized'

We have felt concern for the 90¢ per hour minimum for on-campus student employment, and several weeks ago the Administration approved $1.00 as the minimum wage for part-time student work in the next fiscal year (starting July 1, 1964).

Over the years the office of Placement & Financial Aid has maintained close contact with many colleges and universities in the northeast and has usually found the student wages here on a par with the majority of these institutions.

By the very nature of this office, Placement & Financial Aid, we are keenly aware of the financial assistance that part-time student employment can be. We would also like to think that students learn through these work situations, regardless of how menial some of them might be, for many of the situations that crop up are typical of what will be found when you are in full employment following graduation (i.e. the never ending employee-employer concern over wages).

Married Student Protests University Housing Policy

To the Editor:

With the installation of the new mail boxes, adding to the many improvements to County Circle it would seem that the efforts of the married students were not in vain.

Many of our needed improvements were realized, but the plea for more married-student housing was disregarded. Instead, forty-four single students were installed on the second floor of Hampshire House and ominously the very installation of the mail boxes, seventy-four in each building, spells definite doom to the remaining fifty married-students' apartments.

While Harvard is in the process of building 499 apartments in a three building complex and other Universities around the country are busy building new married student facilities, our great State University is in the process of converting its only undergraduate married-student housing to single-student housing. Why does the Administration find it necessary to take these buildings away from married students? At the present, are the 60 apartments in these two buildings that crucial for single student housing? The University has dropped all plans for building more married-student housing.

Does the Administration, like the Dean of a new University in California, think by not having married-student housing available they are going to stop students from marrying? For educated men to be thinking like an ostrich does seem rather silly. Many of the country's married students do get married while both are attending college, but many more are those who after years of marriage and military obligation completed, come to the campus to continue or start their education, undergraduate and/or graduate. At the University of Massachusetts last year, according to the Student Directory, there were 735 married students; this year there are 1,545, a 100% increase.

Since at Lincoln Apartments, Junior Faculty has preference, it is hard for an undergraduate to get housing here, beside which the price is more than many can pay. Moreover the apartments in town are so high priced compared to their size and value that couples who cannot find housing at the University are forced to move a considerable distance from the campus. A State University should plan to provide housing for all segments of its students, undergraduate, graduate and married student.

As a student wife I am just asking that the future married students of Massachusetts be given the same chance at an education as those in the past have had. Even with the many loans and scholarships available, money is still the biggest problem a married student has.

I do hope that the Married Student at the University of Massachusetts does not become the victim of bureaucratic efficiency.

Re: Sacrifice At Cleveland

To the Editor,

Re: Luchan's Editorial

I am not certain what the writer of "Sacrifice At Cleveland" was trying to point out in his article, but it appeared to be an accusation against the police, the "all-mighty" school board of Cleveland, and the construction company that was building a contested school.

If a man has the foolishness to crawl under the BACK of a bulldozer where no one can see him, then he deserves to be killed. The man driving that machine had no idea that the Rev--erend was in back of him, as was heard over nation-wide radio; so the fault lies not with his but with the man now dead.

Civil Rights is an issue in which all people must sooner or later be involved. The one thing that Mr. Luchans does not seem to realize is that passionate, misinformed articles on Civil Rights will appeal only to those whose minds cannot really work for themselves.

Should we let the Civil Rights groups riot and not the pseudo-Nazis and the Communists or any other group wishing to promote a cause?

According to the principles of Ghandi, violence is to be fought with peace and understanding and love. If we note the Indian Freedom movement, the Indians were jailed, beaten, and sometimes killed. They fought for what they believed in as are the people fighting for the Civil Rights movement in our country. I am proud of my fellow Americans who are fighting for a true and honorable goal. I hope that I may have the strength of my convictions to do as they are doing and defend my fellow Americans, be they black or white, Jew or Christian, in any worthwhile cause. The Civil Rights issue is a great one. I pray that it will succeed. I will give to it anything in my power to give, but I will not stoop to writing articles such as the one I had the misfortune of reading in Monday's Collegian.

Mr. Luchans, let us not condemn a police force for breaking up a possible riot, let us not degrade a school board for building a school, any school, and least of all let us not accuse a man of playing God and taking away a life that he probably never knew was under his machine. Let's have peace and understanding for our brothers. We can fight segregation and the other denials of Civil Rights, but let's do it right. Work for laws not riots, peace not death and misery, love not hate and bitterness. You, Mr. Luchans, myself, and every other American who believes in our cause.

ATTN. CLASS OF '65

To the class of 1965,

I am writing this letter because I enjoyed serving the class as secretary during the sophomore and junior year, and because of my decision to marry and finish my schooling elsewhere. I would like someone who is interested and capable, to fill the office during the important senior year.

Until just recently, no one had taken out nomination papers for this post. I would like all those who are eligible to be aware that the position is open, and that there is a special extension for those applying for this position. The nomination papers will now be due April 16, at 5:00.

I would urge everyone who is interested to take out nomination papers as soon as possible.

College Of Agriculture Combines Departments

Consolidation of five departments in the College of Agriculture at the University of Massachusetts into two new departments emphasizing the plant and animal sciences was announced this week by Pres. John W. Lederlé.

Effective July 1, the present departments of agronomy and horticultural science will be combined into a department of Plant and Soil Sciences. The departments of veterinary science, poultry science and dairy and animal science will be consolidated into a department of Veterinary and Animal Sciences.

This action continues the reorganization and revision of curricula approved by the Board of Trustees last year. The College of Agriculture Advisory Council, made up of outstanding leaders of the Massachusetts agricultural industry, gave early endorsement to the reorganization plan.

Since the fall semester of 1963, the major undergraduate programs of agronomy and horticultural science have been consolidated into a single major curriculum. The same has been true of programs in poultry science and dairy and animal science.

The objective of the administrative consolidation is to do a more efficient and distinctive job of academic teaching, research and extension in the soil, animal, veterinary and food sciences, according to Arless A. Spielman, dean of the College of Agriculture. Advantages expected to result from consolidation include:

—accelerated development of basic research and Ph.D. programs in the areas of plant and animal genetics, nutrition and physiology by bringing together staff with similar scientific training and interests.

—greater efficiency through the use of nonprofessional employees, land, farm machinery, teaching and research laboratories, and expensive scientific equipment.

—enhancement of academic quality and productiveness resulting from close departmental association of faculty with similar scientific training and professional goals.

Dr. Franklin W. Southwick, currently head of the department of horticultural science, will be appointed head of the new department of Plant and Soil Sciences. Dr. Thomas W. Fox, presently head of the department of poultry science will be appointed head of the new department of Veterinary and Animal Sciences.

Fellowship Grant Awarded To Business Professor

Dr. Pao Lun Cheng, professor of finance in the School of Business Administration, has been awarded a faculty research fellowship by the Ford Foundation.

The fellowship covers one year and begins Sept. 1, this year.

Dr. Cheng will study financial firms—banks, savings and loan associations, and insurance companies—throughout the Northeast, collecting data for a planned computer model of competition among financial institutions.

The results of this theoretical study should enable the UMass professor to evaluate the impact of competition on the flow of investments and savings.

The Ford Foundation fellowships are awarded on a competitive basis to faculty members of accredited business schools offering advanced degrees.

Dr. Cheng's award is one of 20 full-stipend fellowships which were available for the entire U.S. and Canada.

Since he came to the UMass School of Business Administration in 1958 from Michigan State University, Dr. Cheng has received several fellowship grants, including summer research workshops at Carnegie Institute of Technology and the University of California.

MEN SHOULD RESERVE SOON FOR ROOMS

Men who wish to reserve their present room for next year may do so by arrangement with their Head of Residence before April 16, 1964. Rooms not reserved at this time will be made available to others in the building on a class priority basis.

Residents who wish to reserve a different room in the same residence hall may do so through the Head of Residence before April 23.

Due to the necessity of providing space for incoming freshmen in each residence hall, it will not be possible to approve moves between present buildings. Reservations will be accepted, however, for the new residence halls located in the upper northeast section of campus.

USIA Man Visits Univ. On Monday

The mission of USIA is to explain and generate popular support overseas for U.S. foreign policies. This program is carried out in 106 countries.

Students who apply for the USIA foreign service must be 21 years of age as of December 5, when they will be given a full day's written examination. Those who pass will later be given an hour and a half oral examination by a panel of senior foreign service officers. Appointments are afterwards made at salaries ranging from $6,185 to $7,710.

The Show You Save May Be Your Own

The plaque over the control-board reads "No one would dare bomb this place and end this confusion." An announcer is leaning back in a chair with his feet propped up. "It's a relaxed show" says Norm Sky as he puts down the coke and turns his mike on. Pete Johnson, busying cueing up a record, nods as he prepares the news and weather forecasts. Pete and Norm bring you WMUA's Potpourre every Saturday, 1-4. It's one of the most casual and interesting shows around. A cut from Allen Sherman, a golden goodie, comments on campus and you know it's Potpourre.

SPEAR HEARS: Girls—H.E.R. Weekend is fast approaching. The girls at WMUA have taken over for the boys and will be cleaning the station for Open House. But the boys will be glad to show you around. Our Observation Room lets you see shows in progress, the teletype promises to tick away as loud and as fast as it can and the record libe holds the promise to have more records every time you come to visit. Just in case May 2 is too much in the future, drop in to the Engineering Building today. Spring is here, so we'll open the door and let you in too.

Bill First—an apology for misunderstood comments in the column last week.

ALWAYS FILLED with campus spirit, this Thursday's Musicale will feature Brahm's "Academic Test Overture."

Sunday will initiate a four week series on Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the B.S.O. for 25 years. Historical recordings by this team will be spotlighted from 8-10.

Rock 'n roll fans of the 50's and 60's don't pine away—we've got just the show for you, or Norm Precourt does on the Old Tunes Show Fridays from 7-8. He and Ken Moon (who alternates with Jim O'Hearn on Crazy Rhythms directly after Norm's show) will be featuring the same artist—today and yesterday. Don't just remember the songs of yesterday—hear them by dialing 2425.

WMUA regrets to announce that we have not gone AM-FM but may be heard AM only in dorms using a converter.

This Saturday the new F.C.C. regulation requiring third class licenses goes into effect. Station members who have not obtained this license are asked to sign the sheet at the station. A field representative of the Boston F.C.C. will come to the campus to administer the test if we obtain enough names. Remember: The show you save may be your own.

COLLEGIAN NEEDS STAFF!

BAGELS & BLARNEY

UMies In Hootennany

by DAVE GITELSON and DICK DOHERTY

LAST SATURDAY EVENING I had the pleasure of attending a concert given by Odetta at Smith College. Singing everything from traditional southern blues and work songs to charming childrens' rhymes, she displayed the versatility and style that has made her so reknowned in the field of folk music. Appearing before a mixed group of adults, college students, and a surprising number of children, she was so overwhelmingly received that time after time she was obliged to reappear for encorse. As we left the auditorium, we overheard many comments that the concert was one of the finest ever presented in the area, and we're inclined to agree.

THIS SATURDAY evening a hootenany for the benefit of retarded children will be presented at the Amherst Regional High School. Featured will be many of the best groups in the four-college area. Among the representatives from UMass will be the Pelham Hill Log Jammers, the Hillside Singers, Ann Baxter, and Gail Fratar. The cause is worthwhile, and the program itself should prove to be most enjoyable, so we're urging as many of you as possible to attend. We hope to be there.

OLD BAGELS, NEW BLARNEY: This column is designed to keep the student body as well informed of the current folk scene as is possible, but we need your help. If you have any specific questions, or would like information on any subject within this field, we would appreciate it if you would drop us a line in care of the Collegian, or see us personally.

Burned Shoes, Nylons And Buckets - ROTC

Burning shoes, putting nylons in hats, or toting buckets of sand may seem an unusual formula for success—but according to the University of Massachusetts' Flying Redmen, such things have helped them take top honors in 11 of the 12 years they have vied in New York-New England Championships.

Burning their shoes in a trick the Air Force Cadets soon learn. At the hands of veterans drillers, the novice "prima donnas" are shown that burning the lacquer on a new pair of shoes does not ruin them.—On the contrary, the heat treatment causes the leather pores to fill in and, after a few hours of painstaking waxing and buffing, a "spit shine" can be developed which can pass the supreme test: Drill Team Commander, Warren M. Vanderburgh can see his visage mirrored.

The nylon stocking's purpose is practical. Most of the Redmen manage to acquire a nylon somewhere, without begging one from mother. Tucked into their caps, the nylons reveal no bulge there and, when a last minute shoe touch up is needed, the nylons are handy for dusting without scratching the glassy finish. While admitting the usefulness of the nylons, cadets are quiet about the supply source, remarking only that, "Our supply sergeant can get us most everything, but he can't seem to find authorization to procure the nylons.

"Spit shining" shoes is Cadet James Leffler, Lexington, as teammate Edward W. Hansen, Dracut, concentrates in shaping his cap (installing a nylon to be dragged out for a hasty polish job?).

What has a bucket of sand got to do with the Flying Redmen? "The sand bucket appears at the beginning of the training," pointed out the team commander. "When commands are issued and a cadet momentarily reacts with the wrong foot, wrong hand or turns in the wrong direction, he gets the bucket and carries it until we're sure he knows, without thinking, which is left or right."

Several hours a week for the first month, the trainees are put through a rigorous basic drill", concerned with regular marching. The team begins to learn the more complicated movements: how to spin to the right, left or to the rear; how to maneuver in a "rip" — a trick to the rear move; how to execute a "freeze" to the rear motion.

Student Leaders Night will be held Thursday, April 28, at 7 p.m. at the Cage. It is open to the public without charge.

Should freshmen use it, too?

(They'd probably let it go to their heads)

But then, wouldn't any man? If he suddenly found all those starry-eyed gals looking at him? So, if you think you can handle it, go ahead, use SHORT CUT! It'll tame the wildest crew cut, brush cut, any cut; give it more body, more life. Keep it under control. And make you look great! Space Allowed To Commuters In North Lot

Six Commuter Senators, in conjunction with the Non-Resident Student Association, recentiy applied to Col. John Marchant, head of campus Security, for parking space for commuters in the North parking lot. Their request was approved yesterday on a trial basis of two weeks.

Senators Bill Donovan, Judy Crooker, Pete Bosworth, John Blackmore, Elwin McNamara, and chairman of the committee Jim Allen conducted a survey of the North lot which showed that the space was not being fully utilized by faculty members.

On the basis of this survey, Marchant agreed to issue temporary North lot window stickers to junior and senior commuters majoring in business, chemistry, engineering, or agriculture.

The space in North lot has been requested by the commuters in these majors because their classes are usually in the immediate vicinity of the lot.

North lot spaces have also been requested by the commuters because many of the cars now parked in the cinder lot have become stuck in the mud and have had to be towed.

"The experiment will begin next week," said Marchant. "If we find that the commuters are parked where they are not supposed to be, we will discontinue the privilege."

Forensic Society Debates With Irish Team

The University of Massachusetts will be invaded by Ireland on Tuesday, April 21st. The invasion will take the form of two debaters from University College of Dublin. They have been challenged by the UMass. Forensic Society to debate the topic: Resolved, that the U.S. cannot survive without Europe, and DeGaulle is Europe.

Steve Jenkins and John Morton, debating for UMass., will take the affirmative. The negative will be defended by the Irish, represented by Michael Daly and John Rochford, who are both students of law.

The event will be sponsored by The Institute of International Education and the Speech Association of America, in cooperation with the department of speech and the UMass Forensic Society.

Immediately after their appearance at UMass., they will leave for the Merchant Marine Academy at King's Point.

Jenkins and Morton are both prize-winning debaters who have appeared at such tournaments as C.C.N.Y., and M.I.T., William and Mary College, and N.Y.U. in the past two years. Both are members of the Forensic Society.

The debate will be held at 8:00 p.m. on April 21st in Bartlett Auditorium. There will be no admission charge.

Second Place Won At Cherry Blossom Festival

The UM "Flying Redmen" won themselves a top berth among drill teams of the United States last weekend, placing second of some 50 outstanding college drill teams in a parade which climaxed the annual Capitol Cherry Blossom Festival.

Strutting their stuff before television cameras and an audience including many international figures gathered in Washington for the event, the Redmen brought to a close an exhibition which started Friday. They performed for a team of Marine judges and were awarded 736 points of a possible 1000 in the National Intercollegiate Drill Team Championships.

Although they won a top rating during the parade, the Redmen suffered in the timed, trick-drill phase of the event. Amas sing the 736 points got them only a fifth place among the Air Force drill teams, and fourteenth among the 54 teams in the nation-wide competition.

"But," explained team commander Warren Vanderburgh, "we held our place at the top of the New England teams, including Manhattan, Trinity, Northeastern and Norwich."

During their stay in Washington, the team visited the Capitol, Jefferson Memorial, President Kennedy's gravesite at Arlington Cemetery and other points of interest.

Further events for the "Flying Redmen" this spring include: an invitational competition for all teams in the Northeastern part of the nation—to be held at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston April 25; television appearances; Armed Forces Day activities at Westover AFB; and special performance for the campus at a date and time to be announced.

The team, which was transported to Washington by bus, was accompanied by Maj. Emil F. Perry, SSgt. Robert Gilbertson, advisors to the team, and Cadet Captain Edward Herlihy, Information Services Officer for the John P. Granville Squadron of the Arnold Air Society sponsoring organization.

Trimester Remains Live Issue

By Patt Patterson

A few weeks ago, after a student poll, the concept of tri-mester was killed by the Faculty Senate. Or was it?

It now appears that tri-mester is coming whether anyone likes it or not!

For the first time ever, scholarships and loans are available for summer school.

This summer the session is twelve weeks long (the session last summer was only eight weeks long), and next summer the session will be fifteen weeks long—making it equal to a regular semester.

From this gradual change in the length of the summer school it is an easy and natural step to a calendar change and tri-mester or year-round operation—call it what you want, it is still against the wishes of the students and faculty.

The issue of year-round operation was never actually dead, for there has been a report in circulation showing the proposed calendar changes that would take effect in September, 1964.

The change in calendar would start the fall semester before Labor Day and end before Christmas. The spring semester would start in January and end in the beginning of May. The summer "session" would start in the middle of May and end around August 1st.

This change seems inevitable unless action is taken now by the faculty and students to prevent year round operation while there is still a chance.

strong back and a "grease lightening" fastball astounded the New England ranks. Ralph Lumenti topped off his collegiate career by tossing a no-hitter versus Rhode Island and was quickly signed by the Washington Senators for a $35,000 bonus. Lumenti stayed with the "mother club" the first year as a bonus baby, but was used sparingly. In 1959 the young lefty tossed another no-hitter, this time against Charlette in the Sally League (AA). As top southpaw in double A ball, he was promptly brought up to Charleston (AAA), but unfortunately never fulfilled his potential.

THE 1960 TEAM revealed another strong pitcher, Gerry Glynn. A strong fastball and a quick curveball gained the youngster a $30,000 pact with the Milwaukee Braves. However, his career was analogous to that of Lumenti, and he never attained major league status.

UNLIKE THE PREVIOUS BONUS BABIES, Eddie Connolly never astounded the baseball world, nor did he exhibit an exceptional record. What he did specialize in was "consistency". As a sophomore Connolly posted a mediocre 2 win 1 loss record, but attained a remarkable 0.00 E.R.A., with 29 strikeouts in 30 innings. Throughout his collegiate career the young lefty proved to be injury prone as epitomized by a continuous sore arm during his junior year. That season he recorded 2 wins no losses, but his E.R.A. skyrocketed. His only brightspot was a three hitter aginst New Hampshire in which he struck out 17 hitters. However, his senior year (1961) he rebounded and recorded a 4-3 record along with a 1.95 E.R.A., including 76 strikeouts in 64 innings. The Boston Red Sox were impressd by this home grown product and signed him at the termination of the season. Connolly spent his two years of minor league apprenticeship with Winston-Salem and later with Reading of the Eastern League.

But "consistant Ed" never proved exceptional. Only steady and determined fortitude brought him up through the ranks. Johnny Pesky admitted bringing Connolly to Scottsdale only due to the shortage of lefthanders with no intention of keeping him on the squad. Yet, steady Ed continued in true form . . . he didn't throw any perfect games or no-hitters, but he emerged as top southpaw on the Red Sox squad. The Sox lost no time in signing the talented youngster to a major league contract. Ed has followed in the shoes of his dad, an ex-major league catcher. As the major league season opens in Boston, all eyes will be on the young UMass graduate, possibly the best Sox leftie since Mel Parnell.

THE 1962 TEAM (15-5) brought Earl Elmstrom into the limelight. The Malden southpaw signed with the Braves after a successful 7-2 season while recording a 0.86 E.R.A.

Hitting star of the '62 season, outfielder, Bill DelVecchio, eventually signed with Cleveland and has done extremely well in their farm system.

Last season "Corky" Schmoyer, a second baseman, and Tony Williams, a third baseman, signed with the Red Sox and Orioles respectively Schmoyer will be playing for Reading in the Eastern League, after a successful season in the Carolina League.

Due to the lack of financial support, the minor leagues have slowly been liquidating and more and more talent will be drawn from the college ranks. The calibre of ball playing on the campus is vastly improving and is the new proving ground for the "national pastime."

Tennis Team Optimistic; Seek Conference Crown

by STEVE KOSAKOWSKI

"There is no depth, but enough talent to carry us through if I can push this club hard enough to reach its potential. With nothing to push the regulars for their positions, but self-pride and determination, the Redmen have to prove their potential ability."

RODGER TWITCHELL, one of the best players to come along at UMass, could be the first Yankee Conference player to win the no. 1 title in the conference three years in a row. Having lost but one match in two years, Rodger could come up with a great three-year record, but will have to work to get it.

Bob Neal has worked his way up to no. 2 from no. 6 in two seasons, and can be counted on for a real effort win or lose in every game.

MIKE ROSE, THE JERRY LEWIS OF THE TEAM, is no joke. Mike was undefeated at the no. 3 spot last year and won his Yankee Conference title at that spot. The day Mike gets beaten, it's to a worthy opponent. Mike, who played only singles last year, may have to take up the slack in doubles. He should be one of our big point getters this season.

The no. 4, 5, and 6 positions are wide open. Roger Harper, a hard working sophomore, lacks experience but is strong on desire. Steve Johnson, a junior, has not had a true test, but could make it uncomfortable for veterans Dick Leete, Bob Greenberg, and Billy Martin. Steve Riemer and Bob Kozik could also make things uncertain for a few.

Twitchell and Neal, Yankee Conference no. 1 doubles champs, and Greenberg and Martin, no. 2 doubles champs, will open against Brandeis, while the no. 3 doubles is as yet undecided. Brandeis has won two matches 9-0, breaking NYU and Fairleigh-Dickenson, two fine teams. Therefore, our work is cut out for us. We are still the team to beat in the Yankee Conference and we are looking for our sixth straight title. Ed note. Coach Kosakowski has won the Yankee Conference championship nine years, and has not had a losing season since taking over the Tennis team in 1949.

States Coach Kosakowski, "I don't expect a losing season this year either; it may take a little 'pleasant persuasion' by me to get this club moving, built it will be done."

pitching comes through. Hitters are good with Callison and Gonsales along with rookie Allen the best.

6. MILWAUKEE. Pitching weak after indomitable Spahn. Hitting not bad with Aaron, Matthews, Alou and Bailey. Hank is another of the really great ones.

7. CHICAGO. Loss of Ken Hubbs weakens whole team. Good power in Banks, Williams, Santo. Pitching behind Ellsworth is question.

8. PITTSBURGH. Shows how strong the league is. There is a young infield and some good potential, but pitching will fold in the tight race.

9. HOUSTON. Made of hasbeens and never-will bes Fox and Runnels will get singles, but with this pitching staff power is the order of the day.

10. NEW YORK. Carlton Willey broke his jaw and the Mets chances of escaping the cellar disappeared. World's Fair crowd will be impressed by Shea Stadium and shocked by Mets.

For anyone who has blundered through this thesis so far, perhaps you should save this article for a chuckle of sorts come October. For anyone who feels so inclined, I can expect to receive a poison pen letter. I too have to be humored.

Jones was the prime mover in the passage of the bill, presenting much evidence in support of the appropriation. It is the evidence that the censure motion's proponants will attack.

THE FIRST ATTEMPT AT CENSURE came early in the year when Sen. Dave Clancy ('64 Fraternities) attempted a censure motion for what he termed "Sen. Jones' use of a ruse to gain the floor". He referred to the resignation which Jones used to gain the floor in the debate resulting from the conflict of interest bill.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Decade Proves Prolific In UMass Baseball Annuals

by MARSHALL KAROL
Sports Editor

For over one hundred years the sport of baseball has been a national institution in this country. Since Abner Doubleday's debut at Cooperstown, baseball has evolved to the most proficient sport on the professional level. There is probably not a youngster in America who has not at one time or another aspired to be a major league baseball player. Boys have progressed from playground and the little leagues to Babe Ruth League, Legion and high school ball. But few people appreciate the calibre of ball played at our colleges and universities.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS has commenced its seventy-eighth season of collegiate baseball. Her present coach, Earl Lorden, the "Dean of New England Coaches," is in his seventeenth season, the last decade of which has been memorable. Yes, it was exactly 10 years ago that the Redmen won the Yankee Conference and their first New England Championship. As NCAA district I champions, "Lorden's nine" proceeded to Omaha, Neb., and the collegiate playoffs. As assistant athletic director, Coach Lorden accepted the proposal of reminiscing over the past ten years of his career, and nothing pleases him more than the 1954 highlights. Fondly he looked through records and statistics and pointed with pride to each and every individual who attained success in the pinstriped uniform of the Redmen nine. Phil Tarpey, Ralph Lumenti, Cerry Glynn, and numerous other names brought a twinkle to his eye — but these names mean little to the present student.

ED CONNOLLY from Pittsfield presently with Boston Red Sox.

GERRY GLYNN, former $30,000 Bonus Baby who signed with Milwaukee Braves.

In the New England playoffs of '54 UMass defeated Springfield and in a closely contested struggle dropped B.U. for the title. At Omaha, Nebraska, the Redmen having posted a respectable 15-7 record during the regular season held high expectations. However, Michigan State wasn't impressed and promptly decimated the University nine 16-5. But even this hardy thrashing couldn't discourage the determined New England champions. They rebounded the next round and downed a highly touted Oregon squad 5-3. The team was still in contention since two losses were required before elimination. That ominous proceeding occured the next day . . . even a determined group of youngsters were not enough for the tough, veteran University of Missouri. Missouri downed the Redmen and later went on to win the NCAA championship. That year the team was led by Captain Bob Pedigree at shortstop, who signed with the Cleveland Indians and played with Keokuck in the three I League. Phil Trapey, a pitcher, was chosen to the All-American squad and along with Don Swanson, another pitcher, signed with the Chicago Cubs. All three eventually played Triple A ball in the old Pacific Coast League.

THE 1955 TEAM blazed through the regular season with a fine 15 win 5 loss record, dropped Holy Cross 1-0 in the playoffs but was upset in the following game by Springfield. This record was not to be emulated until 1962; however, individuals maintained a bright prospectus in the UMass annals.

TWINS TO BEAT YANKS?

Tight Races Forseen In Major Leagues

by JOHN GOODRICH

Since the middle of March, various "experts" have been picking who will win the various pennant races. The time has now arrived for this fearless prognosticator to go at it since my opinion matters about as much as anybody elses.

We'll start with a stab in the dark for the American League.

1. MINNESOTA. If anyone is to unseat the Yankees it will be this group of gentlemen. It seems almost foolish to go against the Bronx Bombers, but the Twins have the power to pull off the upset. There is plenty of power in Allison, Rollins, Hall, Killebrew, and Tony Oliva. There is steady Earl Battey to watch over the pitchers. The infield is solid, if not spectacular. Pitching is the trouble. After Camilio Pascual, it's a question. Jim Kaat, Jim Roland, Lee Stange, and Dick Stigman will have to be more consistent then in the past. Sounds good, and hopefully someone will revitalize the League.

2. NEW YORK. Best of the league, but fourth starter to go with Bouton, Downing, and Coach Ford. Terry, Stafford and many youngsters fighting for the slot. Best infield in the game. Mantle, Maris, Tresh excellent outfield. Howard great catcher. Oh well, may be the Twins can do it.

3. DETROIT. Acquisition of Demeter and Lumpe along with revitalized Frank Larry will help. Kaline hard to beat, real MVP. Still young team.

4. BALTIMORE. Lost power in trades, but Siebern is an asset at first. Robinson solid at third base. Pitching real strength Milt Pappas, Chuck Estrada, and Steve Barber.

5. CHICAGO. Have Gary Peters, Pete Ward, Floyd Robinson, Mike Hershberger, Dave Nicholson, and no place to go. Perhaps they should retire until more help like Don Buford.

6. BOSTON. Conigliario will help out Yastrzemski. Dalton Jones good rookie also. Mombo great pitcher. Stuart can hit but don't let him touch the ball in the infield. Pesky has guts to start rookie lefty Connelly of UMass at home. Will take more than that to go higher.

7. CLEVELAND. Wagner, Davalillo, Alvis are the best. Infield unsteady, pitching worse. Need an awful lot of help and luck to get in first Division.

8. LOS ANGELES. Ken MacBride best hurler. Thomas and Pearson good outfielders. Traded Wagner and will pay for it.

9. KANSAS CITY. Charlie Finley most interesting. Pennant Pavilion might help them reach eighth place, except that its in right field and big swingers are right handed hitters.

10. WASHINGTON WHO THEY?

As usual better race in National League

1. SAN FRANCISCO. Hart and Alou will be the difference. Mays, Cepeda, McCovery, Hart big power. Marichal big winner. Davenport at second gives more power. Pagan one of best shortstops anywhere Haller and Crandal can do job matching. Best team all spring season. Should continue.

2. ST. LOUIS. Musial's gone, but still plenty left, especially in the infield. Javier, White, Boyer, Groat all good. MacCarver going to be great catcher. Good outfield. Must keep pitching high.

3. LOS ANGELES. Koufax, Drysdale and Perranoski good hurlers but weak after that. Podres can deliver in big game. Infield has good fielders but few great hitters, outfield pretty good. Davis boys and Howard will have to hit if the team is to stay on top.

4. CINCINNATI. Spiritual factor of Fred Hutchinson could move the club higher. Maloney, Purkey, Jay and O'Toole could be best staff in league. Hitting could use a boost.

5. PHILADELPHIA. Mauch has his club on the rise, and if

SenateElectionInvalidated

by SCOTT FREEDLAND
Managing Editor

The spring Student Senate At Large Elections, yesterday, ended in a clear decision for the Class of '65, several recounts to decide a tie for the Class of '66, and an invalidated election for the Class of '67.

Incumbent Senator Bill Landis (244 votes) swept the '65 election followed by Bill Wilkinson (196 votes), and incumbent Senator Donald F. Haynes (157 votes), for the second and third seats.

THE CLASS OF '66 election was in contention for sometime due to an incorrect count. It appeared that there was a tie between Ricci and Nichols. A recount corrected the situation with incumbent Senators Scott Freedland (177 votes) and Carol Ricci (173 votes) being re-elected, and Kathy Walsh gaining Senator Nichols' seat with 168 votes.

Freshman At Large Elections were invalidated on three counts! The name of candidate Charles Sevey was left off the ballot, Senator John Greenquist did not have the statement of "Present Senator" printed after his name as he is entitled to, and the election committee ran out of ballots, thereby automatically invalidating the election.

The At-Large election for Senator from the Class of 1967 will be run again Tuesday, April 21, 1964.

Dean Fields Explains Ban; Not Discriminatory Action

by DON HAYES

..THE ADMINISTRATION'S POSITION concerning off-campus vending service was made clear by Dean Field today when he listed a number of reasons for limiting the hours for the delivery of food to students on campus.

The "sudden" change in attitude towards Tastee Towers has been in effect since the school year started. "We are not discriminating against Tastee Tower," he said.

University regulations allow the delivery of pizzas to students between the evening hours of 8 to 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 8 to midnight on Friday and Saturday evenings.

..."THESE HOURS HAVE BEEN established to coincide with meal times and to allow for snacks," he said. According to Dean Field, no one is trying to force students to eat at the dining commons or the Hatch, but "we do not wish to encourage the use of rooms for regular meals."

In the past years, many students have taken advantage of the service provided by touring grinder wagons to catch a quick snack at night and take a break. To many students, the 9 o'clock ding-dong or fog horn was a mouth-watering sound; to others, it was vexatious, exasperating and ear-piercing, Field remarked.

Dean Field recognized the benefits of having vending wagons on campus, he said, but he was quick to add that there are disadvantages involved, too.

"THESE HOURS HAVE complaints from students about wagons and the smell of pizza."

He stressed the fact that vending machines supplied with sandwiches, soups, candy, cof-

CLASS PRIMARIES

The primary elections for the class officers will be held this Tuesday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:45 p.m. in the lobby of the Student Union.

In the Class of '66, all officers are running unopposed. The only office contested for the Class of '65 is that of Secretary, so only this office will have a primary.

Anyone wishing to run for an office in the Class of '66 or for the three unopposed offices in the Class of '65 may do so by write-in ballot on the day of the final elections, Monday, April 27.

FM-AM Converter System Bill Highlights Senate Meeting

Secretary Wendy Hall had just finished reading the minutes of the previous Senate meeting when Ethan Pollack ('64 Wheeler) rose, suspended the rules, and moved to his censure motion of Ross Jones, stating "on further consideration . . . I withdraw S138 and apologize . . ." Thus began Wednesday night's Senate meeting.

Senator Ross Jones shows his acceptance of the apology and withdrawal of the motion to censure him.

SENATOR AL McNAMARA ('64 commuter) objected to the withdrawal calling Jones "a disruptive influence . . . transgressing the bounds of conduct." Since Pollack's motion to withdraw the censure bill was not debatable, the Senate moved back to regular business and committee reports.

Rising to give his Finance Committee report, Jones was interrupted by Dave Mathieson ('64 at-large), on a point of information. Mathieson asked if Jones had not resigned as Chairman of the committee. President Labuzoski informed Senator Mathieson that she had received no written resignation and Senate business continued.

Under New Business, the Senate passed S128 and S129 calling for the distribution (at no cost) of Commuter I.D. cards in an effort to obtain more equitable distribution of the Collegians, periodicals, and other publications.

COMMENCING AT 8:45 and continuing until 10:45, debate centered around the feasibility and legality of S108—which approved the "expenditure of $450 for research and development of an FM-AM Converter System for the University.

Senator Pollack, at Wednesday's Senate meeting, withdraws his motion to censure Senator Jones.

Interrupted by numerous points of information, Jones spoke of the Converter System as an experiment . . . "it does guarantee . . . we will get answers," he said.

Warsaw Ghetto Commemorated By Students

by LOIS SKOLNICK

"Win the battle of learning, and you will not have to suffer the defeat of battle.

"Win the battle of ideals, and you will have won the struggle for peace.

"Win the battle of decency, and you will not have to suffer the humiliation of enslavement.

"Win the battle of God, and you will win the truth of freedom."

Thus spoke Rabbi Jacob Duschinsky yesterday morning in the Student Union at a commemoration of the uprising of the Warsaw Ghetto.

Sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization, the program commemorated the uprising of April 19, 1943, in Warsaw, Poland. Its fighters consisted of the remnants of the 400,000 Jews of the Ghetto, the majority (850,000) having been deported the previous summer to death camps. After one month of resistence, all that was left was rubble.

"THE WARSAW GHETTO may have created martyrs, and heroes, but it did not rescue any living persons," said Rabbi Duschinsky.

Explaining that the Jews of Warsaw never had a realistic goal of victory, the Rabbi noted that the uprising was an expression of "the indomitable will of human beings to resist evil."

"The battlefield of Warsaw was not lost in Warsaw," Rabbi Duschinsky said. "It was lost in Nuremberg, in the German Universities and Schools, in Hitler's Nazi Youth Organizations."

STRESSING the futility of arms, the Rabbi insisted that "the great battles of humanity are fought in the Workshop of the spirit, where ideas can be victorious, where ideals can conquer young hearts.

"We remember the Warsaw Ghetto in order to prove that war will not solve any problems of life," Rabbi Duschinsky concluded.

Rabbi Duschinsky was born in Hungary and educated in Hungary, Czechoslavakia, England, and the United States. During World War II, he was deported to the copper mines in Yugoslavia by the Nazis and was liberated by Yugoslav partisans at the end of the war. He is the author of the book, History of Religious Zionism, and is co-author of The Jews in the Soviet Union.

OTHER PARTICIPANTS in the Memorial program were Rabbi Louis Ruchames, Rev. Jere Berger, and Father J. Joseph Quigley.

Student participants were Ann Posner, Joseph Duke, and George Massalam.

Army ROTC Initiates New Honor Society

The Student Senate Wednesday approved the constitution of the Society of Scabbard and Blade, making it a Recognized Student Organization.

A military honor society, the group is currently petitioning for a charter in the National Society of Scabbard and Blade. This will make it an integral part of a nation-wide organization which enjoys a high standing in military and collegiate circles.

Cadets in the Advanced ROTC program are eligible for membership. Selection of new members is effected by vote of the Society, subsequent to an initial pledge program.

The pledge program consists of an intensive period of instruction and personal application of phases of military training not normally available to ROTC Cadets. Emphasis is placed on the development of the essential traits of honor, initiative, and the ability to work under pressure.

Delivery Restrictions Warrent Action

Reason not the need! The student who asks a person or business to deliver to his dormitory or room a product he wishes to get or use, is exercising a right (the word cautiously used) that has never before been so bluntly challenged.

The administration has restricted delivery of food to dormitories, their reasons, stated by Dean Field are on page one.

It is not logical to restrict delivery to pizza. If delivery is allowed at all, it should be for any requested item (or is there pressure from our vending machine operators whose products suffer by comparison?)

The hours of delivery seem abstractly chosen; as long as dorms are open to visitors, deliveries cannot realistically be restricted. We recommend, and will continue to pursue, further study of this situation.

Does the administration really intend to dictate what is eaten in rooms—or how regularly? Do they really feel the problem of too many private deliveries is insurmountable or are they simply not bothering to make a proper resolution. Restricted delivery will take the pressure off on-campus facilities to improve and compete.

The Same Old Thing

from AXEL

The other day I read an article on "Morals on the Campus" (Newsweek, Apr. 6, 1964). They meant "Sex on Campus" but they were playing it cool—to look more authoritative and less sensational. (Of course, we all knew what they meant when we saw the guy on the cover grasping the pretty girl in the Freudian-red sweater and naturally we turn to that article immediately.)

Well, the article wasn't too bad, despite the usual choice of reference colleges: Harvard, Yale, Bennington, Radcliffe, etc. It said we are currently having a revolution in moral codes—largely under the heading of premartial sex—that is going to have some strong reverberations.

"Undoubtedly," says the article, "the key to the new morality is the widespread belief that a boy and girl who have established a meaningful relationship have the moral right to sleep with each other." A girl should sleep with a boy only if he is (in the words of the article) "Mr. Right"; but the question arises: "How many Mr. Rights make a wrong?"

The article has more good observations to relate, but these two quotes are the center of the problem that now exists in the new morality. The article implies, but doesn't state, that the same question can be presented in terms of a "Mrs. Right", and how many "Mrs. Rights are all right?"

If the college student sincerely agrees with the sleeping-together observation, I say bravo. However, it doesn't take long before one views the whole business of sex not as a true communion of body and spirit, but as a mere bawdy act. All the idealism in the world seems useless when you have given all of yourself to two or three Mr. or Mrs. Rights, only to break-up over some odd cause; and that cause is often the result of the seemingly inevitable worry that arises from premarital sex.

The problem, then, is often not, "Should we have sex before marriage?" but, "Is the relation I am now in going to lead to marriage"; or "Is this a truly 'meaningful relation'?" Ask, "Is this really Mr. Right, or am I giving all to a one semester affair.?"

It is, perhaps, the lucky person who can enjoy a guiltless or worriless intimate relationship. It's great from one week to the next —as long as the contraceptive works (and I suppose they usually do . . .). However, the sensitive person, planning a future, can be dragged down all too fast by "going down" with a first love. This problem is on campus, but it is all over our big bad world too, Newsweek.

Women Want Off Campus Housing

To the Editor:

As room-choosing approaches and articles appear in the Collegian about the dubious finishing of the new dorms, one persistent thought runs through my mind. Why aren't women allowed to live off campus, at least under certain stipulations such as a minimum age of 21 with parental consent? A person 21 years of age is legally an adult, whether male or female. Therefore I think the privilege should be extended to women 21 and over, and if possible, to seniors.

The only reason I can imagine for the refusal of off campus living for women is the question of morals, and this at best is beginning to appear almost senseless. In the campus world we live in, there are many devious ways of being "immoral" without the aid of an apartment. Granted this may facilitate things. But I think it is time we were truly allowed to conduct ourselves as adults—something always being drilled into us—and lead our own lives, making our own decisions.

I would like to hear other opinions on this question—especially from the administration.

Thank you.

M. R.

The Unexpected As Usual

A girl as President? Are you kidding? No girl could do a good job as President. How can a girl handle such an unruly group? And on the other side. Let's not make up our minds yet. We ought to see in a few weeks. These are the comments that confronted the resignation of Jon Fife as President of our Student Senate. Although many are skeptical of the authority of our Student Senate, there is nevertheless an apprehension mixed with anticipation at the resignation of any leader. This was amplified by the fact that it would be a young lady who would be as-

Greenwich Quartet Review

by LANGDON LOMBARD

A capacity crowd of nearly 350 people filled Bartlett Auditorium last Wednesday to hear the Greenwich Quartet and a program whose beginning and end were quite good, but whose middle presented a bit of a hodge-podge.

The opening Mozart Piano Quartet presented all four artists as they are most used to playing: together. Tonal balance was quite good, with the brilliant attack and light sound so necessary for the piece.

Then the hodge-podge began. The "Caprice Basque" by Sarasate was played without warmth but with adequate technique by Guy Lumia, violinist. David Everhart, cellist, found himself well in over his head with Piatigorsky's transcription of the Von Weber "Adagio and Rondo." Seeing and hearing the viola d'amore was the educational treat of the evening but we felt that the instrument had too many limitations even when played well by Myron Rosenblum. There is little that it is suited for other than "charming songs."

The Pantoum (a scherzo) from the Ravel Trio in A Minor further entrenched our belief that the group was better playing as a group.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

The article by Patt Patterson brought to my attention a report that trimester is supposedly being planned by the administration although opposed by a majority of students and faculty.

I question two things: 1) Why, to begin with, do so many people oppose trimester, and 2) Why is the administration supposedly setting up the particular schedule as they are?

To me, it is obvious that trimester is a necessity for the future enrollment of college students. At present, figures are being compared concerning the estimated number of students applying to college in future years and the amount of places open for them. If students who are able and willing to finish school in less time, have the opportunity through trimester to do so, this can greatly relieve the enrollment problem. Also, the number of years spent in school —especially when master degrees and often beyond are a requirement—are cut down considerably.

At the same time, it must be remembered that attending the third semester is not mandatory for any student. He can take as many semesters at a time as he wishes or can afford—both psychologically and physically, and financially. This is my interpretation of trimester as we voted on it, and I do not understand where all the opposition mentioned by Patt Patterson comes in.

The problem arises, however, of how to get a summer job for those who find it a financial necessity—as many of us do. The time indicated for the proposed third semester is a very difficult one as summer jobs are set up now. Here is where the administration could aid the student. I would suggest starting the first semester two weeks later, rather than earlier, and thereby pushing up the whole school year. This still enables most students to find the kind of employment they wish, and would more closely approximate the job openings as they now are. Otherwise many students would find it difficult to obtain employment which could put an undue financial strain on themselves and their families.

Re: The Sex Hex
To the Editor:

After having read Mr. Feinberg's series of articles on the Sex Hex I find that I am unable to understand if any point was made. It is impossible to make any sense out of the articles. There is vague reference to parietals, Harvard, Brandeis, and "love in a room at Greenough," is the mere reference to an inflated issue at Harvard and Brandeis intended to prove some point? The entire article in Wednesday's Collegian gets lost, even from a discussion of sex, somewhere between "factory system of housing" and "seven story dorms".

The only conclusion is that Mr. Feinberg has written another of his meaningless editorials.

Only Four Painters At Work In Mills

The following letter was received by Mills House, and the housemother, Mrs. Korpela, from the Assistant Dean of Men, W. H. Burkhardt:

"We are in agreement with our friend the Irate Student that student opinion should be considered when decisions are made that affect them. Therefore, if you have any person for not wishing to have you room painted at this time, please contact Mrs. Korpela, and perhaps some other arrangement can be made.

The reason that the rooms had to be painted in winter is that with a small painting crew, and the short season of good weather, the summer months must be used for outside work."

The Irate Student regrets that he erronously stated that there were six painters. There are only four painters.

Constitutions Due Fri.

THE DEADLINE for submitting constitutions and constitutional amendments for the approval of the Activities Committee, the RSO, and the Senate is next Friday, April 24.

There are only two more meetings of the Activities Committee this year. Since Chairman Tom Kiernan already has a sizable backlog of constitutions to work on, he must have, by Friday, the constitutions of all organziations which desire consideration this academic year.

"All materials must be in my hands—through either the RSO or the Senate—by the twenty-fourth, or no action can be taken until September. Constitutions and constitutional amendments," Senator Kiernan explained, "must be examined by the Activities Committees of both the Senate and the RSO before they go to the entire Senate for final approval. Time is growing short."

fee and cold drinks are available in most dormitories. Both the Hatch and Newman Center have a wide selection of food, also. There is, then, little or no need to have any number of wagons on campus, nor is there any need to have products other than pizza, which are not available on campus, he added.

If permission to sell a variety of food at any time is granted to one concern, where should the line be drawn? "We can't grant permission to one and not others," Dean Field stated, "and we have had to refuse others."

ALTHOUGH FIELD NOTED that he realizes the administration's decision to limit the operations of Tastee Tower on campus has caused mixed feelings among students, he said he feels that the actions which have been taken are in the best interests of the school, the administration, and the students.

ception remains as a blind spot in the eyes of the beholder.

Twenty-one years ago this April 19, fifty thousand human beings—the tattered remnants of four hundred thousand people—staged an uprising in the Warsaw Ghetto. This was no normal uprising—the participants sought neither goiry nor gold; but simply to regain a speck of human dignity, even at the cost of their own lives. The uprising also served to show the hopelessness of their situation to the world.

IN THE END, DEATH was the lot for all but a handful. Were these fifty thousand lives lost in vain, or may a significance be attached to there dying that is far greater than that of their 7 fold neighbors or that of their 120 fold brothers deaths? I believe that their death illustrates to the fullest extent the eternal vigilence that must be kept to preserve justice. But far beyond this these lives also show the price that must be paid for the return of liberty and justice if one allows these ideals to passively slip away. These people who had been forced to live for years as animals choose to die as men with dignity as opposed to their comrades who lost their lives as merely another member of a stockyard.

Though these men lost an impossible battle they were victorious in their goals. They have left us a sign post from which we must never turn away. They serve as a remainder, least we forget.

AFROTC Cadets Take Field Trip; Spend Time At Florida Base

Boarding a four-engine C-121 Constellation at Westover Air Force Base, 16 miles from the University, 63 cadets of the Air Force Officer Training Corps Detachment 370, under Lt. Col. Roy D. Simmons, Jr., accompanied the aircraft crew of the 551st Airborne Early Warning and Control Wing of Otis Air Force Base at Cape Cod, on a flight to Florida last week.

At an altitude of 16,000 feet, en route to the Air Defense Command testing ground at Tyndall Air Force Base, on the Gulf of Mexico, the students were briefed on the "Super Connie's" controls and the advanced cadets enrolled in the AFROTC flight-instruction program got a chance to take the co-pilot seat. Others checked their navigation calculations against computations of the four-man crew while two cadets had a crack at operating the plane's communication system.

AFTER A FIVE HOUR flight under the tutelage of Major Edward Bamber, a Command pilot who has flown more than 4,000 hours, the class landed at Tyndall, located on a peninsula 12 miles southeast of the summer resort community at Panama City, Florida.

As guests of the 73rd Air Division (Weapons) of Maj. Gen. Frederick R. Terrell, the students got a thorough view of the Air Defense Command unit whose mission it is "to make every effort to assure that each interceptor aircraft and each aircrew member . . . is capable of destroying an enemy aircraft." At Tryndall, the Nation's defense teams exercise, taking part in missions to test and further proficiency of supersonic fighter interceptor squadrons.

Escorted about the base, University of Massachusetts students saw much of the fire-power of the defense command.

AS THE CADETS soaked up the data about the defense of their country (not limited to the aircraft, but also featuring NORAD's radar system and missiles) they somehow found time to soak up some Florida sun, returning to the campus with revealing sun tans.

Math Club Sponsors Modern Math Talk

"What happened to the good old math we used to know?" is a question frequently asked. The Math Club is sponsoring a program which will attempt to answer this question.

"High School Math: The Modern Approach" will be the topic under discussion by a panel of experienced teachers Tuesday, April 21 at 8:00 p.m. in the Nantucket and Norfolk rooms of the Student Union.

Highlights of the program will be the discussion of the philosophy behind "modern" math programs, as well as the improvements and deficiences of "modern" math as compared to the standard "traditional" courses.

The participating teachers will be Norman Sullivan of South Hadley High School, John Foley of Holyoke High, Alice Epstein of Amherst High, and Arthur Morin of Granby High School.

Following the discussion by the panel, a period will be given over to questions and discussion from the floor. Faculty, students, parents, and anyone interested in this subject is urged to attend. Refreshments will be served.

Thespians End Season With All The King's Men

Harry Mahnken of the speech department will direct the Warren drama, the final presentation in the University Theatre's 1963-1964 season.

"All the King's Men" is based on the tempestuous career of the late Huey Long. The lead role of Willie Stark, Warren's fictionalized Long, will be played by Leslie Titcomb, a junior English major from Norwell. Titcomb played Lodovico in the University Theatre's version of "Othello," presented early in March.

The large cast also includes Douglas Brothers, Springfield; Michael Haley, Lee; David Rosewell, Wakefield; Earle Vickery, Mansfield; James Wrynn, Lynn; Patricia Long, Brighton; and Frances Holliday, Atlanta, Ga.

Cesura Board Competition

Caesura Editor, Deidre Haley, has announced that the annual competition for membership on the board will begin today.

There will be openings for at least eight members. This is the largest number since January of 1962. There will be positions available in prose, poetry, and art. The competition is open to all graduate and undergraduate students planning to be on campus next year.

Applications, which test writing and critical ability, may be picked up in the Caesura office. These forms should be filled out and returned to Box 104 at the RSO office by Friday, April 24.

The deadline for manuscripts for the commencement issue is May 2. The board urges students to submit all prose, poetry, and art to the magazine. Pieces may be left at the new Caesura office in the Franklin Room of the Student Union, or in Box 104 at RSO.

Retiring officers are: Deidre Haley, editor; Steve Orlen, associate editor; Gerald Goldman, secretary. Retiring board members are Sam Gorvine, David Perry, Don Grant and Lone Ishoi.

Senate Meeting ...

Upon Jones' yielding of the floor, Senators able to grasp the technicalities of the Converter system argued whether it was "completely infeasible" or a "chance that should be taken." The question was called after several Senators rose to state they found it difficult, if not impossible, that students comprehend and fairly rule on such a matter.

THE MOTION TO RESCIND was passed by 32 in favor, 5 against, and 3 abstentions.

With the doors of the Student Union closed, the Senate proceeded to pass S135—calling for the publication of a Student Senate Journal, at least once a semester, to contain the acts and resolves passed, and S136 which "underwrites the expense of the appearance of Bob Dylan on April 26, up to $385."

The final piece of legislation came 3½ hours after the opening prayer. S137 stated that "in the future, censure motions shall not be valid unless passed by a two-thirds vote of the Senate."

Precisionettes Begin Practice For Local Parade

When the Precisionettes march across the football field next season, spectators will be greeted with navy blue, perky uniforms replacing the drab, out-of-date costumes that they wore last year.

The new uniform has been designed by a committee composed of members of the team and will include an original Precisionettes emblem on the sleeve.

Spring practice for the group begins next week in preparation for the Spring Military Review and a parade in the local area.

The captain of the Precisionettes is Maureen Carmel and squad leaders are Tina Poshkus, Alice Doerring, and Ginny Kockanowski.

FOR MISSISSIPPI

Freedom Corps Needs Volunteers

DOMESTIC FREEDOM CORPS is what the Mississippi Summer Project is being called for which the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee is raising money and volunteers.

SNCC estimates that it will have in excess of 1000 student volunteer workers setting up Freedom Schools and Community Centers in what is still the roughest state in the South for an integration worker.

The Mississippi Summer Project is being sponsored by the Council of Federated Organizations (COFO), a federation of all local and national civil rights groups working in Mississippi. It was organized by SNCC to present a united front for all of the Negroes of Mississippi to rally the Negroes of Mississippi to rally behind.

THE OVERALL GUIDING PURPOSE behind this part of the movement, as often articulated by SNCC staff members, is to present to the nation the need for massive federal intervention. This is often the purpose of such activities as the Freedom Ballot for Aaron Henry, COFO Chairman and state NAACP head. This will also be the guiding light of the attempts which COFO will make to unseat the winners of the November elections by challenging the results of elections where Negroes are not allowed to vote.

GOALS: Register as many Negro voters as possible. This includes running a Freedom Registration Campaign where Negroes will register on Freedom Registration Books which will serve as a basis for challenging the official books and the results of the "official" federal elections this fall.

—Developing leadership for politically emerging communities. This phase of the program will include the establishment of ten daytime Freedom Schools and three resident schools. The daytime schools will function five days per week with highly individualized instruction in the student's home town. The students will be 10th, 11th, and 12th grade pupils. The resident schools will be attended by the more advanced students throughotu the state.

The curriculum of the Freedom Schools concentrates on remedial work in reading, math, and basic grammar, as well as seminars in political science, the humanities, and creative writing. The resident schools will place greater emphasis on political studies.

—Provide services normally denied to the Negro community in Mississippi. Establishing Community Centers staffed by social workers, nurses, librarians, and teachers, the centers will provide cultural and educational programs for the community. The centers are designed to provide a structure to channel a wide range of programs into the Negro community in the future.

—Enlarge the body of research on the state. The programs are all designed to effect a change in the fundamental political and economic activity in the state; to better accomplish this, more research will be conducted.

—Organize the white community. A group of Southern white students who have recently joined the civil rights movement will be attempting to organize poor white areas to take steps toward eliminating poverty, bigotry, and ignorance.

THE COLLEGE FREEDOM CENTERS are located at the University of Oregon, Oberlin College, Stanford University, the University of Illinois, the University of North Carolina, Harvard University and Yale University. Thirteen off-campus centers are operating in other areas.

Mary King, a member of the SNCC staff in Atlanta told CPS that all of the students who do take an active role in the Domestic Freedom Corps will be working under experienced SNCC staffers and will not be thrust on their own means to handle situations.

UMass Student Choosen To Work On Peru 64

LORNA SASS '67 has been chosen to represent UMass in Peru this summer.

Eighteen New England college and university students have been selected to participate in "Peru '64", the World University Service work project being held this summer at Huamanga University in Ayacucho.

Colleges represented include Bates, Bradford, Brandeis, Dartmouth, Harvard, Middlebury, Pembroke, Smith, the University of Massachusetts and the College of William and Mary in Virginia.

The participants will spend the weekend of April 24 to 27 in an intensive orientation at the Experiment in International Living training center near Putney, Vermont. They will leave for Lima, Peru in early July for another week of orientation there.

Following this the group will go to Ayacucho to begin work on the project, a student-center cafeteria, where they will be joined by Peruvian students. The week of August 17 to 23 has been reserved for group travel to other parts of Peru.

THE PROJECT DIRECTOR will be Mr. Bruce Babbitt, a second year student at Harvard Law School. Babbitt was Student Body President at Notre Dame, a Marshall Scholar, he has spent some time in South America studying geophysics and he was the orientation director for "Accion en Venezuela" last summer.

His assistant on the project will be Mr. Louis Wolf Goodman, a senior in Latin American Studies at Dartmouth. Lou has spent a summer in Mexico with the American Friends Service Committee and was in Peru half of last year on a study project.

A FEW PLACES HAVE BEEN left open in the project for special qualified candidate with special qualifications, and we urge those who are interested to apply to the Regional Office immediately. Final selections will be made in late April.

STUDY ROOMS

Grant To Study Commuting

Lisle, Ill. (I.P.) — Noting that the Educational Facilities Laboratories, Inc., a Ford Foundation corporation, awarded St. Procopius College a $3000 grant to study a specific approach to the problem of the commuting student on a small college campus, (Rev.) Daniel W. Kucera, O.S.B., president, states that "it comes as no surprise to those who are aware of the present position of St. Procopius, that this college is ideally suited and situated to conduct such a study.

"THE VAST MAJORITY OF our students live with reasonable distance of the College, with about half of them commuting daily to and from their homes. The continuing development of suburban towns within the vicinity of the College indicates that the commuting student will be a dominant figure on campus in the immediate years ahead."

The proposal submitted revolves around an idea that if a commuting student had a place on campus that he could call his own, that would be private and to which he could repair between classes or activities, he would feel more a part of the campus and would be more likely to remain on campus to participate fully in all of its activities.

"SPECIFICALLY, then, we are investigating the feasibility of providing a building that would contain small but completely private rooms, with a desk, chair, bookcase and perhaps very little else. If the rent of the rooms could be kept at a rate within the reach of a commuting student, would it not be then possible to offer these accommodations much in the same manner that a boarding student is offered a room in the traditional sense? The commuting student would then be assigned a private study room on campus when he registered. This would become his headquarters and give him, it is hoped, a feeling of belonging.

"With the library open from eight in the morning until ten at night, with cafeteria service at modest prices also available, with the class schedule operating throughout the day because of the shortage of classrooms, the commuting student would find remaining on campus feasible and profitable. To all intents and purposes he can become a member of the campus family almost as much, and perhaps just as much, as the boarding student. The only difference would be that at night he would go home to sleep.

"Low rent private study rooms for commuting students have other potential advantages. If they are constructed with a view to supplying some of the electronic devices that are now developed and are going to be developed for more effective study, there is no end to the possibilities that such accommodations could afford.

Student leaders night will be held Tuesday, April 28, at 7 p.m. at the Cage. It is open to the public with no charge.

UConn Nine Look For Second Yan-Con Crown

STORRS, Conn.—The University of Connecticut baseball team opens the defense of its Yankee Conference championship at Kingston, R.I., Saturday afternoon, when the Huskies battle Rhode Island.

CONNECTICUT, winner of 8 titles and two co-championships in 16 seasons of YanCon play, has won two of three northern games after an 0-5 southern trip.

COACH LARRY PANCIERA OF UCONN has nominated Lefty Dick Baranowski, who has a 1-1 record, to pitch against the Rams. Either Larry Moulton, the Rhody ace, or Ed Johnson will twirl for the home forces who lost a 6-5 decision to Brown in their only game of the season.

THE LEADING STICKER FOR CONNECTICUT is First Baseman Eddie Carroll who has a .364 average. Outfielders Dorrie Jackson and Bob Siegel, both hitting at .333, are the only other .300 hitters on the squad.

NEXT WEEK, UConn has three more Conference games, all at home. The Huskies play Massachusetts at Storrs on Tuesday and Maine comes in for a Friday-Saturday set on April 24, 25.

Saturday's game at Rhody starts at 2 p.m.

Bare Stage Designed For S. U. Play

A desk, a table, a few straight chairs and a small stool, scattered here and there on multi-leveled platforms—these are the basic ingredients of the set that is taking shape for the University Theatre's production of "All The King's Men."

The stark, almost bare stage has a definite function, Director Harry Mahnken explained. "It's a type of nonrepresentational set" he said, "a so-called 'space stage'. We place a few pieces of black furniture on the dull grey acting area and make no attempt at simulating reality. The stage becomes not an office, or a front porch, or a fairground, but a platform for actors. They must create their own reality."

The play is a study of the political career of Willie Stark, a Southern politician, and the story is told in flashbacks.

"All The King's Men" is being presented in the Student Union Ballroom, and the set has been designed by Mr. Mahnken with the layout of this room in mind.

Production dates for the show are April 23, 24 and 25. Tickets will go on sale at the Student Union Box Office on Monday.

Foreign Students' Sturbridge Trip

The Amherst Junior Chamber of Commerce has announced that final plans are set for the Third Annual International Student Trip to Sturbridge Village. The project is run in conjunction with the Massachusetts State Jaycees. Local Chairman, Robert Van Vliet says, "all international students are cordially invited to attend this educational experience that is being held on Sunday April 19."

The tour according to State Project Chairman Jack Welles, will be from 10:30 A.M. until 3:30 P.M. Local Jaycees are furnishing private automobiles to provide transportation for international students.

Students from schools in the Amherst area should be at the University of Massachusetts Student Union at 3:15 A.M. on the 19th if they wish to have transportation to the village.

Local Jaycee wives are preparing lunches for the participants or lunch may be purchased at the village for a nominal fee. Admission will be free and Jaycees will act as guides for the 300 students expected from all over the Commonwealth.

All international students are urged to take advantage of this tour into yesteryear.

For further information contact Jack Welles or Robert Van Vliet at the University, telephone number 545-2385.

Greenwich Quartet ...

The changing of pieces by the pianist, Herbert Rogers, to the Chopin Ballade No. 3 in A-Flat Major, Op. 47 was interesting but deadly for the poorly responding piano in the auditorium. Nor did it seem that the pianist was very much interested in the piece until he saw the end in sight.

Yet, when they returned to the stage, once more an integral group, there was a more relaxed atmosphere. The opening "Allegro" of the Dvorak Piano Quartet, Op. 87 was played con Fucco as marked. The "Lento" showed what the cellist actually could do, but an unfortunate choice was made for an encore of the 5th Hungarian Dance by Brahms.

Had the group concentrated on performance as a group, there certainly would not have been quite so much to complain about. Yet too, it was interesting to see what each member could not do.

Lacrosse Team Seeks First Victory Versus Bowdoin

Coach Dick Garber's University of Massachusetts varsity lacrosse team hopes to notch its first win of the young season Saturday afternoon against visiting Bowdoin College at 2 p.m.

THE REDMEN, defending New England Champs, are off to their worst start in eight years. Losses to Wesleyan, 7-2, and Brown, 8-1, make the Redmen 0-2, the first time since 1956 that UMass started the season with two losses. Garber was openly worried about his inexperienced defensive unit before the season started but expected a strong offensive showing. The Redmen out-shot Wesleyan by a wide-margin, yet missed many good scoring opportunities in losing for the first time to Wesleyan after eight wins. Brown, one of New England's strongest units, out-maneuvered and over-powered Massachusetts.

"WE'RE GETTING PLENTY OF SHOTS," Garber stated following the Brown loss, "but we can't seem to put the ball in the net." In an attempt to put more zing into the UMass attack, Garber has made two lineup switches for Saturday's game. Starting attackman Fran Casey (Saxonville) will be switched to a starting midfield spot, his position last year. Casey hasn't had the scoring chances he should be getting from the attack spot. He will be replaced at attack by midfielder Al Morris (Somerset), who has good dodging ability.

THE REST OF THE LINEUP will probably be composed of goalie Dick Baird (Bedford), defensemen Ed Feeley (Ashland), Hal Ryder (Saugus) and Ed Toner (Lynn), midfielders Co-Capt Frank Infusino (Hull), Gordie Webb (Atkinson, NH) and Casey, and attackmen Co-Capt Steve Harrington (Milford), Charlie Glew (Framingham) and Morris.

Redmen lacrosse players in rugged practice. Host Bowdoin Saturday.

Little Redmen Nine Downed By Springfield

Shoddy fielding and a load of walks cost the Frosh nine a 6-4 loss at Springfield College Wednesday in the season's opener for both clubs. Carl Boteze hurled strong ball for the Redmen, but walks and errors hurt his cause. UMass carried a 3-1 lead in the fourth when the Maroons tied the game, and a three run outburst by Springfield in the seventh, that started with a third strike passed ball, put the game on ice for the home club.

THE REDMEN came back in the ninth for one run, but it was a case of too little too late. Dave Brindle pitched a complete game for the Maroons and gave up only five hits, including a double by Marc Greenberg. Frank Stewart picked up two of the Massachusetts singles. As the game progressed, Brindle grew stronger and the Redmen could do nothing after the first few innings. At one point 11 men in a row were set down.

BOTEZE surrendered a first inning triple on a line drive to right by Ed Horsley. After a walk, Springfield scored on a double steal. The big inning against the righthander from Pittsfield came when Springfield scored three in the seventh to break the tie. A throwing error by Boteze himself figured in the scoring. The only hit of the frame was a two bagger by Brindle.

THE HOME OPENER will be tomorrow against Leicester Junior College. Coach Bergquist has had his team working the past two days correcting some of the many weaknesses shown at Springfield, so the chances for success should be good.

Track Opener Sat.

The University of Massachusetts varsity track team opens its season Saturday afternoon by hosting Yankee Conference rival New Hampshire at 2 p.m. at Alumni Field. The UMass and UNH frosh team will also meet at 2 o'clock.

COACH BILL FOOTRICK'S REDMEN had their greatest Spring season last year by chalking up a 7-1 record and a second in the Conference championships. Graduation took two of Massachusetts' top performers, Dick Ward and Ken O'Brien, and a knee injury has put Co-Capt. Fred Lewis out of action. Thus, UMass will have a hard time matching has year's record. But the Redmen are still strong in the running events, where they will be led by senior Bob Brouillet (Phillipston), great UMass distance runner.

BROUILLET, three-year Yankee Conference cross-country champion, will compete in the mile, and two-mile. He will be supported by juniors Tom Panke (Springfield), Bob Ramsay (Brockton), and senior Jim Wrynn (Amherst).

FOOTRICK HOPES for an improved team performance in the hurdle events, especially from senior John Harrington (Lowell) and soph Ed Cody (Clarks-Summitt, Pa.) Soph John Medeiros (So. Dartmouth) will compete in the high jump, broad jump and dash events. Cody and soph Doug Sloane (Amesbury) should bolster the dash events.

SENIOR CRAIG ERICKSON ((Milford) will backbone the 440 with help from junior Basil Robinson (Nahant) and soph Jim Collins (Chicopee Falls). Soph Bob Molvar (Melrose) and senior Bob Pendleton (Danvers) appear the best in the 880. The Redmen weakness is in the field events. Footrick has to rely mainly on sophs who lack experience. The improvement of the team in these events should determine the amount of success the Redmen can reach this Spring.

UMass Sailors Win In Cornell Regatta

At the first meet of the season, the infant UMass Sailing club defeated four other teams by a handsome margin Saturday, April 12 at Cornell University's informal Spring Invitational Regatta. Sailing on Lake Cayuga, home of Cornell Corinthian Yacht Club, UMass, skippered by VICE COMMODORE FRANK LEWENBERG with Commodore Mel Fisher as crew, sailed a Penguin class eleven foot dinghy to victory over a trickly four legged course in light to medium winds. UMass' consistently superior starts made the difference in the outcome. Even the lack of knowledge of the local waters did not stop UMass. The final score shows the comfortable lead UMass built up.

School	1	2	3	4	5	Total
UMass	¾	¾	¾	¾	2	6
Cornell	2	2	3	3	1	10¾
Elmira	3	3	2	DNS	DNS	20
Wells	4	4	5	DNS	DNS	21
Wagner	5	5	4	4	3	22

THOSE INTERESTED in joining this newly formed and rapidly growing organization come to the next meeting on Wednesday April 22 at 7:30 in Memorial Hall. The guest speaker will be Lightning Class Champion Leonard from Greenfield who sails out of Sparford Lake Yacht Club. He will speak on the many phases of competitive sailing. Beginners are welcome.

Lambda Chi Campus Volleyball Champs

Lambda Chi Alpha won its second consecutive intermural campus championship in volleyball the other night along with its previous basketball championship. This made the third year in a row that Lambda Chi has won the volleyball championship.

This years team was comprised of all veterans from last years team; in fact, Charlie Fohlin, Al Garsys and Wally Carnivale have been on all three of the championship teams. The team was so successful this year, that although it takes two out of three games to determine the winner, they won in two.

The teams which provided stiff competition for Lambda Chi were; Kappa Sigma, Beta Kappa Phi, Baker, and Hills North (independents.)

Frosh Nine Debuts Sat.; Hosts Leicester Jr.

The University of Massachusetts freshman baseball team makes its home debut Saturday afternoon by hosting Leicester Jr. College at 2 o'clock on the freshman baseball field.

LITTLE REDMEN COACH DICK BERGQUIST has selected a squad of over 20 players. Pitching candidates are righthanders Jeff Bell (Reading), Carl Boteze (Pittsfield), Ken Ohlson (Weymouth), Bill Russell (Amherst) and Mike Russo (Deerfield), and lefties Ed Freedman (Newton) and Roy Lasky (Wilbraham).

ALWAYS ON THE LOOKOUT for future varsity catchers, Bergquist has a squad of five. They include Bill Green (Tewksbury), Ray Johnson (Lebanon, N.H.), Buddy Kruse (Brockton), Gil Silva (Taunton) and Don Tudryn (Northampton).

Discussion On Huey Long Will Precede UT Play

The hard-biting, tempestuous and sometimes sordid career of Willie (Huey Long) Stark will be discussed tonight by Professor Robert Friedman.

Willie Stark is the main character in University Theatre's upcoming production, All The King's Men, by pulitzer-prize winning author Robert Penn Warren.

Like the book, the play is based on the life of Huey Long, former governor of Louisiana, noted for his controversial stands on integration in the South.

The talk: Willie Stark, Cause and Effect, will be given at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium, tonight.

LECTURER FRIEDMAN, of the Institute of Public Administration at the University of Michigan, is a specialist in state and local government. Among the works he has co-authored is a monograph on gubernatorial leadership and desegregation in Louisiana.

He has taught at the University of Maryland, Louisiana State University, and University of Michigan since 1961.

He is author of a monograph on politics of constitutional government in Michigan, co-author of a book on Maryland government, and co-author of a book on metropolitan New Orleans.

THE UNIVERSITY THEATRE staging of All The King's Men will be given arena style this Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:15 in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets for the performances are on sale daily at the Student Union ticket counter.

The play is the fourth and last University production of the season.

Fiftieth Anniversary Activities Being Planned

Three members of the Student Union staff are taking an active part in the fiftieth anniversary conference of the Association of College Unions, being held at Indiana University this week.

William D. Scott, Coordinator of Student Activities, is a member of the Association's Golden Anniversary Program Committee. He is a former regional coordinator and executive committee member.

University Orchestra Presents Spring Concert

Tomorrow evening at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium when Ronald Steele raises his baton, the University Orchestra will present its Spring Concert.

Founded by Mr. Steele just last September, the University Orchestra is composed of University students as well as local college students and residents. When the Orchestra began the majority of the players were from Amherst College and the surrounding area. Although these players still form the greater part of the Orchestra, University students have shown increased interest in their Orchestra. It is hoped that the growing participation of University students will create an orchestra more representative of the University community.

MR. STEELE IS well qualified to conduct the seventy member University Orchestra, as he holds a Master of Music degree from the U. of Michigan. While studying there, he taught music and was the Associate Conductor of the 150 member Michigan Youth Symphony Orchestra. During the recent intersession, Mr. Steele was a guest conductor of the Interlachen Arts Academy Orchestra at Interlachen, Michigan.

The University Orchestra has grown larger and more impressive since its well received premiere last December. Tomorrow evening it will present a program of music varying from Mozart to Glonnini. There will be no admission charge for the two hours of musical entertainment we hope you will enjoy.

Operetta Guild On The Road Presents "The Boy Friend"

The Operetta Guild went on the road last weekend and scored a rousing success in the pre-Bowker run of its spring production, The Boy Friend. Sponsored by the Palmer Rotary Club, the show was presented last Saturday evening in the Palmer High School auditorium. The cast and directors, encouraged by this reception, are looking forward to the campus premiere on May 1. Performances will be repeated on May 2, 8, and 9 at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Theatre.

Set on the Riviera, this musical-comedy, written by Sandy Wilson, portrays the romantic adventures and hilarious mishaps of a group of British vacationers and French natives.

DULCIE (ELIZABETH COTTON), Maisie (Jerrie Siegle), Fay (Jean Footit), and Nancy (Ellen Nathan), "Perfect Young Ladies" at Mme. Dubonnet's Village School for Girls, get the show off to a quick-tempoed start. Excited about the up-coming Carnival Ball, they confess their quest for their sine qua non—the boy friend.

One by one the boys arrive (Jon Hutton, Ron Julius, Roy Blitzer, Howard Schlosberg)—only to find their Riviera sweethearts playing hard-to-get. For a while Bobby captures the heart of Maisie with the sure-fire '20's request, "Won't You Charleston with Me?" What can a woman say? The couple launch into a dance as wild as the original jazz age ever saw.

Percival Browne (Ed Cole), British millionaire, concerned with his daughter Polly's unhappy stay, arrives at the School and is greeted by Mme Dubonnet (Judy Karafin) as "Mon petit Percie!" Triggered by the sight of her old flame, Mme. Dubonnet recalls a bevy of events of long ago, centered around Armistice Day, a red dress, and her little ki-ki. At first Percie seems to have forgotten, but he hasn't and an old romance is rekindled.

AS TO THE PROBLEMS of the younger generation, Polly (Margaret McRobbie) and Tony (Pete Fink), son of millionaire families, are found posing as poor girl and messenger-boy respectively. It is love at first sight—until they begin to suspect each other. Together they sing, "I Could Be Happy."

One of the high spots of the show is the high-spirited song-and-dance feature, entitled "Sur La Plage." The '20's bathing suits and fancy free style lend this number special color and gaiety.

Also romping around Mme. Dubonnet's is her sexy French maid Hortense (Penny Eskot), whose delight in exaggerated story-telling can make an afternoon kiss seem like the peak of a Roman affair.

More comedy is provided by Lord Brockhurst (Dick Morril), vacationer and old-aged philanderer, who, to his distress, has his wife "in tow." Lord B. has temporarily substituted his domestic interests with foreign affairs. Lady Brockhurst (Sharon Williams) is appalled, exclaiming, "Hubert, remember! We are British!" Dulcie and Lord B. sing his "theme" song, "It's Never Too Late to Fall in Love." Convinced by Lord B. that "A fiddle that's late is more in

The traditional fraternity sing will be presented this Sunday, April 26, at 1:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. There will be no charge for admission, and the event is open to the public. Always a popular campus event, it is expected that a large crowd will once again attend the sing to hear the fraternities present their selections to be sung in four-part harmony.

Dylan Concert Will Highlight Rights Week

Bob Dylan, young folksinger and lyricist whose songs express the uncertainties of the sixties, will give a concert next Sunday, April 26, at 8 p.m. in the Cage.

Dylan's concert is sponsored by the University's Students for Civil Rights, who have organized activities this week around the civil rights theme.

Tickets for the Dylan concert will be on sale all week in the Student Union lobby. Proceeds from the concert are slated to go to S.N.C.C.

Bob Dylan is regarded by many as one of the authentic folk voices of the times.

Mills Men Aid Memorial Fund With Work Day

The men of Mills House will hire out their services to raise money for the Kennedy Memorial Reading Room on Saturday, April 25. They will be available to perform tasks from washing windows to spading gardens

The hours of work will be from 1-4 p.m.; the cost, $5 per worker for the 3 hours.

All interested Amherst residents and University faculty are requested to leave their names, phone numbers, and the nature of the job with "Gush" at the Collegian Office or at Mills.

In case of rain, employers are asked to provide an alternate inside job for the workers.

All requests will be confirmed or denied—hiring will be on a first come first serve basis.

Residential College To Be Discussed

The new Orchard Hill residence complex to be ready for occupancy in September 1 will be the base for a new experimenal concept in living. The complex, located next to Van Meter, will be embarking on a residential college plan which, as a new idea, will move this University to the forefront of land-grant colleges in the nation.

Prof. H. L. Varley of the English department, who will head this unique program, announced yesterday that the Orchard Hill Dormitories will be equipped to provide students with "aacdemic, along with corresponding social and cultural programs."

On each floor of the new residence halls there will be two study lounges which will also be used for formal and informal seminars. Classes will also be held in these lounges.

Each room in the new complex will be well equipped for study purposes and relaxation. There will be a desk running the full width of the room, two study lamps, two desk chairs, one lounge chair, a book case, two wall lamps, two dressers with fluorescent lights above the mirrors, two closets, and two beds which can be used either as twin or bunk beds.

Mr. Welles of the Housing Office, said that the University is "'trying to get as much unity as possible into living and education."

He also intimated that if this experiment proves successful, other residence halls might be adapted to the same system. He stated that female students may sign up at room choosing for this new complex; and men at the housing office.

There will be a meeting at 11:15 a.m. this Thursday at the Student Union, at which time details and further plans will be discussed.

Observatory Nears Completion

The Astronomy Department at the University will soon have its own facilities on campus with which to gaze at the night sky and explore the universe.

An observatory is being constructed in the apple orchard north of the President's house. It will be equipped with a 20 inch reflecting telescope and an aluminum power-operated dome capable of rotating 360 degrees. The tip of the dome will stand approximately 18 feet off the ground.

The Maintenance Department expects to finish the observatory by the end of this semester. A road to the observatory will also be built.

The idea to construct an observatory originated late in 1960 when Mr. L. Miller of Needham, Mass. donated to the University a 20 inch reflecting telescope with modified English mounting and broken Cassegranian focus.

The new observatory, soon to be completed in the apple orchard, is to be an important part of the four college astronomy program.

Maintenance personnel transported the telescope to the campus from Mr. Miller's summer home in Laconia, New Hampshire. Soon blueprints for an observatory were drawn up by Miss Florence W. Stiles of the Physical Plant Department.

Construction of the observatory began late in the fall of 1963, but was quickly curtailed by the arrival of winter weather. Recently, work on the observatory has been resumed.

The observatory is part of the Four College Program. Under cooperative arrangement, UMass, Amherst, Mount Holyoke, and Smith have a joint Department of Astronomy with Dr. Albert P. Linnell of Amherst College as chairman. All advanced courses in astronomy are conducted on a joint basis for students from the four institutions. Elementary courses are given separately.

BAGELS & BLARNEY

Robert Dylan Pro And Con

by DICK DOHERTY and DAVE GITELSON

Most students realize by now that the imaginative Robert Dylan will be featured in concert Sunday evening. People will attend for many reasons, some to criticize, some to admire; but we go to learn.

Since 1961 when Mr. Dylan made hihs debut in Greenwich Village up to this time, he has been a constant subject of criticism and praise.

Few will deny that the young man has an amazing ability for expressing his views on life in music. Whether or not we agree with his attitudes and opinions, we must recognize that he is speaking for a large section of society which has a right to be heard.

His performing style is unique and very personal, but if we do not appreciate it we should at least respect his individuality.

Sunday evening will be an opportunity to hear the "spokesman for the new generation" expound on civil rights; here we can learn the views of others on important subjects. So please go and listen objectively and learn.

Some may be curious to learn something of Bob Dylan's background. He was born on May 24, 1941in Duluth, Minnesota. In the first 14 years of his life he traveled around extensively from Gollup, New Mexico to Cheyenne, South Dakota, Sioux Falls, Kansas, Hibberg, Minnesota and Minneapolis.

He has been influenced most by Woodie Guthrie, and has written a song to him. Woody was the big drive that brought him to New York.

Since then he has sky-rocketed to success in both his performing and writing; and by the way, for those interested, he is very good friends with Joan Baez.

New Bagels and Old Blarney: Let's not forget that Buffy Ste. Marie's record is in stock in the Amherst music shops.

We recommend Bud & Travis in Concert to our readers. These boys (Bud Dashiell and Travis Edmonsen) have long been popular in the southwestern part of the country and are just now starting to find national recognition. They record for Liberty Records and are on sale in Amherst music shops. Their humor is fresh, their timing perfect, the harmony great, and the talent unlimited.

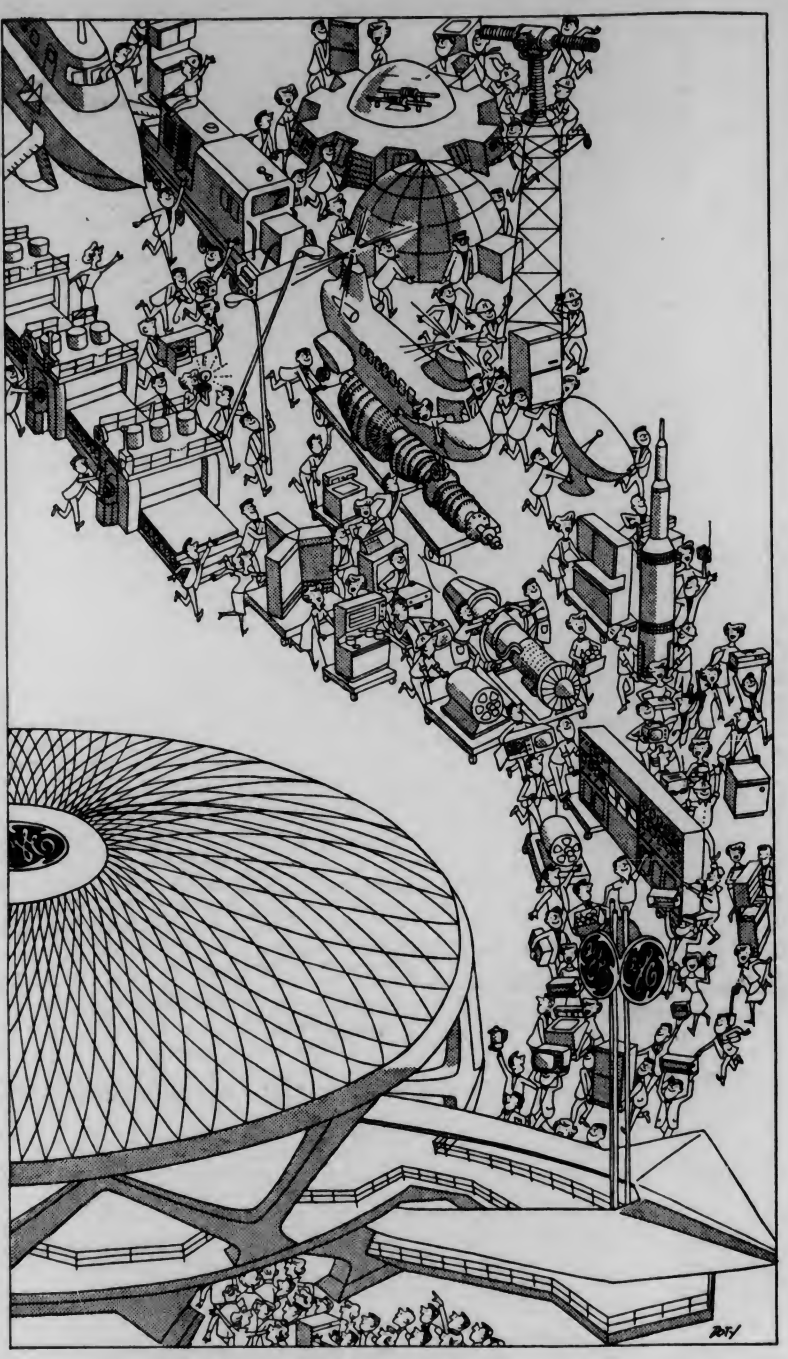
Shotguns, Shooting And Summer In Ole Miss



(A Collegian special report on civil rights)

THIS SUMMER WILL SEE the crisis in Mississippi. The rising anger of the Negro in Mississippi faces the intransigence of the white authorities.

As a result of civil rights activity in the last two years, the Negro in Mississippi has come to realize that he has options other than compliance, and that his political, economic, social and educational deprivations need not be suffered forever in silence. Things can never be the same in Mississippi again. This awakening is largely due to the efforts of existing civil rights organizations, and most especially S.N.C.C.'s voter registration drive.

On the other hand, there is the brutal determination of the white authorities in Mississippi to continue to deny the Negro population their rights.

Already there have been demonstrations. Four young teachers were shot during a recent demonstration at Jackson State College, which was hitherto considered 'safe' by the white authorities.

The authorities are arming themselves as the New York Times described recently ... 'Jackson has 400 policemen, mostly tough young recruits who have joined the force in the last year or so, and is adding 35 more. Last year Mayor Thompson bought 200 shotguns. Fifty more are ordered. Shotguns loaded with buckshot are mounted on motorcycle officers' vehicles and carried in patrol cars. Riot helmets and gas masks have been acquired for every officer.

Two city trucks have been equipped with searchlights and converted into troop carriers. Three flat-bed trailer-trucks are now wire enclosed paddy wagons for hauling away demonstrators in wholesale lots... The pride of his (Thompson's) force is a special riot control car, known locally as 'Thompson's tank'. It can carry policemen and two drivers into a crowd—shotguns bristling out of gun ports, tear gas and other weapons inside!

The Council of Federated Organizations, which includes the N.A.A.C.P., C.O.R.E. and S. N. C. C., has set up such a program. Students from the North will work for the most part in Freedom Schools which are now being set up all over the state.

It is hoped that these schools will be allowed to do their work without interference from the Mississippi authorities, but in view of their present attitude this seems to be unlikely.

The Freedom Schools will be flexibly organized so that they can continue to work without disruption even in the event of mass arrests. Pupils will be drawn from the 9th and 10th grades, and the subjects taught will include reading, writing, civics and domestic science.

The program is planned to start immediately after the end of the summer term. Teaching in the schools will begin on June 7th, but every teacher will have been given several days training beforehand.

Boyfriend ...

tune" and "a ruin can be charming," Dulcie chimes in and admits to the fact that "the old wine tastes much nicer."

Also appearing is a gendarme (David Bachman).

AFTER THESE AND OTHER moments of love, flirtation, and fun, the night of the Carnival Ball arrives. Exciting entertainment is provided by Pepe (Ron Julius) and Lolita (Betty Costa), the curren trage of the Continent, who dance the sensational "Carnival Tango." Finally the stroke of midnight tolls—the masks fall, the mysteries are solved, and a propos to the spirit of this charming, wacky, delightful burlesque, all the glass slippers fit. The boys get the girls (or did the girls get the boys?). In the grand finale the young lovers proclaim their culminating, simple, heart-rending vows, "In our attic we'll be acstatic—like lovebirds up in a tree! All we want is a room in Bloomsbury!"

Yes, it's corny in places, but the spirit is refreshing. The professional quality of the performance turns what could be a farce into a thoroughly entertaining tongue-in-cheek satire. The story is not without plot, and the humor is as appealing today as it was sixty years ago. The Boy Friend, which was acclaimed by countless critics during its two-season run on Broadway, has all the singing, dancing, and rollicking fun necessary to ensure its audiences of four evenings of great entertainment in the Guild tradition.

The "Progress Corps" comes to the Fair

General Electric men and women have been gathering at the New York World's Fair, bringing the latest developments from the wonderful world of electricity.

They've made their pavilion — Progressland — entertaining. It's a bright show, enhanced by the master showmanship of Walt Disney.

But, more than that, it's your chance to see, as in no other way, the career opportunities offered in the electrical industry. For here, under one huge dome, is assembled a full range of the electrical ideas that are helping millions of people throughout the world progress toward better lives. Ideas that come from the people at General Electric, who form a real "Progress Corps."

There are new electronic ideas for medicine that promise better patient care in our hospitals. Ideas for more efficient factories, less-congested transportation, better community lighting, increased highway safety, and more comfortable living at home. And there's the first large-scale public demonstration of nuclear fusion —the energy process of the sun.

For you, Progressland is a rare chance to see what General Electric can offer in terms of a meaningful career in engineering, finance, marketing, law, sales and many other specialties.

If this looks like your career path, talk to your placement director. He can help qualified people begin their careers at General Electric.

In Today's Edition

As our front page banner proclaims, this is Civil Rights week. The propensity of material in today's issue concerns the activities celebrating the occasion here on campus and the meaning of Civil Rights. The Collegian has carried much editorial page material this year berating segregation, extolling or explaining the civil rights issue.

When it came to devoting nearly another full paper to the same theme, there was the natural question, "Is it worth the space?" Obviously, the answer was, Yes.

If you are tiring of the integration crisis it may be the fault of our presentation of material; but we fear it's the same old problem: no matter what the subject, if it is continually discussed, people tire of it. Well, we certainly hope you treat today's contents as more than filler. Remember—even being passé can become passé if you let it.

This Is The Week That Is...

by PHILIP JOHNSTON

Students for Civil Rights is presenting a Civil Rights Week at the University in an attempt to demonstrate that the struggle for human dignity is the most significant and dramatic issue facing the American society today. Panel discussions, concerts, and rallies are not ends in themselves but, rather, they represent the means by which those dedicated to the achievement of racial justice may witness the reality of that dream.

We Americans speak quite glibly about freedom, about private initiative, free enterprise and a host of other concepts which, for 22 million of our brothers, are simply non-existent. We find it difficult to understand the bitter anger of the Negro community and we are deathly afraid of facing the brutal hatred against the Negro which has grown in our own society. This attitude is dominant in the North, as well as in the South, and the recent episodes in Boston only confirm this.

The question confronting our society today is whether or not we are prepared to convert the myth of liberty into a reality. Those who are opposed to civil rights complain that strong actions, such as sit-ins, boycotts and other forms of demonstration only incite bad feelings, and that the civil rights movement is not changing the opinions of anyone. This argument is quite irrelevant, however, since there would be no need to create bad feelings or to change anyone's mind if the problems were not already present. The murders of innocent children praying in church, the shooting of Medgar Evers and the hurling of rocks and bottles at an NAACP float in Boston are symptoms of the disease within the white society. There is something terribly wrong with a supposedly free nation which tolerates open defiance of the law and the unspeakable wrongs which have been committed against the Negro for one-hundred years.

It is the hope of Students for Civil Rights that the student body of the University will begin to actively consider the civil rights issue and that we can then build a climate of opinion which will aid the cause of the Negro. This problem is by no means remote, because it affects the white man as well as the Negro. Any American who fails to act on a question concerning the virtual enslavement of millions of other Americans is being negligent in his obligation to his society. The philosophy of the civil rights movement, in general, is based upon the philosophy of human justice, and this is the true theme of our Civil Rights Week.

The panel discussions on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will serve to enlighten listeners on the specific issues related to the movement, the rally on Saturday evening will be an outpouring of personal feelings on equality, and the Dylan concert on Sunday will be a musical interpretation of the struggle to build a new world. We are confident that these programs will provide sufficient stimulae to our thinking processes as well as our emotions, and that the week's activity will aid in developing an awareness on this campus of the Negro's problems.

We feel that this awareness is long overdue; we ask for your help in battling the disgrace of discrimination, and in building this new world which, as Bob Dylan says, is "blowin' in the wind."

Revamping Policy

by KEN FINEBERG

The time has come for the United States to carefully analyze its position concerning relations with President DeGaulle and terminate its conservative policy concerning France. At present, Washington feels DeGaulle's antics in Europe and Asia are making him a nuisance but are not seriously altering United States' influence in areas of tension. However, the United States should not continue this policy of "let the baby play". DeGaulle's long-range plans could do much to solve the cold-war conflict and Washington should reconsider its attitude towards France.

The basis of DeGaulle's new policies is the new role he feels Paris should hold in the balance of world power. DeGaulle favors a third force, a European Community, with Paris as its head, which would be the arbitrator in a Soviet-American stalemate. With this concept of a "third force", on equal footing with the U.S.S.R. and America, DeGaulle has rejected a NATO nuclear force and initiated a nuclear program of his own, free from American obligations.

France has attempted to increase its influence in Asia by recognizing Red China and advocating neutralization of Southeast Asia. Paris feels there can be no solution to the Vietnamese problem as long as Washington continues to refuse to recognize the communist government. They advocate a plan of neutrality with the United States, Red China, and France as the arbitrating body.

DeGaulle's plans should be adopted. The United States cannot continue to play king. The war in Vietnam is not going well, and new strategy must be initiated. A revamping of policy is necessary.

A REVIEW

Dancing For Joy

by MIKE HENCH

Creative, intelligent choreography; lithesome, near-professional dancing, and great variety provided an audience of almost five hundred with a very entertaining evening last week. In addition, the fact that four men were included in the program, was an indication that modern dance has come of age at this University.

The tone for the evening was set with the dance "Vissionnaire," a balanced piece of intricate choreography done to Guaraidi's "Cast Your Fate to the Winds," choreographed by Mrs. Norma Hench. Maryellen Brown and Judy Dana performed in their interpretation ofa rather innocuous bit of Chopin, which they entitled "Unison-Schism."

The tinkling of Chopin gave way to a militant Bernstein, which Eleanor Harrington saw in "Two's and Three's." This number had wit, bounce and humor as well as near flawless execution.

Then, "Happiness Remembered" was danced and choreographed by Lorna Ross and Eleanor Smith to the strains of Ravel. Lonely young loveliness was Miss Smith as she soloed in the early, bright movements. Then the hauntingly lovely Miss Rose took the stage and commanded it with almost classical ballet.

But the poignancy could not last in the sexy blare of Elmer Bernstein's "Clark Street." Marsha Leisher "knocked 'em dead" with the choreography and dancing of her "Opus Jazz." Brassy, but not bold, intricate, but not cluttered, this dance was the most professional piece in the show.

Another jump-shift brought Tchiakowsky, Catherine Noel and Bill Heinold together in a pas de deux, with many difficult lifts, entitled "Yearning."

George Powers was excellent in the use of his tap-dancing feet in "Crazy Rhythm," a refreshing break in the modern ballet.

Hands were the chief element in "Rondo," a Bach rendering by Georgia Reid (the Modern Dance Club advisor.)—hands that moved meaningfully, gently in grass-softness.

"Fiesta" was all fiesta in the mind of Cynthia Tucker. She was joined by Don Kingsbury in a merry, excellent dance. Hats were used well, and hats off to this couple for some of the finest moves in the show.

And what should more fittingly end the program than "Hoedown" which was as American and modern as Aaron Copland, and gave us Elaine Baxter's and Barbara Balakier's contemporary non-square dance—pitting three young men against three young women.

We would love to see the whole show again, and feel sorry for any who missed it; hoping that these same talented people will be around next year to provide packed houses with more modern, gifted dance.

Letters To The Editor

Off - Campus Stew Cooking

To the Editor:

I am completely fed up with the restrictions put on the responsible female residents of this campus. I am not talking about dormitory rules, although there is certainly room for improvement here too. What I am talking about are the ridiculous rules prohibiting off campus housing for undergraduate University women. There is absolutely no reason at all why senior women and those over twenty one, at least, should not be allowed to live off campus. Lacking any really sound reason for the prohibiting rules, the Dean of Women's Office has taken to giving such absurd ones as the responsibility of running an apartment is so great that it would interfere with one's studies. It is amazing that living off campus doesn't have a similar result on the men students, all of whom are allowed to live off campus if they wish. It seems much more probable to me that the exact opposite would be true. Mass living has never in the past been known to have a more beneficial effect on individual initiative and ambition than the relaxed atmosphere of a home.

When all is said and done, however, it all boils down to the question of fairness and the women students on this campus aren't being dealt with fairly. In an age when the equality of men and women has been acknowledge so universally in this country, it is simply not fair to allow the men on this campus privileges not similarly accorded to the women. It is frustrating and degrading for a woman of twenty-one to be told that she is not mature enough to handle the responsibilities that eighteen and ninteen year old boys are expected to be able to face and are facing day in and day out as commuting off campus residents of this University.

The following letter was received with a list of 250 signatures, appealing the change in HER weekend. —Ed.

To the Editor:

Although two hundred fifty male and female students may be a vast minority on a campus of eight thousand, we feel that we may hold a majority opinion and would appreciate a chance to show it by letting all know that the HER Weekend Dance has been changed from the traditional semi-formal style to a Bermuda hop.

You may say "Great—what a novel idea!", but reconsider! This isn't just any week of the year, it is supposedly a special weekend—one during which the girls have not only the opportunity to express appreciation but also the opportunity to show how they wish to be treated by the boys all year (and we certainly hope girls don't want to be treated like slobs!) But, let's not leave out the boys! Do they want a casual dance after the times they have "scrimped and saved" to take the girls to a nice dance because it was a special weekend?!?! Do they want a decline in femininity?!?

Because of the short time, we were unable to contact many people. Any who support our idea should sign petitions circulating or those in the Collegian office or start their own.

Don't let slovenliness reign as Queen of HER Weekend dance!!!

Angel Flight To Honor Co-eds

In ceremonies at Westover AFB Saturday evening, two very young ladies became honorary members of the organization honoring their father, Air Force Lt. John P. Granville, missing since he and his jet aircraft disappeared eight years ago.

Sharon, 10, and Kathleen, 8, became the youngest members of the "Angel Flight" of the John P. Granville Squadron of the Arnold Air Society. The Squadron, organized at the University of Massachusetts campus less than two years ago, was chartered in honor of the father of the girls and found a place for the girls in its Air Force ranks this year by creating the Angel Flight—all co-eds, with the exception of the two girls.

From Wollaston, Mass., Sharon and Deborah received their memberships from Angel Flight Commander, Sheila Mullane, at a dining in ceremony in their honor.

Their father, the son of Arthur C. Granville, an attorney at Wollaston, graduated from Quincy High School in 1949 and attended the University. A member of the football and basketball teams, and vice president of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, he graduated in June, 1953, entering the Air Force as a second lieutenant.

Upon completion of pilot training and following 282 hours of flying at Otis AFB (assigned to the then 437th Fighter Interceptor Squadron), Lt. John P. Granville and his F-94C Starfire jet were reported missing on November 10, 1955.

Arnold Air Society Elects Student Cadet Colonel

Cadet 1/Lt. James C. Fleming has been elected to the post of Cadet Colonel in the Arnold Air Society and commands Area "A"—the New England area represented by over 12 colleges which have squadrons in the national organization.

Cadet Fleming, son of Mrs. James C. Fleming, Sr., resides at Atwood Street, Wakefield, Mass., and graduated from Wakefield High School in June of 1960.

Cadet Fleming, a junior, is majoring in history. He is a member of Phi Mu Delta fraternity and is now assistant pledge master of his fraternity. He also has held the position of Executive Officer in the Air Cadet Squadron during his sophomore year at the university. He has also held the position of Administration Officer in his local squadron of Arnold Air Society.

Cadets View Defense Base On Washington Field Trip

Mary McCarthy, novelist and Air Force instructor returned from Washington, D. C., last night after a weekend field trip at the Capitol and its chief defense base, Andrews AFB, Md.

The cadets of the 370th AFROTC Cadet Wing were accompanied by their commander, Robert Moore, and AF Lt. Col. Roy Simmons, professor of Air Science at Univ. of Mass.

Departing from Westover AFB Saturday morning, they learned principles of navigation and studied basic meteorology while in the air and, at Andrews AFB, witnessed ,demonstrations by an H-43B "Muskie" jet helicopter and by the security guardsmen and dogs of the base police department.

Escorted about the air base by its Information Officer, Maj. Kenneth F. Becker, the cadets also were briefed about the Air Force Systems Command. Sunday, after attending religious services at the military chapels, they visited the site of John F. Kennedy's grave, laying a wreath there as representatives of the University of Massachusetts students and faculty.

A sidelight of the trip occurred when the Wing Commander, Cadet Moore, welcomed Maj. Gen. Paul Scheidecker, AF Director of Accounting and Finance who visited the University last month, an honorary membership in the campus Arnold Air Society's John P. Granville Squadron.

Middle East To Be Subject Of Lecture

Professor Carl Brown, a specialist in Middle Eastern Studies at Harvard University gave a lecture on "North African Nationalist Movements and the Emergence of Independent States" last Friday, April 17, 1964. This lecture was sponsored by the History Department. Professor Brown dynamically pursued the devolopment of Nationalism and Independence in the three countries Algeria, Tunisia and Morocco.

Professor Brown explained that now independence has been achieved in the three countries, it is time for active scholarship; for North Africa can serve as a good laboratory for the study of nationalism and independence. Tunisian Nationalism was gradual while Algerian was abrupt. Morocco's Nationalism came late. Thus there was a marked difference in the three countries, which makes them interesting studies for scholars.

Tunisian Nationalism was a result of slow but steady development. There were four periods. They are (1) period of quiescence and an attempt to understand the situation from 1881 to roughly the end of the century; (2) period of the Young Tunisians, a small body of would-be westerniers from c. 1898-1912; (3) period of the first mass nationalist movement under the old Destour from 1919 until c. 1934. (4) period of the combined political and social revolution. The age of Neo-Destour until independence. Directly opposed to this gradual struggle for independence in Tunisia was the bloody struggle in Algeria.

In Tunisia natives were able to work through their own political organizations. There was a leniency on the part of the colonizers in this country. Algeria, however, had no time to come to grips with their colonization. They were instituted as three departments in the French Republic. Thus their independence came as a result of a vicious civil war. The Algerians were not allowed to work through their own political groups. The Front for National Liberation, which led the successful struggle for independence from 1954 through 1962, represented more nearly a rejection of three move-

Music Hour To Feature Barbershop Quartet

This Sunday at 3:30 p.m. the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union will be filled with the sound of ringing chords in the form of barbershop harmony.

The Northampton and Pittsfield Chapters of S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. (Society for Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America) will present two choruses, with medleys of old familiar songs, and unfamiliar tunes done in the barbershop style.

Several quartets will be presented, and each will offer songs in its own style. Variety will prevail as songs from slow "tear jerkers" to jumpy "gut busters" are sung by men with four-part harmony in their hearts.

This show is possibly the beginning of a barbershopping group on the campus, and interested students are traveling to Northampton. Other interested male students are invited to an informal session after the show in the Student Union.

Netmen Defeat Brandeis, UNH; Redmen Show Conference Depth

by DAVE PODBROS

After two matches a strong UMass varsity tennis team appears to be the team to beat for the Yankee Conference Championship.

LAST WEDNESDAY AT BRANDEIS, the netmen played several close individual matches and came out winning 8-1. Rodger Twitchell had an easy win in the first spot, 6-0, 6-0. In the second and third spots, where perhaps the best men for Brandeis were seeded, Bob Neal lost a long and well played match 6-1, 0-6, 10-12, while Mike Rose won 6-1, 6-3, respectively. In the fourth spot Dick Leete came from behind after loosing the first set to win his match 2-6, 6-0, 6-4. In the fifth spot, Bob Greenberg won his first intercollegiate match in singles, with a final score of 6-0, 6-3. Billy Martin and Bob Johnson wrapped up the singles wins in the fifth and sixth spots, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2 and 6-3, 6-1, respectively.

IN THE DOUBLES the story was the same as Martin and Greenberg in the first doubles, Rose and Leete in the second, and Johnson and Harper in the third, teamed up to make the final score 8-1.

The second match of the season, the first in Yankee Conference competition, was last Saturday against a weak New Hampshire team. The only difficult match was the third doubles which went three sets but was won for UMass by Hugo and Kozik. Rodger Twitchell, Bob Neal, Mike Rose, Dick Leete, John Harper, and Bob Johnson were the one, two, three, four, five, and six singles players respectively and they won 6-0, 6-1; 6-3, 6-2; 6-1, 6-1; 6-0, 6-0; 6-0, 6-0; and 6-1, 6-1.

The third match is today at 2 p.m. against Springfield College, a team that defeated UMass last year in a very close match. Coach Steve Kosakowski said that he was looking forward to winning.

Lowell Tech Bows To Redmen Golfers

Led by captain George De Falco, the varsity golf team opened the 1964 season with a 4½ to 2½ win over Lowell Tech.

De Falco, the medalist with a 75, easily won his match. He started off the back nine with a birdie and an eagle after a fine two over par front nine. Also winning their matches were basketball captain-elect Charlie O'Rourke, sophomore Dave Wells, and Frank Pluta, while Bill O'Donnell halved his match. Wells played a fine round (79) in this first varsity outing.

The golfers open up their Yankee Conference season with a match against Rhode Island, a strong contender for the Yankee Conference championship. The swinging Redmen will need an all-out effort to capture the match.

equally matched. Coach Footrick has never been able to defeat Springfield in spring track, and he would like to beat them just once before his retirement. The team's biggest weakness is lack of depth. In 6 of the events won by the Redmen, New Hampshire took second and third. This means that if Springfield takes those firsts UMass will be in serious trouble. With a little luck Coach Footrick should get his first victory over Springfield.

Baseball ...

ROD COREY took over the pitching chores and struck out the last two batters. That was all the scoring as far as the Terriers were concerned as Corey worked the last 6⅔ innings allowing two hits and one walk.

Mass got its last run in the seventh, also unearned, after Della Piana reached on a two base error. He was advanced to third by a Kuczynski single, and scored on a neatly executed double steal.

Mass now faces a busy week of four games including a Tuesday contest against UConn at Storrs, a trip to Amherst College on Wednesday, and a two day home stand against Vermont Friday and Saturday.

UMass, Amherst, Physicians Report Football Findings

Physicians and trainers studying injuries of Amherst College and University of Massachusetts football players have concluded tha low professional shoulder pads permit neck injuries which can be prevented through the use of other pads.

Such injuries, which sometimes leave life-long medical difficulties, are especially common among players of a certain body build.

Dr. O. Donald Chrisman, associate Amherst College physician, and Dr. George A. Snook, consultant at the University of Massachusetts, who are both practicing orthopedists, will report their findings at the meeting of the American Medical Association in San Francisco June 25. Their studies, carried out with the collaboration of Joseph Stanitis, Amherst's football trainer, and Victor Keedy at the University of Massachusetts indicate that higher pads which limit the full range of lateral flexion (motion of the neck from side to side) prevent injuries which can occur when the lower pads are used.

The physicians report that the injury usually called "nerve pinch"—a sharp pain from neck to hand with inability to move the arm for several minutes—is not a pinch but a stretch. This stretch is usually caused when a player's head is pushed to one side on contact with a ball carrier's leg or hip. Once such an injury occurs, resprain is common. "It has not been previously recognized," the report says, "that limitation of neck motion, neurologic changes and hypertrophic arthritis can be long-term residuals."

Dr. Chrisman said 22 injured players and 24 normal players were studied over a five-year period. In addition to Amherst players the studies included a number of athletes from the University of Massachusetts. Clinical and x-ray examinations were conducted, game films were studied, and neck motion measured on a standard scale.

These studies indicated:

1. That players of a certain body build are most susceptible to neck injuries. Usually the injury prone individuals fall between the "fire plug type" and the "giraffe type." Predictions can be made about who the susceptible individuals will be from measurements of the range of lateral neck motion.

2. That for players susceptible to such injuries the low professional pads which allow full lateral neck motion fail to provide adequate protection.

3. That such neck injuries can cause long-lasting difficulties. Many players so injured never regain their normal lateral neck motion. The increase in the number of athletes throughout the country wearing collars on the field is an indication of the recent upswing in neck injuries caused by inadequate protection.

Dr. Chrisman emphasized the responsibility of institutions to provide the best possible protection for players. "The boys come to us in good health," he said. 'It's our job to do everything we can to assure that they leave college in the same state."

Moroccan Nationalism was represented by two schools, Islamic reformism and modern western orientation, which tended to work together until independence. Also Morocco was fortunate enough to have an increasing identification of the Sultan (king) Mohammad bin Yusuf (reigned 1927-61) with the nationalist movement. Moroccan nationalism and independence came late but swiftly.

Redmen Nine Bow To Trinity, But Dump B.U. In Feature Tilt

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts baseball team ran its record to 2-1 by splitting a pair of games played this past weekend. The Redmen bowed to Trinity in a 13 inning game, but then came back on Saturday to dump Boston University. The highlights of both games were the fine relief jobs turned in.

Against the Bantams, Mike Johnson got the call and worked the first five innings. He was touched for three hits and an equal number of runs, one of which was earned, in the fifth inning. When Mike left the scene, it was a 3-0 game with the Redmen on the short end.

MASS. STARTED the long road back with single runs in each of the next three innings. Jim Kuczynski began by hitting a long home run. The Redmen struck again in the sixth inning. Dennis Della Piana reached on an error and was singled home by Tony Simone, who pinch hit for Al Nordberg. The Redmen added another in the seventh, as successive singles by Joe Apicella and John Awdycki drove in Paul Caisse.

The teams then played on even terms until the 13th when the Bantams struck paydirt. With Jim Ritchie on the mound, Trinity hit for a single, a sacrifice, an intentional pass, and a hit batsman to load the bases. Don Moonbes then laid down a squeeze bunt to score Dave Ochs with the deciding run.

The hit and run wiped out a fine relief job by Ritchie who worked 7⅓ innings. He gave up just the lone runs and four hits. Dave Lazzerini worked the entire 13 innings for the Bantams giving the Redmen eight hits and three runs, but only two earned.

ON SATURDAY the team travelled to Boston to face BU. A big start got the club rolling as they came up with six big runs, all of which were unearned. Jim Kuczynski was the hitting star once again as he came up with four singles in five trips. The first of his hits drove in two runs in the first. Then with two men on base, Bill Crane and Ken Kamena walked to score another. Ross Piken then helped his own cause by singling in two more. Joe Apicella came up with a hit to get the last run across.

With this smooth cushion Mass. seemed on the verge of rolling up a score and coasting to victory. Such was not the case, as Piken had control problems, and the Terriers capitalized for three runs in their half of the first. Four walks and a triple did the damage as the margin was cut.

The bottom of the third saw the end of Piken as he gave up another run and retired with the bases loaded and one out. In his 2⅓ innings of work, Piken allowed just three hits, but seven big walks spelled his down fall.

Lacrosse Team Wins First; Down Bowdoin Bears, 7-3

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The Bowdoin Polar Bears traveled from faraway Brunswick, Maine, to play lacrosse against UMass Saturday afternoon. The Redmen had dropped their first two starts, while Bowdoin had a 3-2 record, holding victories over Adelphi, Lafayette, and Lehigh. Unfortunately for the Poar Bears the Redmen finally jelled, coming up with an easy 7-3 victory.

For most of the first period the game was scoreless but at 10:43 Redmen Co-Capt. Steve Harrington popped a shot past Bowdoin's Bill Westerbeke for his first goal of the season and a 1-0 lead.

HARRINGTON SCORED HIS SECOND GOAL of the game at 5:04 of the second period on a long shot from 15 yards out. Gordie Webb got the assist. Five minutes later "Harry" had his third goal, this time on a beautifully executed fake which sent him in alone to score. With two minutes left in the half Bowdoin's Dave Wilgour scored, firing over Redmen goalie Dick Baird into the net, making the score 3-1 at halftime.

IN THE THIRD PERIOD the Redmen really got hot, scoring three quick goals. Co-Capt. Frank Infusino scored at 1:19 on a pass out from behind the net by Steve Harrington. Then at 2:58 Soph Fred Thompson with a beautiful fake scored making the score 5-1. At 4:50 Charlie Glew set up a goal by Al Morris and at 9:24 Soph Walt Gustavsen scored on a fine play giving the Redmen a commanding 7-1 lead.

Bowdoin came back at 13:38 of the third period with a goal by Chris Emmet, and Dave Kilgour scored his second of the game near the end of the last period but the game was out of reach. The Redmen had their first victory of the season.

A lot of credit should be given for the fine effort on the part of the Redmen's defensemen — Joe Doyle, Ed Toner, and Hal Ryder. Because of their fine play Redmen goalie Dick Baird was called upon to make only 5 saves, while Westerbeke, the Bowdoin, goalie, had 19.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON the Redmen are at M.I.T. in what should prove to be a tough game. Last year, UMass came out on top 5-4. In the nine games played between the two teams the Engineers hold a 5-4 edge.

The Redmen's next home game is Saturday afternoon against Tufts.

NEISA Meet

Sailing Team Places Third At M.I.T.

The University of Massachusetts sailing team took third place at M.I.T. Sunday in its second encounter on the water. Sunday's regatta was the annual NEISA associate - membership championship meet. Sailing in a very shifty and gusty east wind, skippers Chuck Peters and Doug Pearsall with exceptionally heavy combinations of skipper and crew were never able to come across the finish line first, but did manage to consistently place second, third or fourth in a fleet of seven boats.

BOTH UMASS SKIPPERS were sailing in the classic Tech dingies for the first time which accounted in part for the inability to take a first or second. This new experience, however, didn't seem to bother Chuck Peter's masterful starts, as in each of the seven races he crossed the line with the gun well to windward and fetching free air. Both Chuck and Doug showed superior skill in working to windward, often reaching the windward mark first or second, but with the excess weight, would be easily passed on the reaching or leeward leg. In this type of competition, a third place is considered a very respectable finish.

THE SAILING CLUB will host Leonard Pratt, Commodore of the Spoffard Yacht Club tomorrow night in Memorial Hall at eight o'clock. One half hour before the meeting, all interested sailors should be on hand at the same location to make plans for the coming meets, as well as to hear a critique of the previous races.

Track Team Belts UNH, 88-56; Mederios Gathers 21 Points

The varsity track team opened up its season on a successful note last Saturday as they defeated New Hampshire 88-56 at Alumni Field. SOPHOMORE JOHN MEDERIOS PACED THE REDMEN AS HE SCORED A TOTAL OF 21 POINTS. John won the 100 (:10.0), high jump (20'10"), triple jump (42'8"), and took third in the 220. The time in the 100 tied the Alumni Field record.

SENIOR CO-CAPTAIN BOB BROUILLET AND SOPHOMORE DOUG SLOANE won two events each. "Digger" romped easily in the mile (4:25.5) and the 2 mile (9:48.2). Bob Molvar took a third for UMass in the mile. Sloane won the 440 (:52.7) and the 220 (:22.2). Craig Erickson finished second in the 440.

Jim Wrynn and Don Campfield finished first and second respectively in the 880. The winning time was 2:02. Bob Larson and John Harrington took first and second in the 440 yard intermediate hurdles. Both boys ran fine races as Larson's winning time was 59.6. Harrington also took a second in the 120 yard high hurdles.

IN THE WEIGHT EVENTS, the Redmen more than held their own. Gus Anagnotopoulus won the hammer throw with a took of 160'11". Bob Karagosian took a third. Sophomore Milt Morin took some time out between football workouts to take first in the discus (129'7¼"), and a second in the shot-put. Doug Renwick won the shot-put with a toss of 44'10¼". Dan Connors took a third in the javelin while DAVE SADOWSKY AND BOB MURRAY TOOK SECOND AND THIRD RESPECTIVELY IN THE POLE VAULT.

Today UMass will host Springfield in what promises to be one of the Redmen's toughest meets all year. Last year the meet went down to the final event as Springfield prevailed by 1 point, 68-67.

Both teams are weaker than they were last year, but are still

TEP Remembers JFK Renames Chapter Room

In May of 1953, the brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity at UMass received a distinguished visitor. The guest was John F. Kennedy, U.S. Senator from Massachusetts, who visited the campus solely to engage in a political debate with the members of the fraternity.

To commemorate this event, the brothers of Tep have renamed their chapter room in the late President Kennedy's honor.

In a ceremony at the fraternity's Parents' Day last Sunday, the room was dedicated as the John F. Kennedy Memorial Chapter Room. This was the first such dedication made on the UMass campus to the memory of the late President.

LAWYER DAVID SOKOL, who as a Tep brother had been instrumental in bringing Senator Kennedy to the fraternity, presided over the ceremony. He presented to the fraternity a plaque, a framed letter from the late President to the fraternity, and two photographs of Mr. Kennedy taken at the chapter house.

The ceremony was attended by the Dean of Men as well as by the parents of many Tep brothers.

Brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi dedicate JFK Memorial Chapter Room.

Prof Calls Huey Long "Reactionary"

"To simply identify the setting of All the King's Men as a Southern state is not enough" stated Professor Robert Friedman as his only critisism of, what he called an "outstanding work" by Robert Penn Warren.

Friedman speaking on "Willie Stark (Huey Long) Cause and Effect" last Tuesday evening said, "Every aspect of Louisiana at the time Huey Long took power is important to the particulars of the story."

Willie Stark, the "hero" of Robert Penn Warren's All the King's Men, is fashioned after Huey Long, a governor of Louisiana in the 1930's.

PROFESSOR FRIEDMAN of the Institute of Public Administration at the University of Michigan, a specialist in state and local government, cited some of the natural and politcal peculiarities of Louisiana relative to other Southern states: the large Roman Catholic population, high urbanization, and the great natural deposits. Huey Long was, he said, a reaction to a conservative coalition which had long dominated the state.

But he qualified that Long was only a "partial response" to the demands of the populous. His programs were "not so different from those of other Southern demogogues", and never reached the basis of the problems.

FRIEDMAN called Long "a corrupter of morality", believing that anyone could be bought and that the end justifies the means, but he gives Long credit for giving government a "positive roll" with his "modest program of social reform." For the first time it appeared that "the government was there to serve."

The professor said that it is a

Midnight Senate O.K.'s Budgets

Highlighting last Wednesday's Senate meeting was the debate over the 1964-1965 Budget of The Forensic Society. For the second week in a row the Senators found the important bills coming to the floor after 11 o'clock and the closing of the Student Union.

THE BUDGETS for the Collegian ($29,286), the Index ($39,296), and RSO ($12,000), passed with little debate. It was the question of the "binding clause" on the Forensic Society's budget which brought forth the evenings most extensive discussion.

Senator Ross Jones ('65 Brett) moved to eliminate the clause which stated "any change in trip schedule or transportation must be approved by the Finance Committee." Jones motion had passed when former President Jon Fife rose and moved to reconsider the action. Taking issue with the philosophy and precedent involved in removing the clause, Fife persuaded the Senators to reverse their previous action and reinstate the clause.

STARTING THREE HOURS LATER than usual, the regular Senate meeting convened at 10 p.m. After the presentation of Committee reports, the Senate passed S142 accepting the results of the Primary Elections and the installating of the Senators-at-Large from '65, '66 and '67.

Prior to the regular meeting, the ranks of the Senators were augmented by the class officers for the third Constitutional Convention. An amendment to the Student Government Constitution providing for the election of Freshmen Senators-at-Large in

by LEO J. STANLAKE

Thomas J. McLernon, General Manager of the Metropolitan Transit Authority of Boston, was the guest speaker at the School of Business Colloquim held in the Council Chambers of the S.U. yesterday. McLernon spoke on "Urbin Transit, the Challenge of Today."

The main emphasis of the speech was on the need for improved public transportation in large metropolitan areas.

"AUTOMOBILES cannot effectively handle the job of mass transportation in the cities", he said. "A single pair of rails can carry as many people as twenty lanes of highway."

The Manager stressed that automobiles require the use of land, not only for travel purposes, but also for parking. With an efficient system of underground transportation, the valuable land in the heart of the city would become available for business use. Moreover, the replacement of existing above-ground rail facilities by subways would result in increased value of the adjoining property, he said.

In order to accomplish the extension and modernization of transportation facilities, McLernon said he feels that financial assistance would be necessary on both the Federal and State, as well as the local level. He said that he was in substantial agreement with Gov. Peabody's proposed $2,000,000 program for the extension of existing facilities to outlying areas around Boston.

McLERNON CONCLUDED his speech by calling for "the better use of land for transportation facilities".

The Final Elections for the class officers of 1965, 1966 and 1967 will be held this Monday in the Student Union Lobby from 8:30-5:45.

IFC Sing Sunday

The traditional Fraternity Sing will be presented Sunday, 26, at 1:30 P.M. in the Student Union Ballroom.

There will be no charge for admission, and the event is open to the public.

Always a popular campus event, it is expected that a large crowd will again take in the festivities. The fraternity sing is one of the oldest of the many competitive events in which the fraternities vie against each other for points toward the coveted I.F.C. trophy.

The houses will present their songs in four-part harmony and will be judged by Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Contino of the music department.

The competing fraternities and the songs they will present are: Theta Chi, "Men of Harlick", Phi Mu Delta, "Charlottetown", Lambda Chi Alpha, "Wayfaring Stranger", Zeta Nu, "O My Darling Clamentine", Tau Epsilon Phi, "You Better Run", Tau Kappa Epsilon, "Song of A Troubled Youth", Beta Kappa Phi, "I've Got Plenty of Nothing", Alpha Epsilon Phi, "Brotherhood of Man", and Q.T.V., "Whiffenpoof Song".

'It Takes Two' Sexologist To Speak

Lester Dearborn, director of the Division of Counseling, and marriage counselor at the Boston YMCA, will give two lectures in the Colonial Lounge in the Student Union this weekend.

The nationally recognized sexologist and lecturer from Boston University will address all interested married couples of the university community, Saturday at 8 p.m. on the subject "The Male and Female in Marriage."

Sunday, April 26, at 3:30 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge he will address engaged persons on the subject: "It Takes Two."

Dearborn's speech is sponsored by the United Christian Foundation, which will provide lectures on Sunday, May 3 and 10 for engaged couples.

Dr. Julian Janowitz, of the Department of Mental Health of the University, will speak on May 3 at 3:30 p.m. His subject will be: "Feelings Run Deep."

Student Leaders night will be held Tuesday, April 28, at 7 p.m. at the Cage. It is open to the public, admission free.

Warning Don't Shoot

Last weekend someone broke into a bunker box on the third floor of the dormitories under construction in the hilltop area of the university. Among the items taken were two boxes of .22 caliber and .32 caliber shells of a special type used in riveting guns, according to Col. John Marchant, head of Campus Security.

Warns Marchant, "The shells have yellow, purple or other coloring at the business end. All persons are cautioned that serious injury may result from firing these shells in a rifle or hand gun."

SUG BOARD

Nomination Papers are now available in the RSO office for anyone wishing to be a Candidate for the Student Union Governing Board. These papers must be returned by next Wednesday at 9 a.m. The election will be held in the Student Union lobby on Thursday, April 30, 1964.

Now that you've shrugged your shoulders about the poem, can I interest you in joining a club? Frenchmen say that we Americans constantly form associations (Alexis de Tocqueville). In short, over 100 million Americans belong to some sort of club, league, council, society or order. Here are a few you may want to join. (Do not tell them Inez sent you.)

Anti-Digit-Dialing League — highly recommended for people who suffer from vertigo.

Good Outdoor Manners Association — for those who missed having a Spring Day.

American Society of Mammalogists — I can't remember why.

International Concatenated Order of Hoo Hoo — It's for lumbermen, but maybe they take others.

Spring Has Sprung!

Ah, in the spring our fancies turn to picnic baskets; a loaf in the sun or a loaf to nibble. The first hot day this semester sent the few people left on campus last weekend scurrying out to copious cozy corners, cool, grey grottoes, or just to the grass behind the dorms. Most of the candid shots in this montage were taken at Cranberry Pond.

Base Fees Raised By Trustees

The University Board of Trustees has voted to raise the board and student health fees next year.

Board rates will increase from $164 to $185 per semester for a five-day week of 15 meals and from $200.40 to $224 per semester for a seven-day week.

The student health fee will be increased from $15 to $20 a semester starting next fall.

The increase in the board bill will be the first change since 1957. During this seven-year period, labor costs have risen nearly 30 per cent and the retail food price index has risen more than eight percent.

Present board fees are lower than those of most other schools in the country, and the increases will bring the fees more into line with the national average.

Students, however, will get more for their money in the way of increased service. The present dining commons will open a limited snack bar service in the fall. The full-week meal service that now consists of 19 meals will be increased to 21 meals. There will be a more varied menu and a more liberal policy on "seconds." Book and coat handling facilities will also be improved in the fall.

The increased use of student health services and rising costs for professional employees at the infirmary have necessitated the increase in the health fee.

Poor Politics In An Empty Coffee Cup

from AXEL

Hey, got a dime for a cup of coffee? I'm broke! How many hundred thou do the students put out for taxes, and here I am, sitting in my office, begging a sub-committee for a token compensation.

Well, I'm not really broke, but I do spend more time and money on the Collegian Editorship than I should—by too many standards. (Just try editing the paper without a car, frinstance; and how about those two themes that were due a while back . . .)

About three years ago, another Collegian Editor, Al Berman, wrote many long articles on compensation, incentives, and all. The problem is by no means a new one, and on every occasion seems to reduce itself to mere personal preferences, and opinions.

I see it this way: I want a few bucks that will make me feel more appreciated. Do I have to see Dr. J. to have that analyzed? Well, fella, my mommy and daddy, who do foot the bill for car and college, don't think so. There is much to be gained, educationally and occupationally, working in extra-curriculars, but when I ask for maybe $300 cash from your funds, you hoot and holler. ($300,000 I estimate, you give, outright, to athletics and you holler at me!)

The present consideration of compensation has, I understand, deteriorated into a scholarship-for-the-needy committee. Well, you can keep your lousy money; or take until I graduate to decide that the next editor deserves pay. See if I care . . .

But don't you feel a little cheap about the whole thing?

Emotion Sets Success

Last Night in the Student Union Ballroom the University Theatre presented Robert Penn Warren's "All the King's Men." From the moment the lights first dimmed and the actors appeared from amidst the audience advancing toward the semi-circular stage, the audience and cast were joined in a tense drama of southern politics, sex and life.

Les Titcomb, under the skillful direction of Harry Mahnken, became the controversial Willie Stark, a man demned in the political world, a failure as a father and husband, but all the while trying to do good. Les, as Willie, was simply superb.

Told in vivid Flashbacks, the characters in Willie's life step out from behind the many onstage entrances of the "stark" setting. Each tells of the Willie Stark he knew—his wife, his lover, his political foes, and Jack Burden. Jack, (Jim Wrynn) and the Professor (Doug Brothers) are the two characters who tie together the narrations of their fellows on stage. Bearded Doug, is an admirable Professor, while Jim Wrynn is equally as competent in the role of weak Jack. Only when the characters are off stage does the audience realize the emptiness of the setting. It is as if the audience was given a two hour capsule of a man's life and then are asked "Now what?".

Actors and audience were interwoven—intermingled—through the use of the rounded stage to let Willie Stark live and breath, and die before their eyes. Each character of the group, bathed in his spotlight, became one of the complexities or elements that help characterize a man, as he existed in his environment: Sadie Burke (Katheryn Wilson) his mistress, Sugar Boy (George Dimock) his gunman, (Fran Holliday) his wife, and Anne Stanton (Pat Long) Jack's wife.

It was an opening night that promised all the coming audiences an evening of action; an evening that will make them walk out almost questioning life itself. The author has taken Huey Long and called him Willie Stark; leaving it up to you to judge; providing the facts through the voice of those who knew Willie best, but never actually making the final judgment.

The setting, lighting, and direction were so smoothly integrated that the two hours seemed to have been rocking spirals of the clock. Even though the characters were so close to the audience, the makeup withstood the most careful scrutiny. Only the main set itself, with its mural-like suspension of a coca-cola sign, undiscernable words and a hint of a building, raised questions of purpose and appropriateness.

Thursday evening your best friend could have been on stage and you would only have seen the character he was portraying. The emotional level of the actors at times left the audience reeling. This University Theatre production of "All The King's Men" is an evening well-spent and a play of near professional accomplishment.

N.Y. Stall-In Stops Real Progress

by JOHN B. CHILDS

The threatened "stall in" of New York City highways leading to the World's Fair is history now. It tried and it failed to block traffic as was planned. But the stall-in had failed before it began, it had failed because of its philosophy.

One of the leaders of the stall-in, Herbert Callendar from the Bronx, declared that the World's Fair "portrays an image of peace, tranquility, and progress—the American dream. We want to show that there is also an American nightmare, the nightmare of the way Negroes live in this country." We agree that the American dream is nightmarish in huge chunks . . . but we disagree with this belief that the stall-in is the way to show how Negroes live in this country.

How is it that blocking traffic demonstrates the way in which Negroes live? It may show frustration . . . but that is all. This last vacation we spent two days in Harlem, taking part in a very small scale project of interviewing tenents of apartments. The conditions we saw were appalling. Rats are rampant, filth abundant, rent relatively high. This is the way some Negroes are living in this country. Some time ago there was a rent strike in Harlem. This was directly connected with the conditions of housing. The rent strike demonstrated the frustration of the Negro, it also showed why they are frustrated in this particular instance. The action was directed against the guilty parties involved, the landlords. The stall-in failed to have such a direct connection. Traffic going to the World's Fair has no direct link with civil rights. The stall-in people were thus using innocent people as instruments to demonstrate their frustration. This is wrong.

If there is de facto segregation in schools—then boycott the schools involved, demonstrate against the people involved. If there is poor housing in tenaments—then demonstrate against the landlords and the conditions they foster. The purpose of a demonstration is to demonstrate not only how one feels but why one feels that way. The above types of demonstrating do this, the stall-in did not do this.

There are still rats in Harlem apartments, there are still grasping landlords. All the cars in the city stalled on the highways will not rid Harlem of its rats or its landlords (the terms may be synomous). And because the stall-in had so disconnected itself with such vital down to earth problems as rats, landlords, de facto school segregation, and on down the line, the stall-in failed, before it even was put into action.

Yetta Bronstein For President

Every great civilization is only as great as its leaders. History remembers Pericles, Caesar, Charlemagne, Bismark, and now DeGaulle. The United States is now in the process of searching for its own leader for the next four years. Let's face it, fellow students, it don't look good. Our future leaders don't dramatize the strength that our country needs. But for the sake of you and for the sake of our country the Collegian is releasing a news article that has been received by our office.

It concerns an independent candidate for President of the United States, Mrs. Yetta Bronstein. She is planning on winning through a write-in campaign.

Here is the BRONSTEIN FOR PRESIDENT platform:

1. Lowering voting age to 18
2. Better Government
3. Fluoridation
4. National Bingo
5. Sex Education
6. Stronger Government

Mrs. Bronstein is 48 years old, married and has one son. She has been active in a number of drives to recognize women as the leaders of men.

Let us conclude by quoting from her campaign literature.

"Yetta Bronstein has audited numerous college courses in political science, government and economics, bringing to the White House a combination housewife, woman leader and mother."

It's true. What our country needs is a strong symbol of motherhood.

The Collegian office has more information, if desired.

Letters To The Editor

Mono Less Perilous

(A release from the UMass Infirmary)

Infectious mononucleosis, familiarly known as "mono," is much less of a source of disability than has been feared.

Physicians of the American College Health Association, meeting in Denver, Colorado, last week, heard reports of several studies all of which supported the current consensus that mono is a troublesome but not serious malady. Although the basic cause of the disease is not known, its complications are readily controlled by the use of steroids. Most students who have mono need lose only very little time from their studies. Doctor John Riggsbee of Georgia Tech, reporting on his experience of over four years stated that of over 200 students who have had mononucleosis during that period of time only two had found it necessary to drop out of school on account of this illness. The average time lost from classes in the Georgia Tech series was about three days.

Doctor Gage, Director of the University Health Services and Chairman of the New England section of the American College Health Association, attended the meetings in Denver. He stated that other subjects discussed were concerned with mental health problems, sports injuries, smoking among students, and other health problems encountered among college students. After comparing the experience of our Health Services with that of other schools, Dr. Gage feels that our students are normally healthy and have no unusual problems.

H.E.R. Weekend

To the Editor:
Re: She Makes HER Protest

We feel that two hundred fifty disparaged students ought to get the correct information before protesting. There is not and never was any thought of having a "Bermuda hop" for the dance on HER Weekend. We felt that because of the activities planned, the picnic and the hayrides especially, that we would have a less formal dance than that of last year. This does not however, mean Bermudas! It simply means Sunday clothes rather than special-occasion-dress (tuxedoes and gowns or cocktail dresses). We hope that everyone who goes to the dance will enjoy the G-Clefts, the atmosphere and themselves and that the 250 disparaged students can pick up their hopes.

Pizza—A Sticky Business

To have management, the machine, and money control man is a frightening thought. To allow the University to force machine feeding down our throats for the good of the athletic department is a dangerous action.

If ANY food is to be allowed in dormitories, let it be an INDIVIDUAL consumer decision.

To the Editor:

Dean Field has stated that the ding-dong or fog horn was, "vexatious, exasperating and ear-piercing," to many students on campus. However, the wagon from Tastee Tower does not honk its horn.

Dean Field further stated that, "no one is trying to force students to eat at the dining commons or the Hatch," but says later in his statement, "Both the Hatch and the Newman Center have a wide selection of food, also."

He also stated that vending machines are supplied with sandwiches, and soups. To the best of my knowledge only one or possibly two of the men's dorms have vending machines that supply those items. The other dorms that have these machines find to their dismay that the machines are not in operation.

He stated, "the actions which have been taken are in the best interests of the school, the administration, and the students." If the best interests of the students have been considered, and this I doubt, then it may be noted from his statement that the interests of the administration are placed before those of the students. When are the students going to be considered before the administration?

Huey Long ...

generally accepted conclusion that Long was basically authoritrian. Many believe that the only thing that stopped him from remolding Louisiana government completely was his assisination. Friedman feels that the presense of a strong political force in Washington in the 1930's subdued Longs leadership which was pragmatic as opposed to ideological.

Friedman speculated that the Longs of this country are a greater threat than the ideologies. He went on to say; "If ever the United States goes authoritarian it will do it by extension of the American system."

The peculiarities of Louisianna he said give us a feeling for the setting. The failure to satisfy the popular demands lay the ground for Huey Long. He concluded; "We cannot seek easy answers to complex problems, but the longer problems go unsolved the more likely we are to look to knights so white chargers."

Students Are Victims Of Univ. Regulations?

The American undergraduate lives in a goldfish bown, and his personal life is too often treated as the proper concern of his university.

He is the victim of university regulations which are wishy-washy, namby-pamby evasions of their subjects. Take, as an obvious example, the subject of undergraduate sex. Is there anyone in this reading audience who pretends to know what the University of Illinois officially has to say about sex?

Study the rule book for hours; you will find no specific mention of this central and important problem. But you will find an incredible hodge-podge of veiled references to sex.

University regulations make it almost necessary that the social contact between many students will be superficial, fleeting and conducted within the organized hypocrisy of "exchanges" and other such desperate measures to combat complete social stagnation.

In official statements, deans and college administrators say they are concerned over the "growing promiscuity" of today's college youth. Yet, they seem blind to the fact that modern universities are the cause of a great deal of this promiscuity, and that regulations supposedly designed to curtail it often help bring it about.

In recent weeks, Daily Illinois readers have been told of a co-ed who got a ride to her dormitory in a squad car after University police found her in a parked car with her boy friend. There is no evidence that this couple was doing anything improper. A good number of other cases, many of which include humiliating interviews with deans but never result in formal disciplinary charges, are based on what seems to be (who knows?) official disapproval of "promiscuity."

Yet administrators seem blind to the situation in their own dormitory lounges, where as many as a hundred couples may be "making out" in full view and in a brightly lighted room. If there is anything sacred and anything personal, and anything valuable, about the exchange of affection and love between a boy and a girl, a public dormitory lounge is not a satisfactory place for such activity.

At many universities, dormitory room rules have been adjusted so that couples may visit in each other's rooms during specified periods, say on Sunday afternoon. No dire consequences seem to result from this simple social concession. Activity is now underway at the University of Wisconsin to provide similar reforms, and at the University of Illinois such reforms are even more desperately needed.

If our deans and administrators need first-hand information on how pathetic and furtive the situation has grown, I invite them to make an inspection tour of dormitory lounges this weekend and then consider deeply some of the implications in Paul Goodman's phrase, "growing up absurd."

love and marriage—college style

The bridge from student to married student is a long and very narrow one, laced with parental opposition, financial burdens and immaturity. Yet, thousands of young men and women cross it every year.

How well do they make the transition from carefree, fun-loving "dates" to responsible husbands, wives...and often parents?

A recent nationwide study by Redbook magazine brings to light some of the strains, the dangers and the possible benefits of college marriages. It's must reading for every undergrad!

Civil Rights Week Discussion Panels Open

Civil Rights week commenced Tuesday night with the first of a series of three discussion panels on various aspects of the civil rights movement.

Participating in a discussion on "The Negro and the Federal Government," were Gordon Martin, Jr., Assistant U. S. Atteorney; Robert Cover, a field secretary of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (S.N.C.C.), and William Epton, one of the founders of the Freedom Now Party and formerly the Progressive Labor candidate for Councilman in New York City.

Martin opened the statement periods by elaborating on the tri-part structure of the federal government and surveying civil rights statutes up to the 1957 and 1960 Civil Rights act. These acts outlaw discrimination and intimidation in voting practices and add the right of voting list inspection, respectively.

Admitting that the latter provision has been utilized only twice, Martin emphasized the delays involved in this procedure inherent in the southern court structure.

Cover emphasized the ability of a few Southern senators with seniority and commitee chairmenships to control appropriations and judicial appointments essential to effective execution of existing civil rights legislation.

Epton's opening remarks centered on the fact that "the Negroes' struggle is essentially against the federal government."

Citing examples of federal action in Albany (Georgia), Monroe (South Carolina) and Birmingham (Alabama), he emphasized the discriminatory nature with which the federal government has acted against the interests of the Negro.

He also asserted that the current civil rights bill before the Congress "will not change fundamentaliy the condition of the black people in America, will not give jobs to unemployed Negro workers, and will not provide decent housing for slum ghettos.

"The federal government," he said, "protects the interests of those people who own property."

Baseball Team Trying To Get Back On Win Trail

The University of Massachusetts baseball team will be trying to get on the winning trial in the Yankee Conference race when it entertains the University of Vermont Friday and Saturday afternoons at Alumni Field.

THE REDMEN, 2-2 overall, dropped their league opener at Connecticut, 3-1, Tuesday. Senior righty Rod Corey (Grafton) turned in a fine 4-hit performance but two unearned runs brought his downfall. Corey threw only 80 pitches in 8 innings in his 2nd straight impressive stint. Connecticut, defending YanCon champs, are 1-1 in league play.

VERMONT, coached by Ralph LaPointe, is always a threat for league honors. The Catamounts defeated Navy and George Washington on their exhibition trip, but lost to Hofstra, Long Island U., Rider and Columbia. This will be the season's opener for Vermont, and they, like the Redmen, have a young team. LaPointe is counting on juniors Charlie Foster, Jim Brennan and Carl Martin to carry the pitching load, Martin, a lefty, hurled an 11-inning, 1-0 win over UMass last Spring.

UMASS COACH EARL LORDEN has named Corey as his starter Saturday. "I haven't decided on Friday's pitcher yet," Lorden stated, "but Mike Johnson, Ross Piken and Rick Farrell will be all rested and ready to work." Coach Lorden intends to keep junior righty Jim Ritchie (Grafton) ready for relief work. Ritchie hurled 7 strong scoreless innings in relief at Trinity before losing on a suicide squeeze in the 13th inning.

LORDEN INDICATED that both catchers, junior Karl Kamena (Teaneck, N.J.) and soph Ray Yando (Springfield) will see action in the two games. The starting UMass infield will stay intact with Capt. John Awdycki (Gardner) at first, junior Bill Crane (Marblehead) at second, senior Joe Apicella (Milford) at shortstop and soph Jim Kuczynski (Westfield) at third. "I would like to work a pair of sophomores, Paul Caisse (Leominster) and Bill Cleary (Worcester) into the infield too," Lorden stated. The three outfield spots are wide open with current starters sophs Al Nordberg (Worcester) and Dennis Della Piana (Malden) and junior Steve Wojnar (Holyoke) being pressed by seniors Neil Harris (No. Attleboro) and Tony Simone (Lee).

Musial Rates Dimag Tops: Selects All-Star Squad

NEW YORK, April 28—Former Cardinal star Stan Musial rates Willie Mays and Joe DiMaggio the top all-around ballplayers of the last 20 years. Musial selects his personal major league All-Star team for the more than two decades of his career.

Says Musial, "Ted Williams was the greatest hitter I've seen, but Mays and DiMaggio could do everything on the field. DiMaggio was a picture-book player who rarely made a mistake, and Mays can beat you with his glove, arm, legs or bat."

Naturally, Mays, DiMaggio and Williams form the outfield triumvirate of Musial's personal All-Star Squad.

In the infield, Stan picks former teammates Johnny Mize, Red Schoendienst and Key Boyer at first, second and third, respectively, and former Dodger great Pee Wee Reese at shortstop.

The starting pitchers include Bob Feller, Warren Spahn, Robin Roberts and Harry Brecheen, with relief ace Elroy Face in the bullpen. Catching for this dream pitching staff would be Yankee manager Yogi Berra.

"My selections are based on the players I've seen in the last 20 years," explained Musial, "But Babe Ruth, whom I did not see, rates in my book as the top star of all time. Ruth was an outstanding pitcher and a good outfielder who best combined the abilities to hit for good power (714 lifetime homers) and high average (.342 lifetime percentage). He would have to be number one," concludes Stan.

hitter for the Redmen has been Kuczynski with 5 hits in 16 times at bat. The rest of the hitting has been pretty well divided with Ross Piken having 3 hits in five times at bat and Neil Harris with a double and triple in his four times at bat, Al Nordberg has been doing the long ball hitting so far. Steve Wojnar and Dennis Della Piana are just now starting to hit with consistency.

Phys-ed Profs In Demand

Troy, N.Y. (I.P.)—A new dual-purpose program specifically designed to attract top women students into the critically short field of physical education teachers has been announced by Russell Sage College.

The five-year program permits a student to earn the B.A. degree in liberal arts and a Master's degree in physical education in order to qualify for college teaching.

A four-year program, which also emphasizes liberal arts, leads to the B.S. degree in physical education and is designed to prepare teachers for private schools at both the elementary and secondary school levels. Both programs are such that a student desiring public school certification can meet these requirements through summer session courses.

The new emphasis of the Russell Sage program was approved by the administration after a faculty committee had studied the shortage problem for almost a year and made a recommendation for the change.

first of four in a space of eight days, the first real test of the pitching corps. Coach Bergquist has Carl Boteze, Roy Lasky, and Russell lined up to face Amherst, AIC, Rhode Island, and Trinity. Who gets the nod against each team is still in question, but by the end of the week there will be no further doubts about just how strong the staff is.

Say-Hey Kid Grows Up

Willie Mays' Changing Role

NEW YORK, April 28—Willie Mays has changed. The scared, fun-loving "Say-Hey Kid" of the '50s has given way to the confident, mature elder statesman of the '60's. Willie Mays of Candlestick Park, San Francisco and the Willie Mays of the Polo Grounds, New York, are more than just a continent apart.

On the field Willie takes charge of the outfield, subtly positioning his fellow picket-men according to the dictates of game strategy. It wasn't always thus, but over the years, Mays has had to contend with a series of inept or inexperienced outfielders. It was only natural, therefore that he slowly accepted the reins of leadership.

Now, even the infielders are helped and often directed by Willie. Young Chuck Hiller, a far-ranging second baseman, had the annoying habit of drifting back into people's way on Texas League popups. A patient Willie took Hiller aside and taught him to make quick judgments on pop-ups and to clear the area if they weren't his.

Off the field, too, the Giant image is shaped by Mays, Einstein writes. When manager Alvin Dark was criticized by the press for keeping his pitchers in check during a beanball attack by certain ball clubs last season, Willie, the most obvious target, rushed to Dark's defense. Mays' backing of his manager's orders to San Francisco pitchers to throw only at offending opposing pitchers quieted the criticism of Dark.

In seeking to discover whether the Giant management was cognizant of—and happy with—the role Willie now fulfills for the ball club, writer Einstein questioned a front office official.

"Frankly, the best guide I can think of for our players is Willie Mays," affirmed the Giant bigwig. "When Willie Mays first came to the Giants, everyone looked after him. Now everyone looks up to him."

Rushing Policies Change

One of the candidates for Interfraternity Council president snickered. The other delegates to the IFC nominating convention sat politely, unresponsively, or exchanged knowing smiles.

THE KEYNOTE SPEAKER was Paul Bioland, Dean of Students at Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa, and he was describing a mythical fraternity, Alpha Omega.

Bioland said: "Alpha Omega, an unfortunately fictitious group, emphasizes academics in its rushing and seeks men who would be attracted by this emphasis."

(Twenty fraternities at Iowa State were below the all-men's grade-point average last spring quarter).

"The pledge program minimizes busy-work and time-consuming harassment while pointing up pledge study."

(An Iowa State psychologist reports that 40 per cent of the pledges in the spring of 1961 said they believed the fraternity had hurt their grades).

"SPEAKERS from the faculty and the community are invited to dinner at the house each week to talk on their specialties, current events or intellectual problems. The chapter buys original paintings from the art show for its walls."

(Three Iowa State fraternities have purchased fire trucks, and one owns a hearse).

"Members with artistic skills in art and music are urged to share their interests through house projects, music appreciation talks or concerts and slide shows."

(Several Iowa State fraternity pledges have exhibited their forestry skill by chopping down a cedar tree in front of an Ames children's home).

"SMALL BULL SESSIONS are organized to practice the art of intelligent conversation on questions of intellectual concern."

(IFC — according to its annual report—saw a lag in events between Rush Week and Homecoming this year and scheduled an all-Greek party).

"Members attend concerts, lectures, art exhibits, recitals, plays and other events on campus in large numbers, sometimes as a group."

Errors Prove Disastrous

Redmen Nine Bow To Huskies

by JOHN GOODRICH

On Tuesday the University of Massachusetts baseball team travelled to the home of the UConn Huskies to do battle in a big Yankee Conference game. The Redmen came away wondering just what they have to do to win a game. They out hit the Huskies 6-4 but two costly errors cost them the game as they bowed 4-1.

BOB SCHAEFER had two doubles, one in the third and one in the fifth, and scored on both as he was assisted by errors off of Wojnar and Awdycki. The first time he scored it was on a fielder's choice by Doug King and the second time it was in a sacrifice fly by Dorrie Jackson.

THE LAST HUSKIE RUN came in the seventh as Doug Gaffney hit a long home run. The club had only four other base runners as Rod Corey was tough all day. He gave up just three walks and the only other hit was a single by Steve Penders.

While the pitching of Corey held the UConn pretty much at bay, the slants of Jim Parmelee were equally effective against the Redmen. He neatly spaced the six hits and the Redmen got their only run in the fourth after a single by Steve Wojnar and a long triple of the left field fence by Al Nordberg. On this play, the UConn left fielder, Bob Siegel, hit the wall and suffered a broken nose.

PARMELEE left eight Redmen standing on the bases as he scored his second victory of the year and evened the Huskie conference record at 1-1.

COREY now has worked 14⅔ innings and has allowed just six hits, four walks, and one earned run. He did not see action until the BU game but since then has really been sharp.

MASSACHUSETTS is now confronted with a must-win situation when it faces the Vermont Catamounts in a Friday-Saturday series at Alumni Field. Coach Earl Lorden will have his entire staff rested for this weekend's action. With the Amherst game rained out on Wednesday, Mike Johnson will be ready as will Ross Piken. The former has hurled about ten innings, and has not been hit real hard, but has allowed seven runs. Piken got the win against Coast Guard and worked the first couple innings against BU, but has been fairly wild in both appearances. Lorden will also have good reliever Jim Ritchie available for service.

LORDEN is expected to go with his regular starting lineup of John Awdycki at first, Bill Crane at second, Joe Apicella at short, Jim Kuczynski at third, and an outfield of Al Nordberg, Dennis Della Piana and Steve Wojnar. Karl Kamena will handle the catching duties.

Frosh Nine Resumes Action; Looking For Second In A Row

THE FRESHMAN BASEBALL ACTION RESUMES tomorrow when Dick Bergquist's charges try to make it two in a row after last week's rout of Leicester Junior College The Amherst freshmen provide the opposition this week, and no one is expecting a repeat of the debacle against Leicester when the Redmen won 17-0. Eight of the runs came in the sixth inning, but UMass picked up scores in four other frames off the starting Leicester hurler John Chasse.

BILL RUSSELL of Amherst followed up his successful relief work at Springfield with a one-hit shutout in going the distance. The righthander relied more on control than speed, and it paid off as only three men reached base. Two walks, one to the first batter in the game, and a long three bagger by Chasse constituted the entire Leicester offense for the afternoon.

MASSACHUSETTS used the long ball for their scoring as a .800 slugging percentage for the game will testify. A total of three triples, five doubles, and nine singles were belted around the spacious freshman field located behind the farm area. Marc Greenberg and Frank Stewart swung the biggest bats for the freshmen. Greenberg had triples in the third and fifth frames and a double in the sixth that accounted for four runs batted in. Stewart had a pair of singles and a pair of doubles in the contest to raise his two game batting average to .600. The righthanded swinger from Lynnfield was the only man on the club to collect two hits in the opener in Springfield.

ED POLCHLOPEK, JIM BABYAK, AND RAY JOHNSON also collected extra base knocks off the Leicester pitchers, but the big eight run inning saw errors and walks play a more important part than hits. Relief pitcher Dick Sands, a lefty slow ball thrower, walked four men and hit a batter, and his infield committed two boots. Mass took good advantage of the free base runners with a trio of two baggers that drove in all but one of the runs. One scored on a walk with the bases filled.

SINCE AMHERST COLLEGE is known to have a good freshman squad this season, tomorrow's contest should be a good one. Massachusetts has been improving constantly since practice began a few weeks ago, however the Amherst game will be the

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The Varsity Lacrosse team journey to Cambridge Wednesday afternoon to play M.I.T. and came back with their second victory of the season 6-3. The cold weather did not cool off the Redmen scoring with the team coming up with a 4 goal explosion in the second period to virtually clinch the game.

IN THE FIRST PERIOD at 6:00 Fran Casey scored his first goal of the season to give the Redmen a 1-0 lead which they held until late in the period. Then at 14:13 Tech's Don Yanson scored making the score 1-1 at the end of the period.

THE SECOND PERIOD was a different story with the Redmen's offense breaking out with 4 big goals. First at 3:59 Co-Capt. Steve Harrington got his fourth goal of the season on a rebound shot. Then at 8:30 midfielder Jim Mahoney got a rebound 15 yards out and fired his shot into the net for his first goal of the year. At 11:58 Charlie Glew scored with an assist to Harrington and Glew scored his second of the game at 14:25, this time the assist going to Co-Capt. Frank Infusino. The score at half-time read UMass 5, M.I.T. 1.

IN THE THIRD PERIOD M.I.T. came up with two goals, the first by Ron Mandle and the other by Dick Lipes, but were unable to beat Redmen goalie Dick Baird after that. Baird came up with 8 saves during the game, a few of which were of the spectacular variety. Fran Casey's second goal of the game late in the fourth period added frosting to the cake, with Harrington receiving an assist on the goal. The game ended with the Redmen on top 6-3.

THE UMASS OFFENSE is really starting to sparkle now and would have scored more Wednesday but for the fine goaltending displayed by Tech's Joe Kirk who had 12 saves.

Credit should be given to the team's midfielders who did a fine job in bottling up the Tech offense and ran hard throughout the game.

THE REDMEN NOW 2-2 play Tufts Saturday afternon at 2:00 on the upper athletic field. Last year the Redmen beat Tufts 13-9 and the series stands at 5-3 with UMass holding the edge.

Win All Six Singles Matches

Tennis Team Dumps Spf'ld

by DAVE PODBROS

The UMass varsity tennis team topped off a beautiful Thursday afternoon yesterday, with sweet victory. After losing a close match last year to Springfield College, the netmen turned the tables this year and swept through a good team with an 8 to 1 victory. Rodger Twitchell, Bob Neal, Mike Rose, and Dick Leete in the number one, two, three, and four spots respectively, made easy work of their opponents winning 6-0, 6-0; 6-3, 6-1; 6-0, 6-3; and 6-1, 6-1. In the fifth spot Bob Greenberg had a little trouble in his second set, but finally won the match 6-3, 11-9. Billy Martin completed the clean sweep of the singles by winning in the sixth spot 6-3, 6-1.

THE ONLY LOSS OF THE MATCH came in the third doubles which Steve Johnson and Bob Hugo lost 3-6, 6-8. The other two doubles went to UMass with Twitchell and Neal in the first and Rodger Harper and Mike Rose in the second, being the victors 6-3, 6-3; 6-4, 7-5; respectively.

SATURDAY THE NETMEN HOST FAIRFIELD UNIVERSITY for what could be one of the most exciting matches of the season. At number one singles for Fairfield is Gerry Magner, the captain of the team, and perhaps the best tennis player in Fairfield history. He will play against Rodger Twitchell, one of the best in UMass history. At number two will be Walter Donnelly, another senior at Fairfield and also an excellent tennis player. He will play Bob Neal. The best match of the day, however, is not necessarily the two singles, but the first doubles, when Magner and Donnelly team up to take on Twitchell and Neal. Magner and Donnelly have combined in the past two years to win 20 out of 23 doubles matches, and will definitely be stiff competition for the Yankee Conference doubles champions Rodger Twitchell and Bob Neal. The match starts at 1:30, here on the tennis courts.

Co-ed Gymnasts Debut Friday

This Saturday night the WAA Gymnastic Show "Up & Over" will go on in the Boyden Building auxiliary gymnasium. The members of the Men's Varsity Gym Team will be guests, making the Show co-ed for the first time. The Show will include team numbers as well as individual apparatus events. An exciting feature will be the Criss-cross Vaulting over a high-side-horse, by boys and girls.

This is the first attempt to bring the numerous gymnastics teams together into one large show. It is hoped that it will become an annual event.

A freshman in the show, Marianne Davis, will be trying for the Girls' U.S. Olympic Team in May.

The show will be held on Saturday, April 25, at 8:00 P.M. in the Boyden auxiliary gym.

Lee Oswald's Lawyer to Speak; Claims Case is Inconsistent

THE ATTORNEY who defended Lee Harvey Oswald before the Warren Commission will speak at the University Wednesday night at 8 in the S.U. Ballroom. Mark Lane, controversial civil liberties attorney, and former New York state assemblyman, will discuss "The Case Agianst Lee Oswald." The speech will be sponsored by the Political Science Association.

Mr. Lane makes several points which he contends raise severe doubt as to whether Oswald was, in actuality, the assassin of President John F. Kennedy. He suggests what he feels to be several inconsistencies in the "case" against Oswald, claiming that the Dallas police had assumed from the beginning that Oswald was the assassin, and attempted to fit those facts they had to this assumption.

HE ALSO RAISES the question of whether Oswald, if he was actually the assassin, acted alone or whether he was part of a plot against the life of the President.

Lane claims that there was a meeting between Oswald, Jack Ruby, and Tippet, the slain police officer with a fourth person before the shooting. He declines to name this fourth person, but asserts that he is an influential person in Dallas.

MR. LANE is a 37-year old resident of New York City and graduate of Brooklyn Law School. He became known during the 1950's for his activity in reform politics and civil liberties cases.

He wrote a brief on the Oswald case in December 1963 rebutting the 15 points which Dallas prosecutor Henry Wade claimed proved Oswald's guilt. A short time after the brief appeared in print, he was contacted by Marguerite Oswald and was retained to represent the interests of her son.

LANE HAS VISITED Dallas several times since that time, turning up eyewitness testimony and documentary evidence in an effort to prove Oswald's innocence.

Since the beginning of his investigation, Lane has become convinced that Lee Harvey Oswald is innocent of the crimes charged against him, and he has announced that he will remain with the case until Oswald's innocence can be established.

Students Will Read At Jones Library

Three members of Professor Joseph Langland's poetry class will be reading their works in Jones Library, Amherst, at 7:30 p.m., Tues., May 5. The three—Steve Orlen, David Axelrod, and Judith Kroll (of Smith College)—will each present ten-minute readings in a program with three other student poets from the four-college area.

The readings at Jones Library are a regular monthly function of the Amherst Artist Guild. Each year the Guild asks students to form a program to encourage new-comers.

Steve Orlen has recently competed for the annual Emile Glasscock Poetry Award. He is one of the few UMass student to be invited to participate in that competition. Judith Kroll, who attends Prof. Langland's class through the four-college exchange program, is editor of the Smith College literary Magazine, the Greycourt Review. David Axelrod is editor of the Collegian.

Senator Humphrey Will Be Speaker At Commencement

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota will be the principal speaker at this year's commencement exercises.

The commencement address, on a topic to be announced, will be given June 7. The graduation exercises, closing the University's 101st year, will see 1,000 members of the class of 1964 receiving degrees and 200 graduate students receiving advanced degrees.

A MEMBER of the U.S. Senate since 1948, Senator Humphrey is serving his third term. As Senate Majority Whip, the Minnesota Democrat has been charged with the responsibility of securing passage of the Civil Rights bill. Senator Humphrey is recognized for his leadership in the fields of education, health, international relations, agriculture and civil rights.

He sponsored legislation that established the Peace Corps, the Food for Peace Program, the National Defense Education Act, the Food Stamp Program, the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, the Humphrey-Durham Drug Act, and the International Health Act.

SEN. HUBERT HUMPHREY

THE FIRST American official to meet at length with Nikita Krushchev in the Soviet Union, he has been a U.S. Delegate to the United Nations, an adviser to the American Delegation to the Conference on Nuclear Testing in Geneva, Switzerland, and a delegate to the UNESCO Conference in Paris in 1958.

Before running for national office, Senator Humphrey had been a pharmacist, teacher and Mayor. He attended Denver College of Pharmacy and then went on to become a Phi Beta Kappa student at the University of Minnesota, where he received his B.A. degree in political science. After receiving his M.A. degree from Louisiana State University, he taught political science at Macalester College in St. Paul, Minnesota.

IN 1945, Humphrey was elected Mayor of Minneapolis. In this position he established the first Public Affairs Prof. In Discussion of Appalachia Poor

THE FORMER Governor of Kentucky, and present Distinguished Professor of Public Affairs at the University, Bert P. Combs, will give a public lecture tonight at 8 in the Commonwealth Room. His topic will be "Proverty in the Appalachians: The States and Distressed Areas."

Governor Combs, who was Governor from 1960-64, compiled a distinguishing record, and has been called the best governor Kentucky ever had. Among his accomplishments was the issuance of an executive order prohibiting racial discrimination in public accommodations.

A NATIVE OF the Appalachian region, he knows from personal experience, the problems of the area which have been nationally dramatized most recently by President Johnson's tour last Friday of parts of West Virginia.

Young Inds. To Present Panel on Fall-Out Shel.

THE YOUNG Independents will present a panel discussion dealing with the desirability, necessity, and efficiency of the present fall-out shelter and civilian defense programs, particularly as they apply to Western Massachusetts on Thursday, April 30. A tentative list of panel members includes Drs. Saul Aronow and Frank Ervin, from the Physicians for Social Responsibility, Dr. Curtis Johnson, Department of Agricultural Engineering, and Dr. Edward Soltysik, Department of Physics. The panel discussion will be held in the Commonwealth Room at 8:00, and a question period will follow.

STUDENT LEADERS

Student Leaders' night will be held Tuesday, April 28, at 7 p.m. at the Cage. It is open to the public without a charge.

Critique Is Out: First UMass Course Evaluation

For the first time in this University's history, students' desires to raise academic standards have materialized in the form of a magazine called Critique. Designed to jolt professors and students out of their stoic acceptance of conditions which could be improved by a little honest effort, Critique has made its long-awaited appearance on campus.

If Critique were hardly more than a glorified grapevine presenting systematically compiled heresay it would doubtless improve the current myth infested atmosphere; the magazine will seek to do more than that, however, by promoting an interchange of factual information as well as opinions. Many problems in the classroom stem simply from lack of communication, as the first edition reportedly shows.

Critique will go on sale in the Student Union this week so that students will be able to use these course evaluations to plan their schedule of courses in preparation for Counseling Day. For those students taking required courses, it is hoped that knowledge of what to expect from the course and of what is expected from them will enable them to get more out of the course and perhaps perform better. A hopeful side effect is that professors may be motivated to make changes where needed.

The heart of the magazine is course evaluations based on information from questionnaires filled out by both professors and students. While similar magazines exist elsewhere, such as Harvard and Yale (who were both quite helpful to the UMass staff) the UMass Critique is unique in that is the only publication of its kind to go into the classroom to obtain student opinion. At other schools one or two students who have taken the course write the course summaries. When questionnaires are filled out, they are completed in dining halls, with only 10 to 50% of a class responding, and even the latter responses are written up by students who have taken the course. The UMass Critique has, for the most part, responses ranging from 80 to 100% and, as far as possible, is written by students who have never taken the particular courses they are reporting so as to insure as much objectivity as possible. Separate professors' questionnaires are also a UMass innovation.

Two sorts of feature articles will highlight the magazine. Unsigned articles containing observations about various department by graduating "high cume" majors will appear at the beginning of some departments on a trial basis. If these are found to be successful, many more will appear in the next issue. There will also be a discussion, in the form of signed articles, of such topics as the need for a more realistic marking system and the possibility of creating a Religion Department at the University. Through these features, Critique seeks to encourage and facilitate a continuous dialogue aimed at improving various academic aspects of the University.

As a helpful innovation, the schedules of six departments (which list professors and the electives they will be teaching in the fall semester) will give students information which has been otherwise unavailable or hard to obtain before counseling day. In the next issue of Critique, many more departments will be added to this list. Their ability to gain this information emphasizes that the whole spirit of the UMass. Critique is cooperation between students and faculty. Its existence, indeed, depends on this cooperation.

Students will have an opportunity to make suggestions for the improvement of the magazine by answering short questionnaires inserted in the magazine (to be returned to the lobby of the Student Union.)

With the financial backing of the service organizations, Gamma Sigma Sigma and Alpha Phi Omega, Critique has finally become a reality. The efforts of a hardworking group headed by Mark Cheren, Tony Amico, Rita Crosby, Dick Littlefield, and Ed DeRosa have produced this magazine. The job of the Critique staff is finished. They now give full control to you, the student and you, the professor. The information is yours to do with as you wish.

The Rez

J is for Jazz
Dizzy Gilespie for Prez.

Welcome to the only column dedicated to lovers of modern American music—JAZZ. Each week we hope to bring you the most informative and interesting news spotlighting albums along with other information for the discerning reader.

The dates for The 1964 Newport Jazz Festival have been announced. This yearly event will be held July 2 through 5 at Freebody Park in Newport. Tentative entertainers include Jee Williams, Gerry Mulligan, Dizzy Gilespie (incidentally he's running for President—more news of that next week), and Sarah Vaughn amongst others. The theme of the festival is "Jazz Lives."

Albums recorded live at Newport '63 have been released during the past four months. McCoy Tyner and his group backed up the "New Find" of the festival—Miss Ada Lee—and their album is available on Impulse.

Joe Williams, who breaks up the festival every year, recorded for RCA Victor backed up by Junior Mance, Zoot Sims, Coleman Hawkins, Clark Terry, and Howard McGhee. This album, we believe, was the best album recorded there last summer. Selections include "Gravy Waltz" (the Steve Allen-Ray Bryant tune), and "Anytime, Anywhere, Anyplace."

Miss Dakota Staton, who incidentally began her career in Springfield, had audio trouble during her performance, but they were quickly rectified and the fruits of her efforts are available on United Artist's records.

Also recorded live were Herbie Mann and his Sextet, Joe Daley, Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan, Joe Daley and the Trio, and France's only true export of modern Jazz piano—Martial Solal.

As for New Albums—Billy Taylor (pianist, arranger, and disc-jockey for New York's WNEW) and Oliver Nelson combine their efforts for Capitol in a collection entitled "Right Here—Right Now." Shirley Horn, a former cocktail pianist has turned to singing. Her album arranged by Quincy Jones, "Shirley Horn with Horn" features Miss Horn vocally with Thad Jones conducting the orchestra with four trumpets and four trombones.

A prediction is in order right now. The name Marlena Shaw may mean nothing to you right now, but in the near future you will hear much about her. We had the opportunity of hearing Miss Shaw's demonstration record last week and all we can say is that we were left spellbound. This Springfield native has a soft and beautiful voice. Soon to be released on a Columbia album.

SASHA SPEAKS

Gifts for Mother

With Mother's Day looming on the horizon, a discussion of gifts for such an auspicious and indispensible person are well in order.

As a college student, it is often difficult to choose a remembrance. Gone are the days when I could come in, plastered with finger paint, to present a freshly pigmented tincan. "Fer you mummy—you put hairpins in it." The routine went practically unvaried for six years—the only change being in the function of the gift. One year it was for pencils, the next for flowers, then (oh vain hope!) for candy canes.

Aged ten, my ingenuity ran out, but I was saved by my somewhat daring capture of an aging skunk. My prize grinned like a Tammany politician before completely inundating our living room and assembled relatives. An unforgettable gift, yes. Appreciated, only in retrospect and anecdote. Welcome, Welcome, no.

However, the prizes one could make in college are usually unacceptable to mothers, and Dad wouldn't let her go out with one, anyway. Give up—all she wants is a 4.0. It's still that unattainable thought that counts.

Book Review

"Black Like Me"

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of book reviews.

In 1959, John Howard Griffin, a noted author, received a commission from Sepia, a Negro magazine, to write about the Negro in the South, what he was like, what he really thought about himself and about the White man, and how the Negro and the White man interacted.

From November 6 to December 14 Mr. Griffin was a Negro; he ate, lived, slept, and talked with them. His skin having been medically darkened, he felt like a Negro and endured the life of one. Travelling through the south, from New Orleans to Montgomery, Mobil, Biloxi and Hattiesburg, he was at best treated as a second class citizen, at the worst as an animal who was not human at all.

His book written in diary form is a stirring indictment against the white communities of the south, communities which maintain double standards and so called separate but equal attitudes, and communities in which the naked sword of prejudice is ever slashing its dark skinned citizens.

Those who believe—or like to believe—that much of the prejudice that exists against the Negro is based upon him as a person and not upon the color of his skin; those who say that if the Negro possessed the ability he would not be turned away from employment; to all those who do not believe that things are not really as bad as the newspapers make them out to be I believe the reading of this book would be an enlightening experience.

Students Stare;

A little over a week ago the Candid Collegian Camera and comment copier sneaked up on some students as they were staring at the Art Exhibit at Bartlett Hall. Candid comments by the passer-bys kept our comment copier busy. Anytime, anyplace the Candid Collegian (whose identity will remain a secret) could tap you on the shoulder and say "smile."

"Andersonville Trial" To Be Given At Amherst

The Amherst College Masquers are in final rehearsals for their production of Saul Levitt's drama, "The Andersonville Trial" which opens at Kirby theater on May 1.

Performances of the play are scheduled May 1, 2, 3 and 4 at 8:15 p.m.

"The Andersonville Trial" is an accurate account of the trial in August, 1865, of Captain Henry Wirz, commandant of the notorious Andersonville prison in Georgia where 14,000 Union soldiers died during the Civil war. The trial raised questions remarkably similar to those posed by the war crimes trials following World War II, as to whether a military man has a moral responsibility for inhuman acts carried out under orders from his superiors. Saul Levitt was among the American troops that liberated the Buchenwald concentration camp in Germany in 1945, where he saw the emaciated walking dead and piles of corpses, conditions which also prevailed at Andersonville.

First produced as a television play in 1957, the drama underwent three years of further research and rewriting before opening as a Broadway play on December 29, 1959. It received excellent reviews and ran for 179 performances before being forced to close by the Actors Equity strike in June, 1960.

Forensic Society Vies With Mt. Holyoke Team

The University Forensic Society sent two teams to the Mount Holyoke debate tournament held Saturday, April 19th. For three of the debaters it was their first intercollegiae tournament.

Sue Yokel, Betty Ann Moreau and Lee Morin all debated for the first time. Yokel debated with John Morton as one affirmative team. They lost the first two debates to the two top teams in the eighteen team tournament and won their third round against UConn. Debating on the negative side of the issue was Larry Rutstein. He debated the three rounds alone since his partner could not attend the tournament. Larry won two debates while losing only one, that being to the number two team.

Moreau and Farrell formed the second affirmative team. They won only one of three rounds of debate even though facing varsity competition even. The

Communications Service To Give Demonstration

The USAF Communications Service will give a demonstration of its ability to communicate with individuals, elements, or aircraft anywhere on the globe or in space on April 28 at 11:15 a.m. in Bowker Auditorium by contacting various major command headquarters and airborne command posts.

The demonstration will be preceded by a briefing, presented by Brigadier General Anthony T. Shtogren, Commanding General of Eastern Region Air Force Communications Service, on mission capabilities of Air Force Communications Service.

As part of the modern Air Force, the Air Force Communications System provides the link that makes possible the worldwide operations of the Air Force. The short period of Air Force Communications Service history has been one of change as well as growth in communications, air traffic control services and emergency mission support.

Early in the Command's history, the Air Force emergency message automatic transmission system was completed and placed in operation. From a console in the Pentagon, this system gives the Chief of Staff of the Air Force the ability to contact key commanders anywhere in the world with programmed emergency messages.

Special messages composed to meet special circumstances can also be instantaneously transmitted.

In the area of special mission support, two are of significant interest and typically illustrative of the capabilities of the Air Force Communications Service. One of these is the requirement to insure instantaneous communications between Air Force Number 1, the presidential aircraft, and key offices and agencies in the United States. The other is the requirement for the Air Force Communications Service to support the space effort through participation in the Defense Communications Agency which coordinates the efforts of the Army, Navy and Air Force and NASA.

Is There Time For The Greeks?

People join social fraternities and sororities for a number of what we thought were obvious reasons, says the Daily Orange, Syracuse University, Fayetteville, New York.

These reasons are mainly connected with the pleasure of close friendships and/or an active social life. None of this seems to be particularly disgraceful or undesirable.

Few, if any, go Greek because (a) they want to discriminate, or even (b) they want to choose their own friends.

We do not pay much attention, then, to the foolish accusations of some independents that most Greeks are immoral, unAmerican bigots who WANT to discriminate according to race and religion.

Some, undoubtedly many, Greeks actually are in accord with such discrimination. More, though, probably suffer from laziness, immaturity or disinterest.

The magnitude of the internal problems and perhaps consequences of attempting to amend the wrongs does not absolve the member from his own obligations. And, granted that these problems require plenty of time in their correction, this does not imply that time itself will work the solution.

Ad Policy Statement

The Collegian has recently changed its advertising policy concerning "political" ads. We now accept paid ads from any aspiring student politician who would like to take advantage of our campus-wide readership. The theory behind the change is simple: if a person is willing to pay to popularize his name in an election, we will take the additional revenue that such an ad would provide.

The reason why the Collegian had not previously taken such ads still exists, but is viewed in a different light. Previous editors seem to have felt that it would not be right to allow an election campaign to be fought on the pages of the Collegian. They did not want to see elections won merely by the man who could purchase the biggest and most elaborate ad. It is quite possible that, by allowing paid ads in this paper, such electoral-chaos could result.

However, we feel that the student body is already electing their candidates largely by who has done the most publicity (ah, the failings of a democracy). Signs, cartoons, placards, barrage the campus before every election. It should not make that much difference if they barrage the paper, too.

The Collegian will accept paid ads; expects they may become a gaudy and obvious parts of the paper; and that the students will probably vote for the gaudiest and most obvious. We are happy to be a service to our student body and its representatives.

Critique of Critique

by OLEH PAWLUK

Considering the time and budget the staff had to work with, the first issue of "Critique" has set off to a good start. Student evaluations of courses and instructors are objectively summarized in digest form. There are also features appraising various departments. By reading a summary of any of the courses covered in the issue, the student can obtain a sufficient idea of what to expect when signing up for a particular subject and instructor.

However, there is one slight problem. Not enough courses have been evaluated. As a general rule, only advanced courses are covered in the issue. Also, certain departments like Russian and Journalism have not been touched at all.

In addition to the course and department evaluations, the series of signed features are a treat in themselves. Lorna Sass begins the series by questioning the lack of courses in comparative religion on this campus. Mike Hench approriately concludes the series with a humorous commentary on the well-practiced art of combing the professor for higher grades.

Sketches of various professors provide a refreshing supplement to the written material. Another praiseworthy characteristic of "Critique" is the eagerness of its staff to submit the publication itself to student evaluation. With this purpose in mind, a questionnaire has been inserted in each copy.

On the whole, "Critique" is well worth the purchase price, and is certain to prove a valuable guide in the selection of courses for next semester.

Letters To The Editor

A Conservative On Communism

To the Editor of the Collegian:

In the Collegian of Wednesday, April 22, Ken Fineberg again came up with one of his brilliant observations concerning United States policy. I think Mr. Fineberg's ideas require a bit of enlightening.

First of all, conservative policy is not to "let the baby play," as Mr. Fineberg states in his analysis of our attitude toward DeGaulle's activities. Conservatives are dedicated to the complete repression of Communism. Any compromise with Communism, as France has done in regards to Red China, is completely against Conservative policy. It is the Liberals in Washington who take the attitude that compromise with Communism is O.K. as long as they don't shoot at us. Furthermore, Conservative policy advocates American sovereignty, and there is no surer way of endangering our sovereignty than by allowing DeGaulle to create a "third force." Mr. Fineberg seems to imply that our allies are not devoted to the defeat of Communism. If they aren't, then we have been deluding ourselves for several years. We should do everything within our power to maintain our alliances and fight the idea of a European "third force." Why try to bring about 1984 in 1964?

Secondly, Mr. Fineberg advocates the neutralization of Southeast Asia. Do you not realize, Mr. Fineberg, that neutralization of Southeast Asia is impossible? Communism's avowed aim is to communize the world and subject all it's peoples to Communism's tyranny. Do you think for one minute that Red China will allow a neutral Asia to remain neutral past the time it takes to infiltrate these countries? We are simply deluding ourselves to think that neutralization is possible.

Finally, Mr. Fineberg states that "the United States cannot continue to play king." Do you advocate, Mr. Fineberg, the subjugation of American ideals to those of Communism in general, and Red China in particular? Any gain by Communism is a tightening of the noose around our necks. The ideals of Communism are completely contrary to the ideals that have helped to build our country to its position as the strongest nation in the world. If we are to maintain that position we cannot compromise with evil, for any compromise with evil yields evil. There is no middle ground.

Along With Our Other Problems

To the Editor:

Upon picking up Friday's Collegian, my eyes were immediately attracted to the word "SEX-ologist". My interest aroused, I actually read the entire article. Much to my surprise, I found that both lectures which Mr. Dearborn was presenting would be opened to restricted audiences. The first, "Male and Female in Marriage," would be restricted to married couples, and the second, "It Takes Two," would be restricted to engaged couples. I assume, from the titles and the audiences, that the second would be a watered down version of the first, with the sex and etc. removed.

All kidding aside, this series of lectures opens serious questions with regard to both the function and direction of present college education. It would seem to me that the function, the primary function, of a college education is to instill an attitude of systematic doubting and questioning in the student's mind. Everything must be made the object of constant, serious re-examination. In addition, college should serve as the source of new knowledge and intellectual stimulation. There should not only be a constant criticism of the old, but also a constant search for the new.

There appears to be, not only on this campus, but on many campuses throughout the country, a turning away from this attitude. The industrial milieu pays high wages, not only for skilled engineers, but also for skilled humanists and artists. The "quiz-exam" factories comply, and the product is little more than a rather sophisticated automata. This tendency is all around us. Can we find on this campus, for example, a really solid, positive course on socialist economics, or a solid course on Marxism, or . . . but this could be extended almost indefinitely.

The public lectures which are open to restricted audiences reflect this tendency. Is sex something that can only be discussed if you are married or engaged?

There may be a number of unmarried, unengaged students who do not know as much about sex (and its many physiological, psychological, and sociological implications), as do the others, and it is not that these students should be sheltered, but rather that they should be informed. Or perhaps it is the case that open discussion will lead to serious questioning of our present moral codes. Whatever the reason, hiding behind closed doors, as it were, only augments and aggrevates the situation.

However, it is not all bad. There is an increasing movement away from this tendency, at least on this campus. The Interdisciplinary Peace Seminar, the social-political clubs, and the many informal discussion groups are beginning to appear as reactions. It is this growth which must be promoted, and not the movement into ignorance.

To the Editor:

Until recently one could order a "hamburg plate" in the Hatch at any time (when the grill was open). For some reason it is no longer possible to order the plate as a supplimentary selection to any orders on the menu or as an in-between-meal dinner.

It doesn't seem that it would be any more difficult to continue the convenient selection of a hamburg plate, than to make two hamburgs on buns. Could they re-instate the service?

Letter to the Editor:

I feel it is time that the maintenance department received a pat on the back. The grounds of the campus, especially around the dorms, have ceased to be inundated with papers, bottles, and cans. To the maintenance department I say "Thanks" and keep up the good work. To the students I urge their cooperation in keeping the grounds clean. Do not throw papers or refuse on the grounds or out the windows of your room. Nobody likes to see a messy campus least of all the students. It's your campus; help keep it clean. Every litter bit hurts!

I noticed in past Collegians that there has been quite a bit of criticism regarding the maintenance department and their lack of work.

ated in Thailand, a Buddhist nation, this village, like others in the immediate area, is populated by Malayan-speaking Muslims whose cultural affinities and loyalties stretch south over the nearby frontier into Malaya. During the period of fieldwork, village fishermen initiated an important technological change by motorizing their fishing fleet. The economic effects of this change and its social ramifications provided a central focus for Dr. Fraser's book, Rusembilan, A Malay Fishing Village in Southern Thailand.

A BRIEF VISIT in 1960 convinced Dr. Fraser that significant economic and social changes were in progress throughout the area. There were indications that the Thai government was beginning to act to improve its Malay "minority problem" by allowing instruction in the compulsory school system to be given in the Malay language (in Malay-speaking areas) and by allocating funds for technical assistance and community deevlopment in the area.

Professor Fraser is particularly interested in studying the development and results of this new direction of government policy; and also in analyzing the effects on local economy and village organization of a widespread trend toward abandoning fishing, a traditional occupation, in favor of rubber cultivation on individually-owned "plantations" in the interior jungles, (twenty-five to fifty miles from the coast.) He plans to write a sequel to his earlier book, analyzing the changes that have occurred during the eight-year period since his initial fieldwork.

DR. FRASER'S INTEREST in the peoples of Southeast Asia and in problems connected with changing traditional societies has carried over into his teaching at at University. One course considers Southeast Asia as an anthropological area and examines representative primitive and peasant societies; another deals with theories of cultural dynamics and the application of anthropological knowledge to problems brought about by change and development of non-Western areas.

DR. THOMAS FRASER

Available as an undergraduate major next September, Anthropology includes, in addition to the study of primitive and peasant cultures, study of past societies through archaeology, and of the biological nature and development of Man, the bearer of culture. An introductory course in Cultural Anthropology has been redesigned to meet the needs of new majors, and to serve as an alternative to Sociology as an introductory social science subject.

One-Man Art Exhibit To Be Held

Eugene J. LaFrance of 79 Main St., Florence, the "painting policeman," is shown hanging some paintings for his first one-man art exhibit to be held from April 25 to May 8 in the Commonwealth Room. The exhibit consists of 36 works in oil, water color, and ink, depicting New England landscapes, seascapes and illustrations of fish in action. The painting of which a part is seen at the right is a black and white winter scene in water color, "Trees and Brook", which was judged best in the black and white division of a national art show held in Minneapolis, Minn. The painting which Patrolman LaFrance is adjusting is entitled "Brown Trout."

An outspoken critic of modern art, LaFrance says, "People often ask me what I think of abstract or modern art. I do not think of it. I feel that art critics, art instructors, and art museums have conspired—unwittingly or otherwise—to perpetrate a great hoax on the public. Because of the above mentioned sources, abstract art is the 'accepted' form of art today. One is led to believe that he is an ignorant dolt if one admires anything but abstract or modern art. I feel that the great majority of people in this country love art that they can understand. They want trees to look like trees; people to look like people; seascapes to be so alive with realism that one can virtually smell the salt in the air.

In addition, they have been feattured at the Unicorn and Journey's End in Boston, Jug End Barn in Great Barrington, and at the Sea Gull in Falmouth.

At the present time they have a recording of "We Shall Overcome" on the market and in a few weeks "Meeting at the Terrace," an L. P. album will be released for national distribution.

Home Ec. Dept. Sponsoring Career Day

At first glance, the careers in textile designing, dietetics, advertising, consumer education, and child development might seem to have little in common. In many cases, however, the people who engage in these arts and sciences share one important bond, that of a college background in home economics. What's more, the five careers mentioned here are only a sampling of the jobs being filled by home economists for home economics is called the "profession with 1,000 job titles."

Tennis Team Trounces Highly Touted Fairfield

by DAVE PODBROS

Last Saturday afternoon Fairfield University provided some opposition for the UMass varsity tennis team and went down in defeat 8-1. As was predicted the first doubles match, as well as the first and second singles, were the highlights of the match.

IN THE FIRST SINGLES Rodger Twitchell met Walter Donnelly in stirring singles play. Donnelly, however, proved to be no match for the Singles Champion as Twitchell won 6-3, 6-1.

In the second singles the story was different, as Bob Neal valiantly played the best player he has met this year to a three set loss, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3. Playing the player-coach of Fairfield University, Gerry Magner, Neal made a breath-taking comeback to win the second set after being behind two games. He nevertheless lost the set and the match.

MIKE ROSE, in the third singles, made quick work of his opponent, 6-1, 6-0, as did Billy Martin in the fourth spot, 6-2, 6-2. Roger Harper and Steve Johnson, in the fifth and sixth spots, wrapped up the singles wins: 6-3, 6-0 and 6-1, 6-4, respectively.

The match had already been won as Rodger Twitchell and Bob Neal teamed up to play Walter Donnelly and Gerry Magner in the first doubles.

Before Twitchell and Neal had finished, Billy Martin and Bob Greenberg, along with Mike Rose and Roger Harper, were to win their respective doubles matches 6-4, 6-1 and 6-2, 6-4. Yet, when Twitchell and Neal began, a superb doubles match was in the making.

IN THE FIRST SET Fairfield got off to an early start, winning three games to only one for UMass. The set, however, was just beginning. Bob Neal, playing excellent tennis, along with the well placed shots of Rodger Twitchell, came back to win three games in a row and to eventually win the set 9-7. Donnelly and Magner, however, would not let up as in the second set they again went ahead 3 to 1. Undaunted, the UMass duo again made a comeback and took the lead and the set, finally winning 8-6.

UMass Weightlifters In N.E. Championship Meet

On Saturday afternoon, the UMass Barbell Club put on an impressive showing at the Senior New England Weightlifting Championships in Leominster, Mass.

The club's president, Barry Whitcomb, the New England Junior champion last year, took first place in his weight class of 181 lbs. to become the Senior New England champion. Whitcomb has been New England YMCA champion for the last two years, as well, and currently holds 4 New England YMCA weightlifting records. His top lifts for Saturday's title were a press of 260 lbs., 220 lbs., in the snatch, and a clean and jerk of 320 lbs.

FRED LEWIS, former varsity football halfback, took 2nd place in the heavyweight championship, in a very close competition for 1st place. His lifts were 270, 245, and 325 lbs.

Dick Ward took 4th place among the heavyweights, with lifts of 220, 225, and 300 lbs.

RAY ROGERS made an outstanding press of 270 lbs. in a close race for 2nd place in the 181 lb. class, but missed it because of a technical rule which was overlooked in the stress of heavy competition.

Two bodybuilders from the club entered the physique contest—Dick Pulsifer and Norman Komitch, both making a very good showing and displayed great potential for future contests.

This was the first meet entered by the newly-formed club, The team performed amazingly well for their 1st attempt.

Linkmen Remain Undefeated

The varsity golf team rolled to its third and fourth wins by beating A.I.C. and Vermont by the identical score of 5-2, in dual matches played at the Ordhards C.C. in South Hadley. Vermont also lost to A.I.C., 4-3 in a close match.

EARLIER IN THE WEEK the linksmen pulled a big upset victory by defeating Rhode Island, the defending Yankee Conference Champs. The score was again 5-2, with the match being played under muddy and wet conditions at Point Judith C.C. in Kingston, Rhode Island. The golf team has now won two matches on the road and two at home to remain undefeated. This is one of the best starts for the linksmen in a number of years.

IN THE MATCH PLAY COMPETITION, big Charlie O'Rourke, and sophomores Dave Wells and Howie Atkinson remain undefeated, while captain George Defalco has lost one match. In the four matches to date the Redmen have outscored their opponents 19½ to 8½.

"Abstract art receives a great deal of publicity and praise. One is led to believe that only an outstanding artist is able to turn out an abstract painting. Really? To the embarrassment of many are show judges, they have learned that prize winning abstract works have been painted by dogs and donkeys, whose tails had been dipped in paint—or by monkeys, or three-year old children. Personally, I do not find any challenge in attempting to compete with a dog's rearmost appendage!"

Little Redmen Over Maroons

The freshmen track team defeated the Springfield frosh last Thursday at Alumni Field by a score of 79-70. The outcome of the meet was in doubt down to the last event. Throughout the meet the little Redmen showed great determination and courage.

JOHN LARVIE, taking over the role John Mederios held last year, became the workhorse for the frosh as he scored 16 points. Larvie won the 100 (10.3), 220 (22.9), and broad-jump (19'9¼") and took a third in the high jump. Mike Sheeley and Steve St. Clair took first and second, respectively, for UMass in the mile. Mike's winning time was a good 4:32.8. Sheeley also took a third in the 2 mile. Terry Carpenter won the 2 mile with the good time of 10:11.4.

John Anderson and Mike Frederovich took first and third, respectively, in the 440. Andy's winning time was a very good 51.7. Anderson also took a second in the 220. Dan O'Leary took a second in both the 100 and the intermediate hurdles. Mike Gaffney took a third in the intermediates, while Andy Mann took a second in the high hurdles.

Dick Solomon won the hammer with a toss of 102, and Jay Monette took a third. Monette also took a second in the discus. Al Davis won the shot-put with a toss of 42'7". Bob Lisak won the triple jump with a leap of 40'7½" and took third in the high jump.

Going into the relay the score was 74-70, in favor of the Redmen. With the outcome of the meet depending upon them, John Anderson, Mike Frederovich, Bill Thomas, and Mike Gaffney combined to win the race easily. Going back to this year's indoor season, the little Redmen now have a string of 5 undefeated meets. Their next meet will be at Alumni Field on May 2, when they will take on the Northeastern frosh.

triumph in that event. Dave Connors took a third in the javelin, as did Doug Renwick in the shotput. Milt Morin took a third in the discuss, while Dave Sadowsky and Bob Murray took second and third respectively in the pole vault.

THE NEXT MEET for the Redmen will be May 2 when they take an Northeastern and Tufts in a tri-meet. Northeastern has a string of 20 undefeated meets stretching back to the beginning of this year's cross country season. UMass will be definite underdogs as the Huskies have their best team in five years.

Baird came up with 13 saves for the game but Walters of Tufts was forced to make 17 saves. UMass outshot the Jumbos 34 to 19 and clearly the speedy Redmen dominated play.

The Redmen, over the .500 mark for the first time this year, take on the Holy Cross Crusaders at 3:30 Tuesday afternoon. Last year, UMass beat H.C. 6-3, and hold a 4-1-1 lead in games played between the teams.

tentionally walked. Then Vermont starter Al Foster had a little control trouble and walked Kuczynski and Corey to force in a run.

EARL LORDEN THEN CALLED ON ROSS PIKEN to bat for Bill Crane, who had only two hits all season. Piken, who had 4 for 8 on the year, made Lorden look bad by getting two quick strikes. Then he made Lorden look good by hitting a long double to drive in Nordberg, Kuczynski, and Corey. Piken was out trying to reach third, but the damage was done.

Harris was playing center field in place of the slumping Dennis Della Piana and came up with three hits, including a triple. He now has 5 hits in eight at bats.

Baseball Team Sweeps Two; Downs Catamounts 3-2, 4-0

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts baseball team swept its big weekend series with Vermont, 3-2 and 4-0, and established itself as a threat for the conference crown. The first game was won by means of a big rally and the second was won through the efforts of Rod Corey and Ross Piken.

Friday afternoon's game saw Carl Martin, the ace of the Catamount staff, stifle the Redmen with three hits for eight innings only to have the roof fall in on him in the ninth. Ross Piken started for the Redmen and worked the first seven, giving up four hits and one earned run. He struck out five and walked five before being lifted for ace reliever Jim Ritchie.

RITCHIE worked the last two innings giving just two hits and one earned run, and reaped the benefits of rally to even his record at 1-1.

All of the Mass runs came in the bottom of the ninth. The inning began with Jim Kuczynski and pinchhitter Mike Johnson both singling. They were sacrificed along by Ray Yando. Then Vermont coach Ralph LaPointe called on relief pitcher Bill Christie to halt the Redman surge. Pinchhitter Steve Wojnar greeted him with a blooping double to left that scored Kuczynski. Neil Harris, running for Johnson, held up to make sure that the ball would fall in and had to stay at third.

COACH EARL LORDEN then called on Joe Apicella to work a squeeze play with Harris. Apicella missed with the attempted bunt, but Harris, under a full head of steam, came home with a big steal and the game was tied. Wojnar moved over to third on the play.

After this "successful" bit of strategy, Lorden asked for Apicella to do an encore with the same play. This time, however, the Vermont catcher, Blanchard, had the ball get away from him and Wcojnar scored to end the game.

One of the oddities of the game was that the first two men in the batting order for Vermont. Cronin and McDonald, came up with all six of the Catamounts' hits. Cronin had 4 and McDonald 2.

Saturday's game saw Rod Corey turn in a very steady performance and Ross Piken deliver the key hit as the Redmen won 4-0. Once again the Redmen did all their scoring in a single inning, only this time it was the fourth and not the bottom of the ninth. The clubs were battling on even terms until the fourth when Neil Harris got a single. Wojnar flied out and Al Nordberg was in-

UMass Beats Springfield; Mederios Scores 23 Points

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity track team, paced by the amazing John Mederios, scored its second victory of the season last Thursday when it downed Springfield 86-63 at Alumni Field. This victory was especially sweet for Coach Footrick as it marked the first time that he has ever defeated Springfield in spring track.

SOPHOMORE JOHN MEDERIOS once again put on a fantastic display of ability and courage. Against New Hampshire John racked up 21 points, and he upped this total by 2 against Springfield. Just as great as the point total was John's performance. He won the broadjump (21'7"), high jump (6'), triple jump (43') and 220 (22.6). John came from behind to win the 220 and just missed his attempt to set an Alumni Field record in the high jump at 6'¾". He took a second in the 100.

This victory was the result of a total team effort. From the first race it was evident that the Redmen were really up for this meet. Bob Brouillet, Bob Molvar and Tom Panke swept the mile. Brouillet's time of 4:20.3 missed the UMass record by one tenth of a second. Panke and Molvar ran good races. Molvar came back to take a second in the 880. Brouillet also won the 2 mile (8:43.0) as Panke ran another fine race to take third.

In the 440 senior Craig Erickson took the lead with 110 yards to go and then fought off Wilkinson from Springfield in one of the best races all day. The winning time was 51.7. Doug Sloane took third, and he also took a second in the 220. In the 100, sophomore John Hall had to run :10 flat to beat Mederios and became the sixth person to tie the Alumni Field record. This was Hall's first race in a year, and he couldn't have gotten off on a better foot.

Jim Wrynn, Bob Molvar and Bob Pendelton swept the 880. Jim's winning time was 1:59.3. Senior John Harrington won a squeaker in the high hurdles with the time of :16.1, and then came back to take a second in the 440 yard intermediate hurdles. Bob Larson continued to show improvement in this event as won with a record time of 59.4.

Redmen Defeat Tufts For Third Straight Win

by MORRIS SHUBOW

Saturday opened a big week for the UMass lacrosse team. The Redmen defeated the Tufts Jumbos 3-1 for their third straight victory. This coming Tuesday the Redmen play Holy Cross at home, on Thursday the team hosts Trinity, and Friday night the Boston Lacrosse Club with former UMass stars John Bamberry and Gerry Clinton will visit the Redmen.

THE TUFTS GAME was marked by a rash of penalties and controversial calls. A total of 26 infractions were called, 15 for the Jumbos and 11 for UMass. Jack Nobel, the Tufts assistant coach, was given a technical for arguing too vehemently over a UMass goal.

FRAN CASEY LED THE REDMEN with two goals giving him his second two-goal effort in a row. He had scored two in the victory over M.I.T. Co-Capt. Steve Harrington got the other goal and assisted on both of Casey's goals.

Harrington scored first for the Redmen at 7:12 of the opening period. Gordie Webb got the assist by passing to "Harry" who was about 15 yards in front of the Tufts goal. Harrington fired his shot straight and true by Tufts goalie Butch Walters for the goal. There was no further scoring in the period but the Redmen's control of play is evidenced by their outshooting the Jumbos 10-2 in the period.

IN THE SECOND PERIOD Casey scored a controversial goal with an assist to Harrington. Just before the goal a Tufts player was offside and the referee dropped his penalty flag. But since the Redmen had possession play was not stopped. When Casey scored, the Jumbo assistant coach exploded, claiming the Redmen had made two passes before scoring and that the play should have been halted. The referee stuck to his decision and also gave the coach a technical penalty. The half ended with the score 2-0, UMass in front.

IN THE THIRD PERIOD Fran Casey scored his second goal of the game, assisted again by Steve Harrington. It was a perfectly executed play with Casey taking the pass from Harrington in front of the goal and, in the same motion, making a shovel shot into the net for the goal.

With the score 3-0, Redmen goalie Dick Baird was playing flawlessly and was getting fine protection from his defensemen and midfielders. But at 7:07 of the last period Baird ran out of the goal to make a save, the ball rolled loose, and Tufts' Mike McConnell knocked it into the goal

Skydivers Climax Show

Three skydivers thudded to the ground to climax a half hour air show Monday night behind the Women's Physical Education Building.

Jump master Dick Fillmore and UMass seniors Joe Daly and Paul Jones were cheered by a crowd of some 300 spectators.

The flying exhibition and sky-diving demonstration was put on by the University of Massachusetts Flying Club at 6:15 p.m. The purpose of the show was to recruit more members to the club and to acquaint people with aviation and sky-diving.

THE AIR SHOW began at 6:15 when, out of the southwest at an altitude of 500 ft., a Cessna 150, piloted by Dave Naylor, appeared. For fifteen minutes Naylor put on a flying exhibition by performing a series of power-on stalls, power-off stalls, slips, and 720° steep turns at 1000 ft., with which Naylor climaxed his show. He then left the scene to make room for the main attraction—the sky-divers.

Approaching the scene at 4000 ft., the plane carrying Fillmore, Daly and Jones shot out a yellow crepe streamer 21 ft. long. It was dropped directly over the drop-zone. Its downward drift to the northeast determined the strength and direction of the wind. On the second pass another streamer was dropped, this time to the southwest of the target, to verify the previous calculations. The streamer, falling at a rate of 18-21 ft. per second and assimilating the direct fall of a 175 lb. man, landed on the northern side of the elementary school.

The craft climbed to the desired altitude of 5200 ft. before making a dry run over the field. As the craft banked right and headed northwest, a military jet, B-52, approached from the southwest. Their paths crossed almost directly overhead causing a stir among the on-lookers.

Just prior to the jump run at 6:43, a craft bearing the federal aviation authority passed directly overhead, after checking out the situation.

THE CROWD tensed and all heads turned upwards at 6:45 as the craft cut its engines. Three men, each looking like a tiny dot leaving behind a trail of smoke, had leaped at 5200 ft. and began their twisting, turning decent to earth.

After a few maneuvers by Fillmore, all three parachutists landed gracefully, but with a thud, within 50 yards of each other. A rousing ovation arose from the spectators as the exhibitionists landed safely.

Said Daly upon landing, "That's great — wonderful! But, I was scared. I was afraid he (Fillmore) was going to crash me. I tried to get away from him, but . . ."

EACH OF THE MEN is well established in the sport. Jumpmaster Fillmore, out of Orange, Mass. airport, has over 200 jumps. Jones, who has just recently taken up the sport, has more than 60 jumps to his credit. Daly, who started the sport in 1962, has close to 100 jumps.

Brazilian Consil Lauds Revolution, Slams Reds

by DUANE STEELE

"THE ARMY is the people in uniform." This was a slogan first coined by Gen. Benjamin Constante, the co-founder of the Republic of Brazil. It was also the recurrent theme of the Brazilian Consul from Boston, who came here to speak on Brazilian culture. Hersyl Castello Branco de Pereira Franco spoke instead in glowing terms of the recent revolution in his country.

Although the audience had been forewarned that the consul would not be able to answer political questions, he devoted three and a half hours to a discussion of Brazilian politics. As an overnight guest of this reporter and his young bride, Pereira Franco allowed a few more hours for an intensive interview.

SR. PEREIRA FRANCO is a cousin of Brazil's newly elected President, Gen. Humberto Castello Branco. The General was the chief of staff of the army and the leader of the rebellion which deposed Joao Goulart. The Latin Diplomat wanted to explain the revolution, to reassure us that, "Brazilians are democratic by nature, a democratic tradition which shows in our history."

Twice before in Brazilian history the army seized power. Both times order and power were restored to the civilian leaders and the army returned to their barracks. This time the army intends to be sure of total victory before releasing power. Costello Branco resigned from a 43 year army career and was then elected to finish the remaining 21 months of Goulart's term. There has been no bloodshed, and none is expected.

AN UNIDENTIFIED YOUTH, who spoke in a Latin accent, loudly and emotionally accused the Brazilians of torture and murder.

"You are simple," he shouted. "Tell the truth to us. You are torturers and murderers. You are no better than the Cubans!"

THE RILED DIPLOMAT told the audience that there was no bloodshed during the revolution and only 167 arrests. Also he said, "Nowhere in Brazil do we even have capital punishment for criminals." He added that Brazilians are not a cruel people.

Pereira Franco is a militant anti-communist who pepers his speech with stinging epithets like "leftists", "demagogues", and "communist", which he spits out as though his mouth were full of dirt. He was stationed in Cuba in 1958-60 and watched the communist take-over on that island. He saw the use in Brazil of the same primer used by Castro to teach illiterates to read. It begins "A" is for America. America is an imperialist nation, etc.

The following are his answers to certain issues:

ON CUBA "The people marched in the streets to break relations with Cuba. The people identified the enemy."

AGRARIAN REFORM He said that ex-President Goulart, in the move for power that finally decided the revolt, had asked for the power to grant agrarian reform by decree. Pereira Franco contended that this move would have precipitated a class hatred that could have triggered civil war.

"The landowners were already buying arms in case of the eventuality," he added.

THE NEW GOVERNMENT believes that the reforms must take place legally with compensation for confiscated lands which rightfully belong to individuals. Also, there is much land which can be settled and won, just as the West was won in the United States.

Confiscating land may be harmful because large, efficient farms would be broken up and placed in the hands of inefficient farmers.

"HOW CAN WE Brazilians accept the agrarian reform of Goulart, which was modeled after those of Russian and Red China. They are failures!" he exclaimed.

RED CHINA AND RUSSIA "Goulart was considering diplomatic relations with Red China because of the French example. France gave the world a bad example" "Russia owes Brazil money. We exported raw materials to Russia. Her exchange did not interest us. Our credits accumulated. The relations weren't worth it because it opened the door to Russian 'technicians'. It seemed to favor Russia."

THE U.S. He asserted that Brazil has no grievances with the United States, past or present. We were the first to recognize Brazilian independence, and there is even a city named after President Cleveland for arbitrating a border dispute in Brazil's favor.

When asked why, if Brazil was a democratic nation, was not Goulart impeached under the constitution. He replied:

"IN AMERICA this is possible. But you must try to understand our situation. The communists have infiltrated the government. If we follow the rules, democracy will die. Why put your hands into the cuffs? Our heads are under the Knife. We must clean house first."

He called Goulart a "leftist demagogue" who ran, "a democratic government in a leftist way, against the will of the people. It would have run the country off the democratic track."

WMUA Open House

by SHERRY SPEAR

The student body of the University of Massachusetts is cordially invited to attend the OPEN HOUSE OF WMUA

Saturday-Sunday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Coming down early to the station won't be much help. You won't find the girls in curlers and robes getting ready for the Open House but you will see brooms, dustmops and polishers busily at work. The girls giving the station an extra special cleaning (not even a speck of dust under the carpet.) It's part of the H.E.R. Weekend deal they've made with the boys. Unlike the infirmary we allow and welcome more than two visitors at a time. If you're a fairly regular Saturday listener you may be surprised to see Pat Barnett broadcasting "Potpourre" and Pete Johnson taking over "Women's World".

Freshmen who never saw the teletype in the Student Union last year may be interested to see hundreds of feet of news, weather and tasty tidbits pouring out of this waisthigh electified self-typewriter. Little ones, big ones, black ones, red ones and all round are the parts of our record libe. Wall-to-wall, ceiling-to-ceiling to which you're welcome to look and listen, too. However, round objects under coats are frowned upon by our executives.

WMUA can be found by following signs to the Engineering Building right behind the Goessman Chem. Bldg. An extra added attraction to girls with a strained wallet for the weekend—it's FREE!

SPEAR HEARS; Jazz fans were you moping disconately around the dorm because you thought you missed Ron Engel's "History of Jazz" this Monday? Due to rescheduling it will be heard this Thursday at 7.

Hatchites—strange events are in the air for this weekend. Girls will be paying for Hatch food, pulling out chairs, lighting cigarettes, giving up seats and—"The Crazy Rhythms" show, live from the Hatch (normally done by Jim O'Hearn and Ken Moon) will be d.j'ed by Sherry Spear. 10:30 will find Jim O'Hearn safely reinstated as he finishes up the show from the station. This week WMUA makes a special request to you. Ordinarily we take all dedications but this week only dedications from girls to boys will be honored. Girls—if there's a golden oldie with your boyfriend's name, such as "Norman", "Johnny Angel" or not so likely "Alley Oop" or "Peter Gunn" call us at 545-2425 or 2425.

H.E.R. Weekend is a fun weekend that comes only once a year. For extra enjoyment try a cup of hot steaming WMUA each morning for that special lift.

Station members—this month's meeting (next Wednesday) requires a quorum to vote on a special election. Remember the new FCC regulations—the show you save may be your own.

HOW CAN I GIVE?

There are several ways of living:

a. Make an unrestricted contribution at the JFK Memorial Reading Room booth in the lobby of the Student Union. The booth is open every weekday from 8:30 to 4:30.

b. Select a specific book from the listing that you would like to donate. You may give all of the price or part of it. Your name will go on the inside cover as the book's donor.

PRESIDENT John W. Lederle makes a contribution to Art Labrie and Linde Knight, co-chairmen of the Student John F. Kennedy Memorial Committee.

c. You may give a copy of a book on the listing that you own.

d. You may contribute through your club, fraternity or sorority, dormitory, or other organization. The organization's name will be listed as the donor.

WHO ARE THE MEMBERS OF THE STUDENT MEMORIAL COMMITTEE?

The Committee is made up of representatives of many student organizations, Interfraternity Council, Collegian, Mortar Board, to name a few.

WILL THE READING ROOM BE EASILY AVAILABLE TO STUDENTS?

The Reading Room will be open during regular Library hours and will be maintained by the Library staff. The books will be on shelves around the Room, where they will be accessible to student browsers.

Returned Professor Gives Rather Rigid Requirments

Sometimes a professor just gets tired of students who want to be led by the hand through a course.

One history professor at the University of Minnesota forestalls all those familiar questions on the course requirements by handing out a "Helpful Hints," which says in part:

EXAMINATIONS — Students must make arrangements to make up any missed examinations. As a health measure, make-up examinations are usually three times as hard as ordinary examination . . .

GRADES — The midquarter counts approximately 34.978% of the grade; the final examination makes up the rest . . .

BOOK REPORTS — Book reports should not be shorter than 237 words in length. Initials count as one word. Hyphenated words count as two words. Punctuation marks count as a single word. The author's name and the title of the book should be given . . .

UNSATISFACTORY GRADES —The causes of low grades usually are lack of study, lack of intreest, or lack of ability. Essay examinations are graded on content, extent of knowledge of the subject, factual errors, organization, degree of illiteracy and air of maturity in the answer. . . .

Student Support Sought For Issue Of Caesura

Caesura pleads student support for the commencement issue of the magazine, according to its editor, Deidre Haley. The editor has issued an appeal for creative works and essays. The deadline is May 2.

The magazine is open to graduate students as well as undergraduates. The editor emphasized that there seems to be a prevalent opinion that the magazine is open to only four-year students, but this is a "misconception."

Also, the editor stated, faculty members may contribute to the magazine. According to its constitution, however, the number of pieces must be limited to two per issue.

"Students carry another misconception," the editor said, "and it is the mistaken belief that you have to be on the board to contribute to the magazine. This is not true, and never has been true. The magazine is a student issue, open to all students."

This year's staff has carried through a campus-wide publicity campaign for material and support. This issue is the third of three published during the school year. The magazine will appear during finals week.

New Dorms Will Have French Corridor

by PAUL BENGER

In September, there will be in one of the new men's dormitories, a corridor devoted to students interested in the French language and culture. The program is primarily designed to create an opportunity for French majors to exchange mutually interesting ideas and conversing in their language; but it is flexible enough to offer interest to students of other discipline. Presently, in the women's French corridor, about one-third of the girls are French majors; the rest comprising students in various other majors. The women elect their own officers; social chairman and treasurer. In that way they maintain a maximum of student autonomy and independence while retaining the necessary link to the faculty and department through the advisorship of Mr. MacCombie of the French department. It is through his efforts that a men's corridor has been realized. Mr. MacCombie will extend his advisory capacity to the men's program.

MEETINGS, French and American holiday celebrations, lectures by professors of other departments, French plays and films all constitute a part of the ambitious undertaking of the group, providing interest for French and non-French majors alike. In an interview, Mr. MacCombie stated that he felt the broad diversity of the program will keep it from degenerating into a French speaking clique. He cited similar plans which have been carried out quite successfully in French Houses at Middlebury, Smith and Mt. Holloke College. "The corridor is open to anyone interested," he continued, "the only requisite being the ability to speak French and the willingness to participate.

Anyone interested in further details may obtain information and applications from Mr. MacCombie, 268 Bartlett.

Our Questionable Leaders

Last night the campus witnessed another "supposed" Student Leaders' Night. To a knowing observer, many of the "campus leaders" honored were lacking a basic qualification—proven leadership ability. It is possible that some of the chosen were honored for their potential, but it would seem more people who already command respect through past performance, should have been tapped. If choices are based on "potential,"—however it is determined—or worse, on a persons Greek affiliation, good cooks or friendships—which is always a suspicion—perhaps it would be better not to chose so many people to be honored.

If one is in contact with the real working parts of the University (as these writers are) one wonders why the many active student leaders, not acknowledged, were left behind. Indeed, one wonders what the "Honor Societies" do. For all their publicizing, they don't often appear at the heart of worthy doings and additions on campus.

While we do not want to cast aspersions on the new or the old honored students, we do want to point out an obvious problem: the choices at last night's Student Leaders' Night and the method of choosing seem inadequate. Those chosen might prove themselves by improving their own system.

The American Way

by KENNETH FEINBERG

If it wasn't the "American Way," I would probably disapprove violently of Mark Lane's visit to the University tonight and his lecture on the "innocent" victim of American justice, Lee Oswald. It seems Mr. Lane is convinced Oswald was innocent of the Kennedy assassination and tours the nation explaining why. Although Mr. Lane argues with rather sound, but limited, logic, the burden of proof rests with Oswald's guilt, and Mr. Lane would improve the fundamentals of his argument to an attack on the jurisprudence system and not the question of Oswald's guilt.

But we live in America, "home of freedom," and Mark Lane can be heard tonight and rightfully so. For he claims that Oswald was declared guilty and sentenced to death the minute he was captured at a Dallas movie theater. Lane argues that the American public was so inflamed at the infamous murder that a scapegoat was quickly found, Oswald. Is this the American way? Is this United States justice?

So perhaps I will listen to the lecture tonight. For with all the slanted information Mr. Lane uses, the American public must remain aware of the potential faults in the democratic system of law. One can chuckle at the logic of Mr. Lane, but one cannot declare as irrelevant the section of Lane's speech concerned with the ever-present dangers of injustice inherent in all systems of government. Mark Lane may be misinformed concerning the events of November 22, but he awakens the apathetic to the inherent dangers of law.

"Action On Vietnam"

To the Editor:

The 1954 fall of Dien Bien Phu that ended the French colonial endeavor in what was then Indo-China, now Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam, led to The Final Declaration of the Geneva Conference of July 21, setting forth provisions concerning Vietnam; including:

- — prohibition of foreign military personnel as well as arms and munitions
- — prohibition, in the two zones, of military bases at the disposition of a foreign state

The same day, the United States, though not a member of the Conference, said it "will refrain from the threat or the use of force" to disturb the agreements and would "view any renewal of the aggression . . . with grave concern."

Three months later President Eisenhower promised support to Ngo Dinh Diem personally, and in alliance with his dictatorial regime, refused to hold the North-South elections provided for in the Geneva agreement.

In recent weeks the situation of United States activity in South Vietnam has reached a state demanding urgent reappraisal. The N. Y. Times has printed letters from a U. S. Air Force Captain to his wife, brought to light by Senator Dirkson (Ill.), protesting the myth of the U.S. "advisory" capacity, and asserting the immediate and active participation in the conflict of the 18,000 American soldiers now in Vietnam. The reports that the government is considering escalation of the conflict to include attacks on North Vietnam with the use of nuclear weapons have been met with urgent calls on the Senate floor by Senators Morse (Ore.) and Gruening (Alaska) for immediate withdrawal of American forces.

In their pleas to the American people to justify the expenditure of 550 million dollars a year and the lives of American servicemen, Washington has supressed the facts now being bared on the Senate floor and in the press, and borne out by the outcome of the present conflict: that the Viet Cong forces (The National Liberation Front) are composed of indigenous forces, have virtually complete support of the people, and are well armed not from outside aid, but with the weapons taken from the American supplied Vietnamese forces.

The time has come to reecognize the patent immorality of the foreign policy of the United States government in its intervention in South Vietnam, and to protest against its inhuman actions perpetrated on the myth of aiding 'oppressed" people. The time has come to admit transgressions and immediately cease all support to the puppet regime of General Khanh.

Letters To The Editor

JFK Room For Many

To the editor:

(The Student Kennedy Memorial Committee has asked Professor Arnold Silver of the English Department to comment upon the life of President Kennedy in relation to the proposed Kennedy Reading Room.)

"I look forward to an America which commands respect throughout the world not only for its strength but for its civilization as well." President Kennedy's words can serve to summarize the twofold concern of his period in office, and as participants in the enterprise of a university we all have special reason to be grateful for his concern with America's civilization. Vitality in the arts and sciences, respect for the intellect, an appetite for high-minded controversy, a zest for new ideas neither automatically nor as in—these appear in a nation evitable adjuncts to affluence. They must be created by human will and desire, by dedication firm enough to surmount inertia and the legioned opposition of the timid and the ignorant, the profiteers of the status quo and the addicts of mediocrity. President Kennedy cast the luster of his person and the power of his office on the side of those working to augment the quality of America's civilization, strengthening their will and heartening their dedication. He honored the arts at his inauguration in the person of Robert Frost; he summoned to Washington the Schlesingers and Rostows from the world of scholarship. He appointed men of intellectual distinction to ambassadorships throughout the globe; he established a advisor on cultural affairs; he gave eminent scientists more voice in the councils of government; he brought great music once more to the halls of the White House; he increased the scope of the international program of cultural exchange.

That Prime Ministers and busy diplomats emerged from conferences with the President carrying copies of Barbara Tuchman's Guns of August confirms the value he attached to important books. Himself a student of history and a writer on historical

Opening Closed Doors

To the Editor:

Victor Aronow's letter in the Monday Collegian is well taken. Much of what he had to say was expressed by Mr. Lester Dearborn, Sexologist, in all of the lectures he made while in the community and on campus last weekend. As the one responsible for inviting Mr. Dearborn and scheduling his lectures, the intent was to offer married couples in the campus community an opportunity to raise questions growing out of their marriage relationships and discuss them with other married couples and a competent marriage counsellor. It is, however, unfortunate that this lecture was understood to be exclusively for married couples.

In his lecture to engaged couples, Mr. Dearborn left nothing unsaid about sex that he had said to the married couples. He is not one to leave things unsaid! The latter lecture grew out of an awareness that many couples at the University are engaged to be married and are receiving little or no guidance for the questions they are facing. Some of us felt that it was important and that an opportunity to raise these issues with other engaged couples would be a significant contribution to students with no intention of exclusion. No one was "screened" or asked to leave either lecture.

It is unfortunate that Mr. Aronow did not receive the information about a non-credit course that has been taught all semester under the title "Sex and the Single Student." In this course there has been an openness in lecture and discussion that would have certainly fulfilled his expectations.

However, the second lecture in the series for engaged couples and all others will be held this Sunday afternoon, where any questions that Mr. Aronow or others may wish to raise concerning sex can be asked of Dr. Julian Janowitz.

Mr. Aronow's letter is appreciated. It is just unfortunate as a communications break down, and that we don't ask the kind of questions he asked in time to clear the air.

Flying Redmen Take Another First Place

The UMass "Flying Redmen" drill team enlarged their long list of trophies on Saturday when they outclassed all competitors and took 1st place in the Invitational Drill Meet sponsored by Pershing Rifles at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston.

The meet which is held annually, brings many of the outstanding drill teams in New England.

Since the Redmen are not a Pershing Rifle organization they competed only in the independent trick drill phase of the meet. Schools which were competing against the UMass team included among others, Tufts, Harvard, B.U., and Coast Guard Academy.

The supeoririty of the Redmen's performance was indicated in the audience appeal which was included in the rating of the routine. When they marched on the floor at 3:15 P.M., the relatively quiet crowd was brought to life by the routine. The now famous, but rarely attempted "meat grinder", smoothly executed by the team, was ended with a strong ovation from the audience.

The victory at Boston brought the UMass team their second first-place trophy in the three competitions entered this year. Before the end of the school year the team plans numerous appearances in the area including a demonstration for the campus early in May.

FLYING REDMEN compete in the Pershing Rifle 12th Invitational Drill Team Competition at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston.

Engineering School Initiates Candidates Into TBP

The Engineering School recently initiated seventeen candidates into the Massachusetts Zeta Chapter of the Tau Beta Pi Association.

THE NEW MEMBERS were selected primarily upon the basis of distinguished scholarship, although integrity, breadth of interest, adaptability, and unselfish activity were also carefully considered.

The senior candidates chosen from the top one-fifth of their engineering class are David F. Greenwood and Steven E. Thayer.

A GRADUATE MEMBER, Mr. Robert G. Curran, was also elected this semester.

As part of Tau Beta Pi's tradition, pledges were seen about campus wearing a polished bronze casting of the society's symbol, the "BENT."

Each pledge was also required to present a refined essay on some non-technical subject having to do with engineering or engineering education.

This semester Tau Beta Pi recognizes Robert E. Rockwell for his fine work in producing the most outstanding essay, "Automation, A Danger." David Greenwood and David Mitchell are also given honorable mention for their papers.

The initiation was held at the Engineering Building. It was followed by a dinner-dance at the Wayside Inn in West Springfield.

PROFESSOR ROBERT W. DAY of the Mechanical Engineering Department served as Master of Ceremonies and presented an award to Robert Rockwell for his essay.

The present Yankee Conference standings show Maine and URI on top with 2-0 records and Mass right behind 2-1. UConn is next at 1-3 followed by UNH 0-1 and Vermont 0-2. If Mass can win both conference games this week they will be the team to catch along with Maine.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Redmen Baseball Features URI

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts baseball team will try to improve their already high standing in the Yankee Conference race when they meet Rhode Island at Alumi Field today at 3:00 p.m. Mike Johnson, the senior right hander is expected to get the call in this important game.

Johnson has no record so far this year despite the fact that he has worked better than 9 innings. He went four innings against Coast Guard, but the win went to Ross Piken. The next game against Trinity he went the first five innings, but Jim Ritchie took the loss in the bottom of the 13th.

JOHNSON has given up four earned runs and seven hits in his performances. His earned run average is 3.60. He is striking cut an average of one every inning.

In the recently released statistics, UMass is carrying a team batting average of .225. If it had not been for the fine work of the pitching staff, which has held the opponent to a .180 batting average, the team could be a lot worse off. Neil Harris is presently the top batter, carrying a .625 average with five hits in eight trips to the plate. Ross Piken has five for nine to rank second.

OF THE REGULARS, Jim Kuczynski ranks the highest with a .261 average. Then comes Al Nordberg with an even .250. That takes care of all the .200 plus hitters who are regulars. The lowest regular is the team captain, John Awdycki with a rousing .120, three hits in twenty five at bats. If some of the starting players don't connect pretty soon, the team could be in real trouble.

As was mentioned earlier, The pitching has been the key so far. Right on top of the pack is Rod Corey, 2-1 on the year, with a sparkling 0.37 earned run average. Corey has allowed just 11 hits in 23⅔ innings. The only run scored off of him that was earned was the home run by Doug Gaffney of UConn, in the 3-1 loss they tacked on the Redmen, and Corey. He has struck out 12 and walked 8 so far.

THE TOP RELIEFER, Jim Ritchie, is also number two on the pitching lists. He is carrying a 1-1 and a very nice 0.90 ERA. Next on the list comes Johnson, and then Piken with a 3.85 ERA. Piken has seen a lot of work this year and second only to Corey in this department. Ross has a little problem, and that is control. He has walked 18 men in 14 innings of work and has uncorked two wild pitches. He has also had 16 strike outs this year.

After the game today with URI, the team will be in action again tomorrow in an exhibition game against Camp Lejeune. During the spring trip south, the Redmen played the Marines three times, and now when the Marines come north, they visit some of the schools they met down on their home grounds.

It is expected that Coach Earl Lorden will take the opportunity to give some of the lesser lights a chance for action. He might give Piken a chance to work on his control, but more likely, Rick Farrell and Mike Brita will get a chance to show their stuff. This should be a very good game, even

Little Redmen Down Jeffs And AIC; Face Rhode Island Frosh Today

The Redmen Freshman baseball squad picked up two more wins in the past few days and will be trying for another when they meet the Rhode Island Freshmen this afternoon. Yesterday Mass downed American International 9-6 in an error filled contest, and Saturday afternoon the Jeffs of Amherst College took the UMass boys 12 innings before the Redmen prevailed.

Massachusetts had superb pitching in each game with the exception of one frame in which the opposition scored all their runs. Amherst picked the second to score three runs off Roy Lasky and AIC picked up six markers in the sixth inning, all of which were gifts from the Mass fielders. Lasky pitched tight ball most of the way against Amherst but three walks in the second frame prolonged the game for three innings. The Jeffs bunched the walks, a single, and a two run single by Jim Coreen to score three, wiping out a one run Massachusetts lead. Amherst's margin held up until the seventh when UMass tied the score after adding a solo run in the bottom of the second.

BILL SKOWYRA singled and scored the first Redman run with the help of a pair of errors, and a wild pitch allowed Bud Kruse to take third in the following inning after a two bagger that set up the second run. Lasky delivered a single knocking in Kruse. Mass still trailed in the game until Jim Babyak delivered a key one base hit in the seventh that drove pinch runner Ron Scrozynski across the plate with the equalizer.

From the fourth inning to the eighth 14 men were retired by Lasky, but UMass bats weren't able to put the game on ice. In the eighth and ninth sacrifice bunts put men on second with only one out, but in both cases they were stranded there. Ed Polchlopek delivered the winning blow with a single to right with one down in the twelfth. Ray Johnson opened with a single and again a sacrifice worked the runner to second, however in this case Polchlopek came through with a base hit over the first basemen's head.

Five AIC errors and three by UMass kept the pitchers in trouble all afternoon. Bill Russell started for Mass and was strong in the first few innings but the Aces got to him for six in the sixth. Jeff Bell relieved in the sixth and retired the only man he faced in that frame, but AIC threatened to open up on Bell in the seventh, however the righty from Reading got out of the jam with no scoring against him.

Singles by Frank Stewart on a bunt, Jim Babyak, Marc Greenberg, Polchlopek, and Bud Kruse, a walk to Johnson, and a two base throwing error by Mike Prendergast accounted for a half dozen Mass runs in the second inning off Dan Bourque. An error scoring Babyak in the fourth gave the Redmen a seven run lead, all but one of which was blown two innings later. Mass held on to a 7-6 advantage for two stanzas until they added a pair for the final 9-6 score in the eighth. Relief pitcher Bob Golden was touched for singles by Don Tudryn and Polchlopek, but a two base throwing error on Greenberg's infield bounder and a sacrifice also aided in tallying the insurance runs.

There is, therefore, no tribute more appropriate that the University bearing the name of his native state can render to President Kennedy's memory than a library duplicating the one he established in the White House.

Senate Debates Budget

An amendment to the budget of the Student Senate by Senator Elwin McNamara ('64 Commuter) spotlighted last Wednesday evening's Senate meeting.

$140 was "earmarked for the Women Counselors' Workshop under category 255-Women's Affairs. Moving to delete this amount, McNamara declared that "women counselors are employees of the Dean of Women and should be paid by her."

Leading the opposition was Senator Marilyn "Sam" Singer ('65 Johnson) who replied that the administration did pay part of the cost and that the Workshop before school was an important program which, if denied student financial support, might disappear.

Senator Jim Allen ('65 Commuter) moved to strike $110 in the same category that was intended for the Big Sister—Little Sister Program sponsored by the Scrolls.

Allen was unable to muster the votes that had carried McNamara's cutback as the Senate voted, by a large majority, to retain the allocation.

FOR THE FIRST TIME the Precisionettes were granted a budget of their own with appropriations for new uniforms and a trip to Boston where they will appear at a game of the Boston Patriots.

"Increased" was the word for the Yahoo budget as money was provided for four issues to be published next year in Nov., Jan., March, and May.

Lane Blasts Oswald Case

Attorney Alleges Fraud In Seven Hour Lecture

by JOE BRADLEY

For seven hours Wednesday evening UMass students and faculty heard a tale unfold of alleged mistakes, miscues, coverups and lies concerning the November assassination and the supposed assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.

Mark Lane, former counsel to Mrs. Marguerite Oswald and her accused son, told 1500 persons from 5:30 p.m. Wednesday to 12:30 a.m. Thursday of his private investigation of the case of the State of Texas against the supposed assassin.

Beginning in the Colonial Lounge, Lane commenced his presentation—the first in this country since his recent appearance before the Warren Commission.

In an interview before the address in the ballroom, Lane commented that he felt the appointment of Chief Justice Earl Warren had been for purposes of public image, to assure the nation of the value and veracity of the commission by trading on Warren's judicial position.

Lane said he also doubted the value of the presence of Sen. Russell who "... Unfortunately is too busy trying to block the Civil Rights bill."

He described one member of the commission as "Goldwater type conservative," and related that he told the commission when he was present that "no trial lawyer would allow the seating of you people (the commission) on a jury because you're all government connected."

Warming up to his ballroom address, the former criminal trial lawyer told of his most recent incident.

As he left his home Wednesday morning, Lane said, he was approached by two FBI agents and asked, "Do you have in your possession any documents that you have illegally secured from the Federal Bureau of Investigation?"

The agent, whom Lane identified as a Mr. Fowker, said, "We have confidential information that you have such information." After affirming that he had no such information, Lane said he "hailed a taxi and left them standing in the rain."

He believed, noted Lane, that the encounter stemmed from a

"Boy Friend" Will Open; Parodies The Jazz Era

The Operetta Guild, in association with the Opera Worshop, will present The Boy Friend two weekends — H.E.R. Weekend, May 1, 2, and May 8, 9.

The curtain will rise at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Theater, marking the second production of O.G.'s Seventeenth Musical Theatre Season.

Directed by Mrs. Albert P. Madeira, this high-spirited satire lampoons the dress, the way of life, and the forms of entertainment characteristic of the jazz era. Musical direction is by Paul R. Bartsch.

THE MUSICAL COMEDY portrays the romantic adventures of a group of young ladies at Madame Dubonnet's school for girls. The Riviera resort area magnetically attracts characters of all ages. To the young it's a paradise of fun and romance. To the old it's a sunny fountain of youth.

One of the travelers is Percival Browne (Ed Cole), British millionaire. On a sedate trip to check on his daughter Polly, he rediscovers Mme. Dubonnet (Judy Karafin). Waltzing to the beautiful tune of "Fancy Forgetting," they remember the old days and rekindle their romance.

Also racing around the Riviera is Mme. Dubonnet's exciting French maid Hortense (Penny Eskot). Though she tries to keep the girls in line, she reveals her true romantic self in her special number, "Nicer in Nice."

HER Weekend To Feature A Folk-Concert And Picnic

"The Tripjacks - University Folk Singers" who will highlight H.E.R. Weekend have rapidly established themselves in the folk field and are moving quickly into the front rank of performers.

They are extremely versatile entertainers with a flair for comedy and everything from beautiful ballards to foot stomping fiddle and banjo tunes.

The March, 1964 issue of Billboard said of them: "University singers, inspired folk trio recently acclaimed as New England's most popular concert attraction—a superb blending of fine sound adapted in concert form with their own select brand of comedy and satire."

A background of teaching, and research into American folk music, gives each Tripjack performance an unusual and authentic quality.

Two of the Tripjacks received M.A. Degrees from The Harvard Graduate School and the third from the Boston University School of Graduate Study.

They will appeare at the south terrace of the Student Union on Friday, May 1, 1964 from 8:30-11 p.m. In case of rain the con-

Orchard Complex "Deluxe Plus"

by KATHY YUKNA

Described as "a first in the nation for a state university," the Orchard Hill residence hall group scheduled for completion next fall will combine residence hall living with education in the most modern and well equipped residence halls in the University system.

Under the "Residential College Plan," a concept of the Danforth Foundation, the four residence halls in the group will each have a teaching faculty member in residence as well as the usual head of residence. Professor H. Leland Varley of the English department has been named as master of the "residential college" and will have charge of directing the educational and cultural aspects of life for the more than 1300 students living there.

In addition to Professor Varley and the resident faculty, other instructors will have office hours in the new group and lectures and seminars will be held regularly in the study lounges and meeting rooms of the new residence halls.

STUDENTS now living in other residence halls may still sign up for room reservations in the group. Residence Halls A and C will be for men and B and D will be for women.

In an interview with the Collegian Wednesday, Director of Housing Jack Welles pointed out that there are over 1300 openings in the new group, but that only 500 students have thus far signed up for them.

"This is an experiment," he said, "They may take part in it if they wish."

He also suggested that students with interest in the new group stop at the Housing office in Draper Hall to speak to him

Sociology Prof. Publishes Work

DR. MILTON GORDON

Dr. Milton Gordon, professor of sociology, has recently published a book entitled, Assimilation in American Life; The Role of Race, Religion and National Origins.

It is the first full scale sociological survey of the assimilation of minority groups in America.

In a personal interview Dr. Gordon said that his "longstanding interest in racial and ethnic relations" prompted him to write the book.

Dr. Gordon holds a Ph.D. from Columbia University, is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and held a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1960 1961. He has been a consultant on race relations to the city of Philadelphia, the Albert M. Greenfield Center at the University of Pennsylvania, and Brandeis University.

The author of Social Class in American Sociology, he has written numerous articles on race relations and social statification.

His book, he said, is based on a combination of his original analytic theories, interviews with representatives of intergroup relations agencies, and surveys of previous empirical research in this area.

Dr. Gordon noted that his basic thesis is that while there has been a "massive cultural of behavioral assimilation in American society, there is still a substantial degree of structural separation" or "structural pluralism".

While he warns against excessive structural separation, he maintains that "some is a legitimate part of our society" based on our democratic system of free choice and the responsibilities of citizenship.

In Assimilation in American Life he offers positive suggestions for the achivement of a healthy balance among societal, subgroup and individual needs.

Bloodmobile Coming

The University Women will sponsor the Blood Insurance Program for faculty and townspeople. on May 12 from 12 to 5:45 p.m. in the Arnold House recreation room.

A separate day has been set up for this group because of the growing participation of the student body and because faculty using blood have not been replacing it.

Students who wish to donate may sign up at the Student Union lobby counter by May 7th. Those under 21 must have parental permission and only the official Red Cross release form will be honored by the Bloodmobile staff. These forms are available at the Student Union lobby counter. Students are responsible for getting the forms signed, and should bring them with them when they come to give blood.

Faculty and staff members have received pink registration slips to be filled out and returned to either Mrs. J. H. Korson, 55 Pokeberry Ridge or Mrs. Harold Watts, 48 Blue Hills Road, both of Amherst. Townspeople may also sign up by calling either Mrs. Korson or Mrs. Watts.

Bob Dylan: Performance & The Show After The Show

by DAVE GITELSON and DICK DOHERTY

On Sunday evening more than thirteen hundred students sat on folding chairs and bleachers in the Cage to hear the highlight of the Civil Rights' Week program: a concert by Bobby Dylan. To say that he was well received would be something of an understatement; even those who had approached the concert with a negative attitude came away impressed by the talent of this young man who has so often been described as one of the outstanding spokesmen of our generation.

The performance itself consisted exclusively of original compositions, ranging from tender love songs to protests against racial injustices, a nuclear holocaust, etc. What struck us most, as we sat and listened, was the sincerity of his words, They do not come from the mind, but from the heart.

After the concert we were fortunate to be able to briefly speak to Mr. Dylan. We were quite surprised at his congeniality, as he shook hands and signed autographs for as many of his admirers as was possible. Mobbed by a large number of inquisitive people, it was very difficult to get answers to our questions, but we were able to get some of the background on this remarkable artist.

..Dylan attributes the start of his professional career to a Fizzie Young, at the Folklore Center in New York Citq. Without this man's help, he told us, he doubts that he could have achieved the popularity that he has. He is in the process of writing a novel, to which he devotes as much of his time as possible. It should be really something. When we asked him what he thought of the many popular recordings of his music released by other artists, he laughed and described them as "wonderful—they've captured the real Dylan!"

As several sidelights to the evening, as soon as he left campus, Dylan and his troup of bodyguards went directly to the Drake, where they held a private party. Not a bad life. To try to clear up a widespread rumor, Joan Baez was not at the concert. That girl everyone thought was she turned out to be a waitress at the Club 47 in Boston.

We would like to extend our thanks to those people who were responsible for arranging Bobby Dylan's appearance here on campus, and hope that all of you enjoyed the evening as much as we did.

AFROTC Contacts Air Defenses

An automobile in the streets at the Nation's Capitol, an aircraft over Greenland, and defense and strategic command posts around the world were in contact with Bowker Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts, Tuesday morning, as part of a global test of the country's communications system.

In a special demonstration for the AFROTC Cadets at the U. of M. and other students and faculty, Air Force Col. Lewis L. Bradley, Jr., of the Pentagon Command Post, flashed messages around the planet, contacting aircraft, an automobile driver, and aerial and ground command posts.

Picking up a telephone which had been especially installed in the auditorium and getting an instant response from "Washington Switch," by way of a hot line which had been connected shortly before the demonstration, the Colonel got an acknowledgment from "Minuteman Four"—an Air Force Communications Service Sargeant driving along the street in Washington, D. C.

"I read you five-by-five" responded the sergeant. "-The weather is mild here, the temperature is 70 degrees . . ."

Then the Colonel, who is Chief of Telecommunications at the Pentagon's USAF Command Post, asked the Washington Switch, (which handles calls in the Capitol that are other-than-conference nature) for contact with another sergeant toting a walkie-talkie, showing that the communications service is diverse. — "Portable three-four" was also in Washington, D. C.

Illustrating another part of the global system, contact was established with each of the numerous commands involved in defending North America and the free world. In rapid fire order through the Command Post Alert Net, COPAN, duty officers answered from points throughout this hemisphere and commands in Europe and the Far East. The aerial command post of the Strategic Air Command, "Looking Glass," was contacted, giving a "loud and clear" reading when informed by Col. Bradley about the demonstration.

Introducing the demonstration of the communications system, Brig. Gen. Anthony T. Shtogren, Commander of the Westover AFB Eastern Communication Region, pointed out that it provides a foundation without which tactical forces would be helpless.

telephone call received by his office which indicated that an FBI agent investigating the assassination had been shot to death."

"We know," said Lane, "that our office phone has been tapped," according to an electronic expert.

Lane also disclosed that he released a story to the New York Times Wednesday morning that debunked "planted leak" as a story that appeared in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, February 10.

The story told that the Dallas police had in custody a Negro janitor who had been employed at the Dallas Book Depository where he had witnessed Oswald in the alleged act.

Lane said he told the Times that reporter Waldo Thayer had been fed the story by Mike Howard, "an agent of the U. S. Secret Service." Lane said it was subsequently denied by the police.

He said the story had been planted to discredit the testimony of Mrs. Marguerite Oswald who was to testify before the Warren Commission the same day.

Lane then launched into a comparison of photographs printed by Life magazine and other publications.

Life's February 21 issue, said Lane holding up the cover whereon the picture appeared, showed Oswald holding a rifle with a smooth stock and no telescopic sight. The caption said the photo had been taken in the spring of 1963 in Dallas, Lane explained.

A picture that Lane identified as a New York Times photo, which he held up to view, showed the alleged murder weapon to have a grooved stock and a telescopic sight.

Later on a trip to Spain, Lane said he obtained a copy of Life's Spanish edition, which he also showed, that contained a photo on the inside page similar in every way to Life's cover photo in the American edition, except, said Lane, the stock had been grooved and a telescopic sight added.

Lane then showed the famous picture of Ruby shooting Oswald at the Dallas police station. He followed this with a photo printed in the French magazine Paris Match that showed only one man moving away from the group at the moment of shooting.

Lane identified the man as Dallas police chief Jesse Curry.

Lane finished his cross-examination of the press by telling of an Associated Press story quoting Dick Goodwin, Oswald's supposed commanding officer in the Marine Corps, who described Oswald as a crack shot.

Three hours later, Lane said, the Associated Press moved an editor's order to kill the story, since Goodwin had not been Oswald's commanding officer, but the kill order was never carried out thus alluding to press suppression.

Lane next began picking apart the information released about the alleged murder weapon.

According to the Dallas district attorney and a photostat, which Lane displayed from the podium, signed by Dallas police officer Seymour Weltzsmith, who found the weapon in the Book Depository, the weapon was identified as a German Mauser of 7.65 mm.

An FBI report, however, showed that an Italian carbine of 6.5 mm was purchased by Oswald under an alais.

Later, charged Lane, the Dallas police and district attorney changed their report to conform to the FBI report.

At this point Lane grasped the lectern with one hand, thrusting the other into the air he declared:

"I have never, never seen a case so totally riddled through with outright falsehoods. For a trial lawyer this would be an easy case." He continued listing the case's weaknesses.

The taxi driver alleged to have picked up Oswald after the assassination was originally identified as Daryl Click. The Dallas Cab Co., which Lane said monopolizes the taxi business, said they knew of no such man. Lane said the story was later changed to include a taxi driver named William Whaley.

The parafin test, which measures nitrate residue after firing a gun or touching nearly anything containing nitrates, was administered to Oswald. The test proved positive on Oswald's hands, but not on his face, indicating that he could not have

It's Too Late Now

This editorial has no moral, no stirring message, no keen insight. It has none of these, but yet it is not a pointless one. It is the expression of sad thoughts on a tragic and seemingly unresolvable situation.

A man like Mark Lane can roam this country as a doubt merchant selling insoluble problems, and not one individual can raise his voice and put a stop to his sowing of the seeds of insecurity.

The reason is a simple one, for not one individual has the sufficient and necessary knowledge to totally discredit his claims.

The tragedy lies not in that we are all ignorant and silent, but in that we must remain ignorant and silent. For no matter what the Warren Commission releases we shall never know the full truth about what happened in Dallas. It is too late now.

The committee, by its secretive activities has discredited itself and its ultimate findings. We cannot fully believe what the committee tells us because each of the members is a public servant, true, some serve better than others, but each is dedicated to promoting the domestic tranquility, to borrow a pharse, of our nation.

It is too late now. Mark Lane will soon be forgotten. But in ten, twenty or a hundred years, the same questions will be raised and once again doubt and fear will be created, but no answers will be provided for those of us who must listen and remain forever silent and ignorant.

J.S.D.

SURVIVAL

by DICK SOBLE

Last Sunday the fraternities once again displayed the apathy that will eventually suffocate them. The fraternity system was able to muster only six out of seventeen fraternities to sing at the annual Fraternity Sing.

The fraternities can no longer exist on this campus as separate entities. Each house as well as the entire system must integrate more harmoniously with the rest of the campus. For if they continue to ostracize themselves through their apathetic attitude, they will be elminated as a functionary organ of the University.

We can see some hope through the fraternity blood drive and the Christmas party that a few houses held for underprivileged children. There is hope, however small, for the revitalization of the system; however, they must act now and not in a few years. For then it may be too late.

PERSPECTIVE

Labor In Movement

by G. MASSELAM

Jimmy Hoffa is getting his. It really looks like they have him where they have been wanting to get him for a long time. What does one think, when Jimmy Hoffa comes to mind. Corruption, power, and brutality seem to be wrapped in one little package. Isn't this the image that most of us are burdened with? What about unions? Same thing?

I once knew a man who had a small house, one wife, and one child. He was employed as an armature winder for a big electric motor factory. He had never complained about his work until one night he came home to tell his wife that there had been a wildcat strike at the factory. It seemed that an executive had fired a man who had worked a lathe for twenty years at the same corner of the factory. Many conflicts and warnings had proceeded this event. For the next four weeks this man did odd jobs around the neighborhood in order to feed his wife and child. For many days he was idle. His wife was expecting another child. For four hideous weeks this man was out of work. (His union didn't have enough funds to help its members.)

As I watched this human episode I thought to myself, how many strikes have there been in this world? How many people have died and suffered over the one hundred and twenty-five year history of strikes in this country? Then it occurred to me the lengths man has to struggle for human dignity. How he is still struggling. Merely for the right to have a job and keep it. This four week hardship had been hard enough for this man and his family. Yet the process of struggle in the long run was so much more overwhelming then did I realize the heritage for which this group of strikers stood.

Before I get called a romatic or a communist allow me to say that I am aware that many unions are not bastions of democracy—that they are corrupted with power and an almost brutal lack of limits. This is unfortunate for their battle is a noble one—human rights and dignity.

Luther Allen Answers Letter On Vietnam

To the Editor:

Before students rally for the withdrawal of the United States from Viet Nam as Daniel J. Kurland urges in the April 29th issue of the Collegian, there are a few points that should be clarified.

The Vietcong does not have "virtually complete support of the people." In the cities and in important portions of the countryside they are hated as terrorists and as proponents of the heavy, humorless, totalitarian regime that rules in the North, a regime which by its own doctrine must go on for ever. Nearly a million refugees fled that regime in 1954. Today in the South there is a sizeable army, there are many civil servants, shopkeepers, students, professors, and traditional peasants whose present degree of freedom depends on our continuing commitment.

Our policy in Viet Nam is not immoral. It has often been foolhardy, blind, and excessively militaristic. But the political commitment for helping South Viet Nam build a decent reasonably free political regime is a challenge and a responsibility, one which is more promising today than it was under the Diem dictatorship.

What the Vietcong are doing is launching an all-out push in what may be their last big chance—the disorder following two coups, French neutralism, and our presidential elections. The war is more serious there. But South Viet Nam is a freer country than it was three years ago and there are elements and actions in the new government that show constructiveness and promise. It is much less a puppet of the United States than the neutralist supporters of the National Liberation Front are of the Vietnamese Communist part.

Thank You

To the Editor:

May we take this opportunity to publicly extend a "thank you" to the Brothers of Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity for their recent participation in the Heart Fund Drive of Amherst. Alpha Sig offered their services as needed on Heart Sunday, and their participation was a vital contribution to the most successful Heart Fund Drive conducted in Amherst. May we say that the pleasure was ours to have been associated with such a fine group of students. The University and town should feel proud of this kind of civic participation.

Who Is The Assassin?

To the Editor:

We the undersigned in concern for the questions raised by Mark Lane urge that all students as responsible citizens send letters to their representatives in Washington concerning this matter. Whatever one's views in regard to Mark Lane it must be recognized that he does raise deeply significant questions which have not been answered by the government.

If you do not have time to write a letter, then send the one below. Let us have a clarification of facts.

Dear .....

I urge you to read Attorney Mark Lane's public testimony before the Warren Commission. This testimony (if it corresponds to his defense of Oswald as given in Amherst, Massachusetts) presents the American citizen with a very disturbing proposition: either Mr. Lane is a monumental liar, or there has been a gross miscarriage of justice and the American people have been deliberately misinformed.

If we could dismiss Mr. Lane as a crackpot, we would be reassured; but we cannot because many of his observations and questions were our own before he voiced them, because much of his documented information is available for our own scrutiny and verification, and because the silence of our public officials and our mass media with regard to these discrepancies, which are by any standards newsworthy, is a suspicious circumstance.

Because we find it difficult to dismiss Mr. Lane and his findings as iresponsible, and because no one else has even attempted to do so in public, we are forced to consider the alternative (that the American people have been deceived).

As long as these gnawing doubts linger, our confidence in our judicial system with its precepts of criminal law, in our law enforcement agencies, and in our free and responsible press is seriously undermined. Might a full and public revelation of all the pertinent facts re-establish our confidence (even though some of these facts may be embarrassing)?

Please do what you can to open the hearings and guarantee the defendant his full rights. In this way, with the American legal system of defense counsel and cross-examination at work, the truth can be established.

Respectfully yours,

To the Editor:
Re: Ken Feinberg

Last evening the Student Union Ballroom was filled to overflowing with students, professors and others interested in the Kennedy assassination and in what Mr. Mark Lane had to say about it. I was a member of this audience. I sat in my seat for more than two hours listening to what I thought to be an extremely logical presentation established on fact as to why Lee Harvey Oswald cannot yet be condemned as THE assassin of John F. Kennedy.

However, in the Collegian of April 29 there was an editorial written by a certain Kenneth Feinberg stating that Mr. Lane "uses slanted information" and "argues with rather sound, but limited, logic." Please, Mr. Feinberg, do explain what you mean by "limited logic"? According to Mr. Feinberg's statements, quite a few of us that were present at this lecture, including myself, were not very discerning listeners. According to Mr. Feinberg's statements, Mr. Lane's speech merely "awakens the apathetic to the inherent dangers of law", but "the burden of proof rests with Oswald's guilt." I do not understand your reasoning Mr. Feinberg! You contradict yourself!! I agree that Mr. Lane did, as you say, "awaken the apathetic to the inherent dangers of law." And how did Mr. Lane achieve this end? — By showing that the burden of proof does not rest with Oswald's guilt!! Mr. Lane's statements were not frabrications. Every statement that Mr. Lane made was backed-up with proof. He presented what I consider to be an extremely valid argument showing that Lee Harvey Oswald cannot yet be labeled "the assassin of John F. Kennedy."

Hunter College Suspends Paper

The student newspaper of Hunter College, The Arrow, was suspended from publication Friday by Hunter President John J. Meng, because the paper "no longer has an effective editorial board to direct its activities."

Immediate support for the Arrow came from the Bronx Campus Student Council, and from the Barnard Bulletin, which offered to fill in for Arrow's regular Monday issue on both campuses of the college. Student Council, in an emergency session late Friday night, agreed to have its own mimeograph news letter carry the suspension story and be distributed on both campuses.

The indefinite suspension was the result of the public split within the editorial board, and did not represent censorship of anything which Arrow had printed. Internal dissention, although it existed for several weeks, disappeared in the face of the suspension, and a protest statement to the President was signed by all nine members of the board.

The editorial board statement, while admitting that there were conflicts within the policy making groups, chastised President Meng for not having solicited the opinion of the editor, Allan Coleman, before suspending the paper. Thus, the president, "could not have known that these problems were undergoing a tardy, but rapid, resolution."

THE STATEMENT further condemned Meng for "depriving the college of its only printed newspaper and silencing the student press."

The conflict within the editorial board came to light last Wednesday when five of its members brought impeachment charges against the editor for "neglect of duty and abuse of authority." Judicial Board, the campus discipline committee, dismissed these charges as "improper" on the grounds that the procedure for taking the impeachment vote was illegal.

Following the dismissal, Coleman announced his intention of bringing counter charges of "liable perjury and misrepresentation" against the five impeachers. In a signed editorial in Thursday's issue of Arrow, Coleman declared that he was "unable to trust these people. It will be both difficult and destructive to continue operation in such an atmosphere both personally and as co-workers. Yet it must be done."

PRESIDENT MENG, citing Coleman's editorial, claims that he was "not prepared to commission and subsidize one man to operate a newspaper in the name of the entire college, however competent and honest he may be the suspension will remain in force until I am assured that a properly authorized staff is prepared to assume true corporate responsibility for the paper.

Meng appointed an advisory committee of the two deans of students and the two student council presidents to recommend procedures for reestablishing "a properly authorized student newspaper."

Feel like getting away from it all? Wish you could take a walk in the playland? Then an unguided stroll through South College may be what you're looking for. S.C. is full of split levels and unmarked offices. There are corridors that run through desks of secretaries and students. It is even said that at midnight during a full moon, the moans of long-lost students can be heard in its upper rooms and attics. When you have nothing better to do, try a trip through this hallowed hall. And don't miss the dungeon room, often called the IBM office by those in the know. The doors are open daily except Saturdays and Sundays and there is no admission charge.

Fishing enthusiasts, a Southbridge man caught a six pound, ten ounce smallmouth bass at Webster Lake. That's four pounds heavier than last year's top entry in the sportfish program and also represents a new record for Massachusetts.

What do you associate with these words: "closet," "charm" and "home?" A psychological word-association test showed that "closet" reminded men of "door" while women associated it with clothes: "Charm" made women think of "beauty" but men thought of "snake." Women associated "home" with "happy" while men answered "house."

The sole witness to the murder of Patrolman Tippit, identified by Lane as Helen Louise Markham disappeared, Lane asserted.

Also, Oswald was arrested for the Tippit murder but his description was not broadcast until 15 minutes after the arrest.

Lane told of a copyrighted article by Bob Considine of the Norw York Journal-American that disclosed another possible witness named Warren Reynolds, a used car dealer on Patton St., who said he saw a man running with a gun from the scene of Tippit's murder. Three months ago Reynolds was shot in the head while closing his business for the night. Reynolds was not killed.

Lane said that Helen Louise Markham had described Tippit's murdered before her disappearance as a short, fat, bushy-haired man. Oswald was of medium height, thin and had receding hair.

In the actual shooting the bullet entered the President's throat from the front, according to Dr. Malcolm Perry, said Lane. The doctor also said that a tracheotomy, following the path of the bullet was performed on the dying President. A tracheotomy involves enlarging the throat and inserting a tube to preserve the air flow. At the same time another team of doctors worked to re-inflate the right lung, indicating that the lung had been punctured.

No investigators, said Lane, talked to the doctors for a month. And none of the physicians at Parkland Hospital were present at Bethseda Naval Hospital when the official autopsy was performed, Lane said.

Instead the report was read to the doctors on the case. The report announced that the bullet had entered the top of the head and passed out the front of the throat. Lane, however, did not mention that the Bethseda report accounted for the lung puncture, stating that a bone fragment had done the job.

Life, Nov. 29, printed movie film showing the President looking forward and to the right when he was shot. In the Dec. 6 issue, Life claimed that the President had turned completely around.

Texas Gov. Connolly testifying before the Warren Commission said that the car had passed the Book Depository before the shots were fired. Connolly was in the same car as the President.

Four reporters from the Dallas Morning News were standing about 100 yards from the Book Depository, said Lane, when the shots were fired. Lane said that they reported that they believed shots came from the nearby railroad trestle, directly in front of the President. They said that four shots were fired, and that the first shot missed.

Lane produced a tape recording of the voice of a woman he identified as a Miss Hill, a Dallace school teacher. She told Lane she believed four to six shots had been fired. Miss Hill said she told investigators, who she said, insisted only three shots had been fired. One bullet, she said, was picked up by a policeman at her feet. She was standing a litle beyond the Book Depository.

Lane said that he called Miss Hill recently but she said she had been threatened with reprisals if she continued to talk about the matter.

Lane attacked at least a dozen more points in the address and continued in the Cape Cod Lounge answering questions from the audience.

Lane, who first stated that Tippit, Bernard Weisman (who bought a full-page advertisement in the Dallas Morning News declaiming President Kennedy's visit and alleging that Kennedy was a Communist) and a third person, whom Lane refused to name, met in Jack

Mom And Dad Orientation

A new summer orientation program at Lycoming College will require new students to bring mother or dad with them for several days of pre-college life.

Dean of Students Jack C. Buckle recently announced that all freshmen entering in the fall will participate in the summer program and that one parent will accompany each student. The new summer program will replace New Student Week, previously held the three days immediately preceding the opening of the Fall term.

The 300-member freshman class will be invited to the campus in groups of fifty for one of seven two-day orientation periods in July, August, and September. The program will include the usual activities of placement, testing, library orientation, counseling sessions, and registration. There will be two orientation meetings for parents in each session.

Dean Buckle stated that the major advantage of the new program will be the opportunity to schedule longer periods for faculty advisement and counseling. It will also enable the college to provide an adequate orientation program for parents. Other advantages are an anticipated reduction in the first-year dropouts, and a more effective orientation to college in a period relatively free from the confusion and rush of a Fall pre-registration.

Dr. Janowitz To Give Series On Marriage

Dr. Julian Janowitz, psychiatrist at the University of Massachusetts will give the second in a series of lectures for engaged couples and all other interested persons. Dr. Janowitz will speak on the topic: "Feelings Run Deep" at 3:30 p.m. in the Student Union. There will be ample time offered for discussion concerning the relationships of male and female in and out of the engaged relationship. A third lecture will be scheduled for the following Sunday afternoon if enough interest is expressed by those who will be in attendance at the lecture this coming Sunday afternoon.

Illustrated Lecture On William Blake

An illustrated lecture by Professor David Erdman on "The Cinerama of William Blake" will take place on Thursday, May 7, at 8:00 p.m. in Shattuck Auditorium (Public Health Building).

Professor Erdman is one of the foremost authorities on William Blake, having written William Blake: Prophet Against Empire, a major political interpretation of Blake, and Blake's Four Zoas, in which he has traced the development of Blake's artistic ideas, in addition to numerous scholarly and critical essays. He is an expert on the French Revolution and especially on the effects it had on literature. His other interests include Byron, Coleridge and Browning. He has identified a number of essays written by Coleridge but published anonymously in contemporary periodicals.

Mr. Buck, R.S.O. receives a shoe-shine from the sisters of GSS who will be shining shoes this weekend to aid a project.

"Boy Friend" ...

Featured numbers in the show include "There's Safety in Numbers," "The Boy Friend," "I Could Be Happy," "The Riviera," "Won't You Charleston with Me?" and "Sur La Plage," danced in the colorful costumes of the roaring '20's.

The leading role of Polly Browne, in which Julie Andrews made her American debut, will be played by Margaret McRobbie. Opposite her is her millionaire messenger-boy Tony Brockhurst (Pete Fink), posing as a poor young working boy to test Polly's love.

These and other characters combine their talents to make The Boy Friend an exciting production. Brooks Atkinson, former New York Times critic, wrote, "It has a tongue-in-check attitude toward the hocus-pocus of the old-fashioned musical show . . . Charming! Uproarious! A delightful burlesque!"

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY the netmen meet two stiff opponents. Friday Rhode Island comes here and according to Coach Steven Kosakowski it will be a "tough match." The match begins at 2:30. On Saturday Holy Cross pays us a visit and is one of the better balanced teams we play. The best matches to watch will probably be the first and second singles and the first doubles. Last year the man who Twitchell played caused him to play three sets in order to secure victory, and this year this man is playing in the number two spot. The number one man, who last year played number two singles, defeated Mike Rose in three sets. With these two teamed up in a doubles match against Twitchell and Neal, superb tennis is the only possible result. This match is tomorrow at 1:30.

Awards

Recipients of awards for scholarships and undergraduate assistantships for 1964-65 will not be notified until the latter part of June.

Almost three times as many applicants for scholarships have been received as in former years; thus, a much longer time is needed for processing of the applications which includes screening for appropriate academic average, computing financial need, observing and noting extra-curricular part-time work activities, and recommendations.

In addition, the University Committee on Scholarships and Financial Aid has ruled that the final semester of this year should count in the cumulative average in determining qaulifications for these scholarships.

The Upperclass Scholarship Sub-Committee consists of Professor Howard E. Bigelow, Mrs. Martha R. Wright, Professor Loren P. Beth, and Robert J. Morrissey as Chairman.

Golfers Bow To UConn, 4-3

by DAVE PODBROS

The varsity golf team suffered their first loss of the season Monday, when they lost to Connecticut in a close match 4-3. The match was a dual meet played at the Redmen's home course, the Orchards C.C. in South Hadley. The linksmen's other opponent was Springfield College, who they easily downed 5-2.

TUESDAY, the golfers journeyed to Hartford, Connecticut, to the Rockledge C.C. Their opponent was a highly rated Trinity College team, who had recently snapped Worcester Tech's three year undefeated streak. The outcome was close with the swinging Redmen squeaking by to a 4-3 victory. Medalist was Jack Donasky, who fired a 76, he was closely followed by Bill Glass and Howie Atkinson, who both shot 77. Sophomore Atkinson's come from behind victory (won 16th and 17th holes) featured this upset victory by a lowly rated but aggressive UMass golf team. The Trinity victory brings the season's record to an impressive 6 wins, 1 loss.

THE NEXT MATCH is Thursday at 1:30 at the Orchards C.C.. Once again the Redmen are the underdogs as they face once-defeated Worcester Tech. Anyone interested in seeing some fine match play golf, should plan to see this match, one of the few remaining home matches on the schedule.

Here is how the Redmen made out individually against the three teams played this week.

Then in the bottom of the sixth, Awdycki walked and Neil Harris followed with a home run to deep right center field off reliever Hamilton.

WHEN LEJEUNE THREATENED in the top of the seventh, Coach Earl Lorden lifted Brita, and brought in ace reliever Jim Ritchie, who promptly struck out the next two men to end the threat.

Mass added their last run on an Awdycki single and a triple by Della Piana. A threat was wiped out when an attempted steal by Kuczynski went for naught.

UMass Spring Sports Maintain Fine Record

The University of Massachusetts varsity and freshmen teams are in the midst of the season's busiest week. Thirteen varsity and 8 freshmen contests appear on the Redmen schedule with Saturday the biggest day with three varsity and three frosh teams playing.

Coach Earl Lorden's varsity baseball team, 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the Yankee Conference, travel to meet highly-regarded New Hampshire in a YC game Saturday at Durham. The Redmen met Rhode Island Wednesday and Camp Lejeune Thursday, both at Alumni Field.

THE VARSITY TENNIS TEAM, sporting a 4-1 record, traveled to Connecticut Wednesday and entertains Rhode Island Friday and Holy Cross Saturday. Coach Steve Kosakowski feels this is a key week for his Redmen who are off to an excellent start.

THE VARSITY LACROSSE TEAM dropped its first two games but has rebounded for wins over Bowdoin, MIT and Tufts. The Redmen snakebeaters hosted Holy Cross Tuesday. They play Trinity Thursday at UMass. Coach Dick Garber is pleased with the recent performance of his attack unit which is starting to score goals in the manner expected in pre-season.

CHET GLADCHUK'S VARSITY GOLF TEAM won five straight before losing 4-3 to UConn. The Redmen traveled to Trinity Tuesday and host WPI Thursday in this week's action.

THE VARSITY TRACK TEAM, with wins over New Hampshire and Springfield, play host to Tufts and Northeastern in a tri-meet Saturday at Alumni Field. Coach Bill Footrick's squad has been sparked by the fine performances of soph John Mederios and senior Brouillet.

Frosh Lacrosse Team Defeats Holy Cross

by AL KLINE

Lacrosse is a sport entailing stamina, gumption, and finesse. The UMass freshman have come a long way since their opening game against Brown towards acquiring these three attributes.

Saturday the Frosh defeated a tough Holy Cross ten by the score of 5 to 2.

Mass drew first blood with a goal by Howie Goffman, early in the first period. After the Cross had tied it up at one apiece, Howie flipped his second goal into the nets to put Mass. ahead once again. John Mullins quickly followed with a timely goal and Mass led 3 to 1. Although the Cross retaliated, closing the gap 3 to 2, it was to no avail; Pete Amaral flipped one into the nets to make it 4 to 2. With the game still in contention, Buzz Bray scored on a pretty assist from Morice Amaral to put the game out of reach.

Key plays on defense by Tom McKenna, Don Adziggian, and Fred Faley, along with brilliant saves by goalie Ira Yovner in the nets, aided the victory.

Redmen Whip Rhodie; Rally Downs Lejeune

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts baseball backed up the three hit pitching of Mike Johnson with a 14 hit attack to score a 12-0 win over the University of Rhode Island. Then on Thursday the team downed Camp Lejeune in an exhibition game, 9-7, on Neil Harris' two run homer in the sixth.

THE RHODY RAMS came to UMass with a victory over UConn and a 2-0 conference record under their belt. The Rams started their ace, Ed Johnson, in an effort to score their third win.

Both pitchers were breezing along until the last of the fourth, when UMass really got rolling. John Awdycki started with a single to center. He was sacrificed to second by Neil Harris. Al Nordberg hit a long double to left to score Awdycki with the first run of the game. Della Piana got an infield hit with Nordberg just reaching third on the play. Mike Johnson reached first on a fielder's choice and Jim Kuczynski hit into a force play, Nordberg out at home.

WITH TWO OUTS and the score 1-0, UMass, Johnson ran into control trouble and walked Kamena and Crane to force two more runs across. Joe Apicella then lofted a fly to right that fell in with Kuczynski and Kamena scoring. That was all for Johnson and Mike Pearson came in. Awdycki greeted him with a single to right to drive in Crane and Apicella. Harris walked. Nordberg singled to score Awdycki, and Della Piana singled to drive in Harris and Nordberg.

When Mike Johnson hit back to the box to end the inning Mass had come up with seven hits and ten big runs. Awdycki, Nordberg and Della Piana all had two hits in the inning.

After that it was just a matter of the final score and an effort to see if Johnson could keep his shutout.

Mass added another run as Awdycki singled, Brita took second on a wide double play relay, and came home on Tony Simone's single. Mass got their last run in the bottom of the eighth as Awdycki got still another hit. Dick Stewart was hit by a pitch and Simone singled to score Awdycki.

IN THE END, Awdycki came up with 5 for 5 to raise his average .146 points from .120 to .266. Nordberg pushed his average over the .300 mark. Nordberg, Della Piana, and Simone each had two hits. Johnson was brilliant on the mound. He allowed three hits, struck out 12 and walked only three. The hits were a double on a "miss-judged" fly for the Rams' Johnson, and singles in the sixth and ninth for Vallane and Singleton. Mass upped its record to 5-2 on the year and 3-1 in the conference.

IN ANOTHER WIDE OPEN GAME, UMass downed Camp Lejeune, 9-7 after trailing 6-2. The Marines had scored two in the first and four in the third, while Mass. came up with two in the second. Rick Farrell started for UMass but control problems forced him to the sidelines in the third with Mike Brita coming in to hurl.

Mass tied the game in the fourth on singles Kuczynski, Yando, Brita, Apicella, and Awdycki. Apicella scored on a passed ball to tie the game. Mass. had Al Nordberg injured on a pick-off

Trackmen In Tri-Meet

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity track team will put its 2-0 record on the line this Saturday when it hosts Northeastern and Tufts in a tri-meet. Last week the Redmen defeated Springfield for the first time in 10 years. The Maroons were the only team to defeat UMass last year.

THE HUSKIES will be favored Saturday. They have a skein of 20 undefeated dual meets, stretching back through cross-country. Northeastern defeated UMass easily indoors this year. This is the best team they have had in 5 years. There is depth throughout. The Huskies have a 196-foot weight man and a 57-foot shot putter, as well as a fine running team. Tufts has one of its weakest teams in years. If UMass is going to engineer an upset, everyone is going to have to exceed their best performances to date. The frosh will compete against the N.E. frosh.

LAST SATURDAY co-captain Bob Brouillet traveled to the Penn Relays. The "South Philipston flash' made a great showing as he finished third behind Roger Straub's winning time 8:53. Brouillet shattered his own UMass record of 9:14 as he ran 9:08. Bob's times have shown constant improvement as he builds himself to get ready for the Nationals in June.

Netters Dropped 8-6; Winning Streak Broken

by MORRIS SHUBOW

A big, fast Holy Cross lacrosse team scored an 8-6 victory over UMass Tuesday afternoon. The loss snapped a three game winning streak for the Redmen. The Crusaders now 3 and 4 for the season were sparked by Jim Glimm and Pat Mattingly, both players scoring three goals. Co-Capt. Steve Harrington and Charlie Glew each had two goals for the Redmen.

IN THE FIRST PERIOD it looked as if UMass was going to break the game wide open. Fran Casey scored an unassisted goal at 0:31, his fifth in the last three games. Three minutes later Walt Gustavsen got his second goal of the season. Jim Mahoney set this one up with fine hustle and a good pass which "Gus" converted for the goal. Then at 8:32 Pat Mattingly got a goal for H.C., but 11 seconds later Steve Harrington scored his sixth goal of the season set up by Co-Capt. Frank Infusino's fine play, making the score UMass 3, H.C. 1.

AT THIS POINT Holy Cross shifted their goalie Jack Farley to defense and replaced him in the goal with Pete Benotti. The new goalie seemed to cool off the Redmen who did not score again until the third period. At 13:18 of the first period the Crusaders' Jim Glimm with some fine faking moved in and scored unassisted making the score 3-2. UMass outshot H.C. 13-3 in the opening quarter but only led by one goal.

IN THE SECOND PERIOD the Crusaders tied the game at 5:21 on a goal by Fred Macchi and 11:34 they went ahead as Jim Beale got loose in front, got a pass from Mattingly, and scored. H.C. led 4-3 at the half.

Charlie Glew opened the 3rd period with a goal at 0:34, his fourth of the season. Harrington assisted on the goal. This tied the game but H.C. got goals at 6:49 by Jim Glimm and again Glimm at 11:52 to take a 6-4 lead at the end of three periods.

IN THE FOURTH PERIOD the Redmen again scored quickly. This time Harrington scored his second of the game and seventh of season at 0:43. But Pat Mattingly got two goals for the Crusaders before Charlie Glew scored his second of the game and fifth of the season in the last minute of play. Harrington's assit on this goal gave him 2 goals and 2 assists in the game. The game ended with the Redmen on the bottom half of the 8-6 score.

Surprisingly only one penalty was called on UMass. The Crusaders received six penalties but the Redmen were unable to capitalize on any of their extra man situations.

FRIDAY NIGHT the Redmen entertain the Boston Lacrosse Club under the lights on the Lower Athletic Field.

Tennis Team Defeated; Huskies Upset UMass, 5-4

by DAVE PODBROS

Last Wednesday, the UMass varsity tennis team, victorious in four matches, traveled hopefully to the University of Connecticut, only to meet defeat at the hands of the Huskies.

Lacking the services of Bob Greenberg in the singles, UMass lost in the second, third, fourth, and fifth spots. Rodger Twitchell in the first singles easily won 6-0, 6-3. Massey, generally at number one singles for UConn, was switched at the last minute to number two singles and ended up playing Bob Neal. Neal lost his match 2-6, 3-6. Last year Twitchell defeated Massey three times, this might have been the reason for the switch. Mike Rose played a good match in the third singles but unfortunately lost a three setter 2-6, 6-4, 6-4. Dick Leete, substituting for Bob Greenberg, played the fourth singles and lost 6-4, 2-6. Roger Harper lost a close match in the fifth singles 6-4, 8-6, and in the sixth singles Billy Martin gave the netmen their second win 6-1, 8-6.

IN THE DOUBLES Rodger Twitchell and Bob Neal teamed up to win two close sets 8-6, 6-4. However, Bob Greenberg and Billy Martin clinched the victory for UConn by losing in the second doubles 9-7, 6-2. Mike Rose and Roger Harper teamed up for a win in the third doubles 6-1, 6-2, thus making the final team score UConn 5, UMass 4.

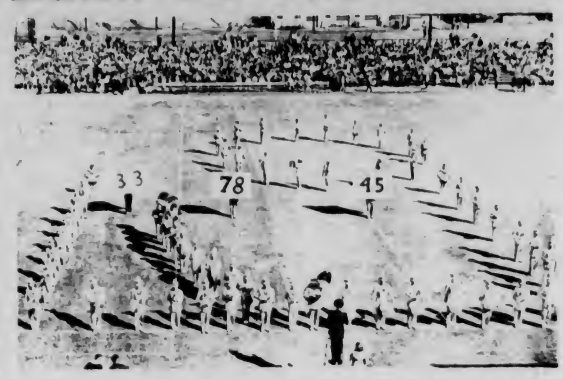
Marching Band On The Move

Special scheduling considerations will be given to those planning to join the expanded 1964 Redmen Marching Band it was announced Saturday by band director John Jenkins.

Those who plan to become members, or present members should pre-register for MUSIC 21, Section 2. This will assure class-free time for practice. Freshmen and Sophomores will be given physical education credits for band time.

"This should be the best year for the band in the history of the University", Mr. Jenkins told the Collegian. "The student Senate and the administration have begun what looks to be like the beginning of a long era of cooperation in order to facilitate the band's expansion." Jenkins hopes eventually to have a 100 plus piece band, rivalling any of those found in the "Big Ten", he said.

He pointed out that the band will be accompanying the football team to all conference games, in what appears to be the most promising season yet.



The Marching Band will sport flashier "new look" for the 1964 season. It will have to go some to match the meritorious "History of H.F." of the past season.

The band will, in addition to the conference games, attend the Harvard and Holy Cross tilts.

Jenkins noted that with the loss of a few seniors, and the planned expansion, there would be plenty of room for new members. He offers to lend instruments to those who would like to practice between now and the beginning of band season.

The bands will open their season with a band camp, held for upperclass members, starting Sept. 11. According to director Jenkins, the purpose is "to get members in shape, teach them endurance, and strengthen their muscles so that we can concentrate on music during the school year."

Jenkins stated that membership is open to any student able to play a band instrument.

University Women Sponsor Bloodmobile Tomorrow

The Bloodmobile will be at Arnold House recreation room on Tuesday, May 12 from noon to 5:45 p.m. This visit is being sponsored by the University Women as a part of their service program.

Mrs. J. H. Korson and Mrs. Harold Watts, co-chairmen, have announced that they would welcome participation on the part of the townspeople as well as the university community. Persons under 21 must have parental permission.

Mrs. Korson, AL 3-3097, or Mrs. Watts, AL 3-5396 are available for further information. Appointments will be at 15 minute intervals.

The Blood Bank is being held to replace blood previously used. One pint of blood entitles the donor to membership in the Hampshire County Blood Insurance Program for the ensuing year.

This program aims to relieve the critical shortage of blood in Hampshire County. It enables the Red Cross to continue its present policy of free blood for all in need and yet obtain adequate amounts. This program is underwritten jointly by the Hampshire County Red Cross and the Cooley Dickinson Hospital who work in cooperation

Donahue Sees New UMass To Be In Boston Area

by JOE BRADLEY

President of the Massachusetts Senate Maurice A. Donahue unveiled Sunday at the Newman Club Communion Breakfast a plan for a new University of Massachusetts under the present Board of Trustees and president to be located near Boston.

Before 400 students and parents at the Dining Commons, Sen. Donahue received a Newman Club citation "in recognition of his outstanding public service in behalf of the faculty and students" of the University.

Donahue called for a new University, possibly to be located on the state's Blue Hills Reservation in Milton, "in a location served by the MTA where 20 cents would be the means to a student's educationai goal."

"The area must include a minimum of 100 acres," said Donahue in explaining the choice of location, "to base 20 high-rise structures for schools of liberal arts, science, business administration, medicine and law."

Donahue emphasized that the proposed university would not be a renaming of Boston State College, and that it would be on state-owned land so there would be no need to seize taxable lands from the City of Boston.

"It should be capable of housing the state medical school if the trustees should decide to locate in Boston," Donahue said.

"But," he added looking up from his prepared speech, "I hope they do not come to that conclusion." That remark was met with applause from the predominantly Western Massachusetts audience. "That's something the Legislature won't have a vote on," said the Senate President in response to the ovation.

Sen. Donahue said he believed the Harrington Commission on Higher Education would be studying the plan soon, and "if President Lederle believes that legislation is warranted, I believe it will come before the legislature in due time."

The proposed university marks the Commonwealth's most ambitious plan since the establishment of the eight two-year community colleges since 1960, with an additional four planned, and the University's medical school approved last year.

In explaining the need for the proposed university, Donahue likened the state's higher education system to an atom whose nucleus is constituted by the University.

He said the envisioned university was a part of "the originai nucleus that had fissioned off."

The new institution would be primarily for "commuting students from Greater Boston."

"I am a firm believer in the value of a university education" so ". . . talented youth get an opportunity to develop their God-given talents."

President John W. Lederle, before presenting the Newman Club citation to Donahue, praised him as one "more than any other single individual" responsible for the University's present position.

Seniors Set Picnic For Wednesday

Travel 1½ miles on North East Street, passing about ten houses. Turn right just before a big brick house set back from the road.

NOTICE TO COMMUTERS

Parking will be continued until the end of the year for the 40 junior and senior commuters who were granted special permission in the North Lot. No more special permission will be given.

Peace Seminar To Hold Final Session

The Peace Seminar will hold its seventh and final session on May 7. This meeting will deal with two alternative methods of achieving peace, one based on an individual ethic of non-violence, the other based on a universal ethic of world law.

The general thesis is that these two views are not different, but are in reality mutually co-existent. One cannot exist without the other, and peace which lacks either will not long remain peace.

The principal speakers are Professor Peter Rowe of the Department of Political Science, University of Mass. and Smith college, and Professor Ferenc Vali, Department of Government at the University. Professor Rowe will speak on the non-violent movement in India, and how it may serve internationally as a model for achieving peace between individuals. He will then try to show how this person to person relation is, and can be, spread to larger groups.

Professor Vali will speak on the role of the United Nations in maintaining peace. There are at least two views which he will explore. One is the world federation view, which maintains that there should be world-wide law through a single world-wide government. The other view holds that the United Nations should act as an international police force, much as it is acting in the present day in Africa and the Middle East.

TOPIC: a faculty symposium

Edited by Jeff Davidow

We have on this campus a wealth of knowledge stored not only in our library but in the minds of our faculty.

Too often, because of a variety of reasons (scope of classroom discussion, course subject matter, time limitations etc.) our faculty is unable to communicate to their students their educated and considered thoughts on pertinent topics.

It will be the purpose of this page to partially alleviate this inadequacy in our educational framework by offering to the faculty an opportunity to reach their students outside of the relatively restrictive classroom.

It will also afford students the opportunity to broaden their horizons by reading the more sophisticated and reliable views of the faculty.

You are invited to suggest subjects for TOPIC and to comment upon the views expressed in these columns.

On Lee Harvey Oswald

LOREN P. BETH
Department of Government

It is probable that Lee Harvey Oswald will never be legally convicted, or exonerated, of the President's assasssination. If the speech by Mark Lane has performed any useful function, it is to remind us that in American jurisprudence guilt can only be established in a court of law with the safeguards of due process. No amount of statements by district attorneys, police chiefs or government commissions will establish his guilt. And even though Life still, in its most recent issue, calls him the assassin, it is obvious that, as Lane says, it would be difficult to convict him on the evidence that has been announced to the public.

It is cause for concern, however, that we should need to be reminded by Mr. Lane of all this. No one who sat through the nightmare hours of last November at his television set, and thought about what he saw and heard, should ever have been convinced of Oswald's guilt, and it should not have been necessary for Lane to point this out to us. At best, television should have led the American public to a verdict of "not proven." That it did not do so is proof that the public either did not think, or that it is disturbingly ready to assume guilt at the presentation of claims (outside of court they do not constitute evidence) every one of which is circumstantial and of only doubtful truth.

The report of the Warren Commission may possibly clear up some doubtful points; but it should be remembered by us all that in the absence of a court trial, no newspaper or magazine really has a right to go further than to call Oswald the "alleged" assassin (he was never even legally accused of the crime). Similarly, while each of us in the privacy of our own conscience may believe what we will, our public selves should maintain the distinction between proven guilt and mere accusation, no matter how strong the evidence seems. A regime of ordered law demands this, and we too often settle for less. If Mark Lane reminds us of this, he will have performed a valuable function.

Lane's Talk Weak In Many Ways

ARNOLD SILVER
Department of English

I was drawn to hear Mr. Lane for the same reasons that undoubtedly prompted many others to attend: a desire to see a crusader detail his minority view of an issue of national and historical importance. I departed from the meeting, however, unconvinced by Lane's arguments and disturbed by his manner of presentation.

Of the latter, it seemed to me that Lane, by design or not, spent a great deal of time discussing irrelevancies—his encounters with the F.B.I., the inadequacies of domestic newspaper coverage, the doctoring of pictures by Life, his dealings with the Warren Commission, etc. Interesting as these matters were, they had no direct bearing on Oswald's guilt or innocence. But of course they did win sympathy for Lane and did establish his authority over his audience.

Moreover, Lane increasingly exhibited a variety of rhetorical and courtroom techniques which made me aware of his tendentious reasoning. He displayed extraneous documents; he attempted to discredit the opposition and the Warren Commission; he summarized the opposition's case so as to magnify its weaknesses and omit its strengths; he ridiculed rather than disproved uncomfortable facts too well known to be omitted.

Beyond all else, Lane allowed much of his presentation to depend for its effect on inuendo. Although overtly he refrained from drawing any conclusions, he covertly and persistently implied that a large conspiracy had been at work to frame Oswald, a conspiracy involving national and state officers and drawing into itself several reputable doctors and newspaper editors. No firm evidence whatever was presented to support these insinuations. Instead, sinister hints were attached to innocent facts, such as the head of the Secret Service not riding in Kennedy's car, or Chief Curry peering straight ahead during the few confused seconds of Ruby's attack on Oswald.

That the Dallas police blundered in a dozen ways, that under the tenacious promptings of newspaper and television questioners they spoke hastily and prematurely, we all knew even before Lane spelled it out. But it is quite unwarranted to leap from these facts, indicating excitement and sad incompetence, to a conclusion of conspiracy. Indeed the very slovenliness of the police, the confident declarations later revised, seem to me to argue against the coordinated control characteristic of a conspiracy.

As for the supposed facts that Lane presented, the judgment of most of them required a degree of knowledge that neither I nor most people in the audience possessed. Yet even a layman might perceive that some of Lane's contentions were quite weak.

For instance, we were told that the Secret Service chauffeur in Kennedy's car stepped on the brake immedately after the first shot. This item seemingly supports the theory of frontal attack. But then why did the chauffeur immediately thereafter drive the car forward towards the supposed source of the gunfire? (Lane avoided any explanation and passed on to some other matter, although the two facts together destroy the implication of the first one taken alone.)

Again, Lane poured skepticism on the police claim that Oswald picked up the murder rifle outside of Dallas by elaborately and irrelevantly proving that rifles and shells were easily purchasable in many Dallas stores. Common sense suggests that a prospective assassin would be reluctant to buy a gun in the very city where the murder was to occur, for someone might recognize him in the act of making the purchase or the proprietor might later identify him.

Still again, Lane seemed to accept Oswald's presence on the second floor of the building where he was questioned within a minute after the killing. But then, citing a picture of the crowd in front of the building, Lane tells us that one figure in the crowd looks strikingly like Oswald. Would Lane have him in two places simultan-

In The Name Of J.S. Mill

JAY SAVEREID
Department of Speech

Mark Lane proved three things convincingly. He demonstrated that the "public" case against Lee Oswald as the murderer of Kennedy and Tippett is almost totally destroyed under forensic analysis and attack. He demonstrated that the news sources are committing serious sins of omission and commission. And, incidentally, he demonstrated that there is great public interest, around the country and at this University, in an inquiry behind the official story of November 22.

His stated purpose was stimulation of debate on the matter. It is impossible to argue that he failed in that purpose. And it is only remotely possible to argue that he ought to fail in that purpose. Nothing in the long and uneven speech was irrelevant to his stated purpose; some of his material was strong and well developed and some was not. His negative approach was the only one open to him; it suited his training and it seemed to suit his nature.

Mark Lane's critics must, it seems to me, begin by imputing to him some motive other than the stated one. He has to be put in the position of defending the proposition that there was a particular kind of extensive and high level conspiracy. Then—only then—it becomes an engrossing game to try to show inconsistency between any two of his assertions. That is not unprofitable; it is, though, dependent on putting Mark Lane in a position which he chooses not to take and need not take.

The other motive commonly imputed to him is personal ambition, more or less sinister. That reaction, too, is not totally without possible value but stands in constant need of being recognized in its limitations, its essential triviality.

Mark Lane's casual detractors need to be reminded of the traditional values of an open society. Further, they need to be reminded of the too common failure of the the citizen energy that is crucial in an open society. His serious and analytical detractors are entering the discussion as they should and they deserve in turn to be answered. They may help Mark Lane to bring the Oswald case more into the open. What, in the name of J. S. Mill, can be wrong with that?

Chorale Concert To Open Final Week Of Classes

The University Chorale will present its annual Spring Concert on Sunday, May 17, at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The Chorale is made up of University students who have been chosen by audition for their excellence in choral singing.

Under the direction of Mr. Larry Lemmel, it will perform both sacred and secular music by composers such as Brahms, Bartok, Mozart, Berlioz, and Stravinsky, plus folk songs of several nations.

This varied program will feature separate men's and women's choruses, solos, and small ensembles, in addition to the full chorus of seventy-five voices.

During the first half of the program the Chorale will sing sacred choral works, including the "Credo" from the C Minor Mass by Mozart. A special feature of this part of the program will be the performance of the "Ave Maria" and "Pater Noster" by the great contemporary composer Igor Stravinsky.

The second half of the program, made up of secular music, will include a performance of the "Liebeslieder Waltzes" by Brahms.

These lovesong waltzes are among Brahms' most famous and popular works; they will be performed by the entire Chorale, featuring a solo quartet and accompanied by Paul Bartsch and Zigrida Udris, duo-pianists.

Also included in this part of the program will be four Slovak folk songs by Bartok, and the well-known folk songs "In Silent Night" for women's chorus and "Black is the Color of My True Love's Hair" for men's chorus. These last two pieces have been arranged by Mr. Lemmel especially for the concert.

Admission to the concert is free.

Boyfriend — A Review

by SHERRY SPEAR

The lights dimmed in Bowker Auditorium last Saturday while the orchestra began to play the overture to the Operetta Guild's and Opera Workshop's rendition of "The Boyfriend" directed by Mrs. Albert Madeira. The curtain parted to a messenger-boy who informed the audience that Britain too had a 20's. Maybe their 20's weren't roaring, but at least they rippled. From there we're off to the Villa Capriz, home of perfect young ladies, run by Madame Dubbonet (Judith Karafin).

Maisie (Geri Siegle) and Bobby Van Husen (Jon Hutton) steal the show and save it with their rendition of the Charleston. Both talented dancers and actors they sadly eclipsed the leads, Tony (Peter Fink) and Polly (Elaine McRobbie). Polly, who had a beautiful voice, improved considerably as the evening progressed. She, pretending to be a poor secretary, but in reality a millionaire's daughter, falls in love with the messenger boy Tony who has deserted Oxford. The plot is trite and unimportant to this spoof of the day and dress.

The costumes were hysterically reminiscent of the 20's. While older members of the audience remembered their youth, this reporter wondered how funny a satire on the shift would seem in a few years. Technical direction seemed virtually flawless while the scenery (with three major changes) transported the audience from the Villa Capriz to an exclusive costume ball without a strain on the audience's imagination.

The chorus of perfect young ladies, and gentlemen wooing them, produced a number of dancing and singing sequences skillfully choreographed by Jerri Siegle and Berni Werble. Whenever the group was on the stage, the audience could expect a lively scene.

Richard A. Morril as Lord Brockhurt, an aging (only in the body) Englishman and his wife, Sharon Williams, on vacation at the Riviera, were outstanding. Patriotically hoping to improve "foreign affairs" he stayed in character even at the curtain calls when he almost made off with a flamenco dancer. He and Dulcie (Elizabeth Cotton) in "It's never too late to fall in love" parody the morals, and sneak an encore.

While all this matchmaking is progressing, Madame Dubonnet has revived an old love affair with Polly's father, E. James Cole. Thus the scheme of everyone's having a "Boyfriend" is fulfilled.

Bowker Auditorium has comfortable seats so that even with the few slow moments, the show left the younger generation wondering if the sizzling 60's has anything over those roaring, oops, rippling 20's.

Lane's Talk (Silver) ...

Given such careless reasoning, I am forced to be quite skeptical of Lane's other claims which I lacked the knowledge to assess. (On some matters of fact I did happen to remember, Lane was simply wrong, e.g., the physicians did not exactly reverse themselves a month later after being talked to by the F.B.I.; Dr. Clark said on the very day of the assassination that the throat wound might be an exit mark.) But the unconvincingness of Lane's talk does not, of course, prove Oswald's guilt, nor redeem the police from charges of disgraceful blundering. Nor does it excuse the newspapers from their trial by headlines or their failure to keep the public informed.

Lane is decidedly doing a public service by reminding us that in a democracy we must always question authority critically and welcome all available points of view.

Coed Upbraids Male Senators

To the Editor:

I regret that the Student Senate is still playing games. It seems most unfortunate that certain male senators stil experience a certain satisfaction in voting against a woman's regulation or any other matter which directly concerns the women of the university. It is truly infantile, to my thinking, that seemingly "mature" young men "use" the Senate for the purpose of attacking some vein of women's life on campus.

Listen to some votes on the floor of the Senate. Listen to those particularly involving men and women. This vote indeed comical. We hear masculine, husky voices asserting their authority . . . and on the opposite side of the question we hear fain and faultering feminine voices.

A gross example of these practices was made evident at Wednesday's Senate meeting. The first move was a successful attempt to cut the Women's Affairs Committee's Budget by $140.00, which was to be used for the Women Counselors' Workshop. After this was passed, another male senator (his courage evidently augmented following his comrades' victory) further moved to delate $110.00 from the women's budget. This money would have been allocated for the Scrolls' Big-and-Little-Sister Program. If this great example of masculine valour had been approved by the Senate (the elected "representatives" of the entire student body) the program would have disappeared from university life . . . and along with it, perhaps the scholarships for which the Scrolls are celebrated.

Fortunately, the somewhat awakened Senate realized this to be the case and defeated the proposed cut in the budget. This time, there were a few less husky masculine voices bellowing their opinion.

Isn't it remarkable that in such a divided body as the Student Senate we are still able to find other lines on which to divide. The issue at hand is completely lost when voting by sex is allowed to overrule pertinent discussion. It seems unfortunate that within the Senate we have certain "gentlemen" who sit back smugly in their chairs to await the exciting battle which is to ensue. Male vs. Female—the Senate succumbs to a game . . . for a change.

Record Run-Around

To the Editor:

Once again the UMASS hierarchy has made things more difficult for the students. I am referring to the present change of obtaining records at the Lobby Counter.

Before, use of records the piano, and organ in the Cape Cod Lounge were easily obtained in the Check Room booth. Now, with the change from the Check Room to the Lobby Counter, students find it difficult to obtain these items at the Lobby Counter. The task becomes almost impossible during class changes and other busy hours.

Also, one notices there has not been a compensating increase of help behind the Lobby Counter. The same people at the Lobby Counter are forced to carry on the extra work of the person who used to work at the Check Room. I feel neither the employees nor the students are in favor of the present system. When will the UMASS hierarchy learn to leave well enough alone? When will students be able to overcome the difficulties and red tape of the UMASS hierarchy?

JFK BOOTH A SUCCESS

To the Editor:

I would like to express my gratitude to all those organizations and individuals who generously contributed to the success of the Booth for the JFK Memorial. I am sorry to announce that due to Student Union regulations we are unable to hold the booth open any longer. Since time was short many organizations that wished to contribute to this fund were not able. However contributions can still be made by contacting Art Labrie BKPi, 406 N. Pleasant St. Tel. Extra Yahoos Now Obtainable

To the Editor:

Due to a shortage of covers, a small number of issues of the last issue of Yahoo were not printed on time. As a result some students complained that they did not receive a mag. These extra mags have been printed and are now available in the Yahoo office (Franklin Room) to any student who would like one.

Religion Courses Are Available

To the Editor:

In Critique, Lorna Sass has raised the issue of the teaching of religion courses for credit at UMass. Until the University decides to offer credit courses, the students have the option of taking courses in religion at the other three colleges in the Four-College Program.

Students interested in taking the courses available at the other schools should investigate the possibilities before Counseling Day next Wednesday. I suggest they get in contact with the Chairmen of the Departments at the schools: Profs. Bruce Morgan (Amherst), Virginia Corwin (Smith), and J. Paul Williams (Mount Holyoke).

From the departmental offices, they can procure course listings and such scheduling as is available.

Any student at the University desirous of counseling in this matter may see me in my office, 12 Old Chapel, and I will be glad to help in choosing courses within the range of the student's interest and competence.

Critique Welcomes Student Appraisal

To the editor:

We are now ready to critique Critique. The first issue of this student course evaluation magazine is in your hands and we of the staff are vitally interested in your suggestions for improving it.

As a new publication, there were many difficulties, among them making people in the university community aware of Critique. Now that Critique is here to stay, we want the student body, for whom the magazine is written, to write it themselves. The bigger our writing staff, the better the chances of the course you want being critiqued.

Come tell us how to improve our questionnaires. Come find out first-hand what it is like to interview the faculty instead of being questioned by them. Come and critique Critique!

The general staff meeting for the next issue will be Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Critique office in the Student Union. All positions are open, practical, and creative. You are welcome regardless of experience, school of concentration, or amount of free time. Ask not what Critique can do for you.

two 'outs. Wildcat hurler Jack Strobel hit a grounder to John Awdycki, who had only one play, and that was to second. His throw was low and all hands were safe with Larkin scoring.

Corey managed to cruise along from there until the last eighth when all his hurling went down the drain. Dick Ahrendt got the Wildcats going with a long triple. He tried to make it into a home run and the relay had him cold at the plate. The ball, however, got away from Kamena and the game was all tied up. Corey settled down and got the next two batters. Federowicz then singled for the 'Cats and Kerrigan reached on a walk. Strobel then won his own game with a long triple to get both men home.

UMASS had good chances in both the eighth and ninth but just couldn't produce the big hit to get the men home. Second baseman Pete Merrill made a great play on a smash by Corey to kill the threat in the eighth.

Massachusetts now stands 5-3 on the year and will face AIC at Alumni field on Tuesday. The Aces have one of their better teams with an 8-5 record an a defeat of Northeastern on Saturday. in the hammer, and Carl Wallin threw the shot-put 58'. Bob Larson set the only Alumni Field record for UMass as he ran the 440 yard hurdles in the time of :58.2, to take a full second off of the old record. Bob's time also set a UMass record. These were also meet records.

ED FLOWER'S winning time of 49.8 in the 440 set a meet record. Flowers also won the 220 in meet record time of :21.7. Steve Peterson won the 120 yard high hurdles in a time of 15.4, to set a meet record there. Another was set by Mike Glynn in the 880 with a winning time of 1:55.7. The javelin was won by Dave Post with a toss of 190'8½" to set yet another meet record for the Huskies.

The Redmen were not shutout on setting records though, as Bob Brouillet came back to win the 2 mile in the meet record time of 9:34.6. John Mederios won the triple jump with a leap of 42'2", for a meet record in that event. Mederios also won the high jump (6"1¼") and the broadjump (21'9"), and took a second third in the 100.

SOPHOMORE PHIL HALL took a second in the 100 and a fourth in the 220. Senior John Harrington took a second in the 440 yard intermediate hurdles and a third in the 120 yard high hurdles. Jim Wrynn was third in the 880, and Bob Pendelton was fourth. Gus Anagostopolus took a second in the hammer, as did Doug Renwick in the shot-put. Bob Karagosian took a fourth in the hammer. Dave Sadowsky, Phil Lizotte and Bob Murray swept the first three places in the pole vault. Dave regained some of his old form as he went 12'6". The varsity mile relay team of Jim Collins, Basil Robinson, Bob Pendelton and anchored by Craig Erickson's good 51.3 leg, just missed catching Tufts for second place but still managed to set a UMass record with a time of 3:31.4.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Lacrosse Team Wins; Dumps Trinity, 11-6

by MORRIS SHUBOW

Charlie Glew and Fran Casey each had three goals as the UMass lacrosse team walloped Trinity College 11-6 Thursday afternoon here at Amherst. This victory puts the Redmen over the .500 mark with a 4-3 record.

Trinity jumped off to a 1-0 lead at 7:12 of the first period on little Marty Gall's goal, but two minutes later Gordie Webb tied up the game with a goal from 15 yards out. Co-Capt. Steve Harrington got the assist. Then Charlie Avakien, who is replacing Steve Vengrow who is out with an ankle injury, scored giving the Redmen a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period.

UMASS went ahead 3-1 in the goal by Steve Harrington his eighth of the season. It was a typical Harrington goal where he goes behind the net, runs out on the left side, jumps second period on an unassisted and in the same motion fires his shot into the net. Then at 5:22 Redmen goalie Dick Baird was penalized for hitting from behind. Soph Ed Flaherty replaced Baird in the goal. While the Redmen were shorthanded Marty Gall got his second goal of the game making the score 3-2 UMass. Then the Redmen offense went to work. On a fast break Gordie Webb passed to Dick Brown. He in turn passed to Co-Capt. Frank Infusino who relayed the ball to Harrington. "Harry" got an assist when he passed to Charlie Glew in front, who shot it in behind his back for the goal. Three minutes later Harrington ran down the right and passed to Casey, who in the same motion shot the ball into the net. In less than a minute Glew scored his second, again assisted by Harrington. The half ended with the score UMass 6, Trinity 2.

IN THE THIRD PERIOD Joe Barnard scored for Trinity at 5:02 but Redman Al Morris scored his first of two at 8:52 with an assist to Fran Casey making the score 7-3. At 9:23 Casey scored an unassisted goal, his second of the game. Marty Gall scored his third for Trinity at 10:09 before Charlie Glew scored his third of the game unassisted at 11:07 making the score 9-4 at the end of three periods. Glew now has eight goals for the season.

BOB HARTMAN, a defenseman for Trinity, took the ball all the way up the field and scored at 1:23 of the fourth period. Two minutes later Fran Casey got his third goal of the game giving him eight for the season. Trinity scored their final goal at 6:36 by Lou Huskins and the Redmen's Al Morris scored his second of the game on an extra-man situation at 11:32. Gordie Webb got an assist on the goal. UMass led 11-6 as the game ended on a happy note.

Wednesday afternoon the Redmen have a big game with intracity rival Amherst at Amherst College. The Lord Jeffs hold a 6-4 lead in games played over the years. Last year UMass won 8-6. The game starts at 3:15.

19 RECORDS SHATTERED

Trackmen Finish Second

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity track team suffered its first loss of the season last Saturday at Alumni Field. An amazing total of 19 records were shattered as Northeastern showed why it is undefeated in dual meet competition. The Huskies scored 100½ points followed by UMass (65) and Tufts (18½).

THE MILE was one of the best races all day, and it was a prediction of what was to come. Bob Brouillet led a blistering pace through the ¾ mark, with Dave Dunsky right on his shoulder. The boys went through the ¾ with a time of 3:12, and the only question was how far under 4:20 the winner would be. With 220 to go Dunsky took the lead and pulled away from Brouillet to hit the tape with the great time of 4:13.6, to establish new Alumni Field, Northeastern and meet records. Bob's time of 4:19.2 was good enough for a new UMass record. Bob Molvar took a fourth for the Redmen.

Four other Alumni Field records were established with the Huskies setting three of them. Ed McGloston did :09.9 in the 100, Bill Corsetti threw 185'3½"

Redmen Nine Upset By UNH

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts baseball team dropped a crucial Yankee Conference game to the University of New Hampshire Saturday, 4-2. With the loss, the Redmen missed a chance to take over the top slot in the five team conference race. The present standings are:

Maine	3	1	.750
New Hampshire	2	1	.667
Massachusetts	3	2	.600
Rhode Island	3	2	.600
Vermont	2	2	.500
Connecticut	1	6	.143

THE LOSS was a real heartbreaker for UMass ace Rod Corey as he scattered eight hits and didn't allow an earned run. Two crucial errors proved the difference, the last coming in the eighth and paved the way for the winning three run rally for the Wildcats.

Massachusetts got the jump in the second inning as Dennis Della Piana opened with a double. An infield out got him over to third and he was able to score easily on Karl Kamena's single.

Mass scored again in the top of the fourth as Rod Corey came up with a single. Kamena sacrificed him over to second. Bill Crane hit a ball to the shortstop, Al Gramatikas, which resulted in an error and Corey standing on third.

COREY came home as Joe Apicella came up with another of his key hits to drive him in. Apicella has been making the big hits all year for Redmen.

In the bottom of the fourth, UNH retaliated with a single marker, unearned of course. The bottom portion of the line-up managed to load the bases with

Year Round Operations

Class Of '68 Increased 10%

A new hope for a college education has been offered for qualified applicants to next year's freshman class who have now been placed on a waiting list.

A letter has been sent to 600 applicants on the waiting list, inviting them to participate in a new admissions plan. Those accepted under the plan must attend both sessions of the University's summer school this year, amounting to 12 weeks. They will not enroll in the fall semester, but will re-enter in January as second semester freshmen. They will then continue as full-time students.

The number to be accepted is limited, but will increase the total freshman enrollment of 2600 by about 10 per cent. Those invited to take advantage of the new plan will be accepted on a "first-come, first-served" basis. By entering when openings are available, the freshmen will arrive at the same stage of academic development as those members of the class of 1968 who enter in September.

Commenting on the new program, Pres. John W. Lederle said, "By giving these fully qualified men and women the opportunity for an education that would otherwise be denied them, we are attempting to fulfill our role as a public institution. In addition we are thus coming closer to optimum use of all facilities on a year-round basis."

For the most part, these early arrivals will be accepted in the College of Arts and Sciences. This is because some of the technical departments such as engineering cannot split courses to meet the needs of this special program.

It is expected that many of those who enroll in the new program will seek employment during the summer. These entrants will be accorded all privileges of members of the class of 1968. They will benefit from a special three-day summer counseling program to be held starting June 10.

A special meeting to explain the program in full will be held on Saturday, May 16, at 1:30 p.m. in Bartlett hall auditorium at the University for all interested applicants and their parents.

Graduation announcements will be distributed in the Student Activities Office on Tuesday, May 12, 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Wednesday, May, 13, 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, May 14, 10 a.m. to 12 noon, and Friday, May 15, 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Each senior is permitted seven announcements. Enclosed in three of these will be tickets to be used in case of rain. These tickets will admit three people if graduation is held inside.

Student I.D.'s necessary.

Senate Elects New Officers

Presidency Decided By One Vote; Fife, Labuzoski Get Standing Ovation

by SCOTT FREEDLAND and TERRY STOCK

After the regular business of the Senate was concluded Wednesday night, the body suspended the rules and moved into the elections for next year's officers.

Before the elections began under the direction of Justice of Men's Judiciary Wade Houk, Senator Ken Feinberg (At-Large '67) moved for a vote of thanks to President Labazowski. The Senate responded with a standing ovation for "the fine job she had done."

President Labuzoski, as her last official act, presented a gavel to Past President Jon Fife, who also received a standing ovation.

Senator Fife, in accepting the gavel, stated that "if it had not been for Joan taking office, the Senate would not have run as smoothly. Joan should be receiving the gavel."

Senator Wendy Hall (Lewis '65) then presented President Labuzoski with a gift from the Senate.

Before the nominations, Senator Fife ('64 Commuter) enumerated the duties of the President. Nominations open, Jim Allen ('66 Commuter) nominated Bill Landis ('65 At-Large) for the office of President only to have his nomination declined. Phil Howard ('64 Mills) then placed the name of George Michael ('65 Brett), the eventual winner, in nomination, and was followed by Bill Landis, who nominated Don Boyd ('65 Greenough).

Senator Michael, in his acceptance speech, pointed out that the "most important thing to me is that the final rationale behind the decision each of the senators has to make tonight they should consider what has been done and by whom, but regardless of what the final decision is, I will respect that decision."

In his acceptance of the nomination speech, Don Boyd point-

EXTRA

Spring Riot "Rocks" Campus

A screaming, rock-throwing mob, estimated at 1000 students, last night staged the first major riot of the year.

The melee started at about 7:15, as water fights broke out through the mens' residence area. At 9 p.m., the Office of the Dean of Men was called in to quell the disturbances. This they were able to do.

11 p.m. saw groups of students milling about the lower hill area. Again the Dean was alerted for trouble. It arrived in spades.

Responding to a call for help, police went to the top of the hill to aid the Dean in calming the students. The presence of authority did not seem to dissuade the students. The mob started down the hill toward Brooks, gathering strength as it moved.

At this point, police put out a general call for al off-duty officers and the auxiliary force. Of the latter, only about a quarter arrived, thus leaving police severely undermanned.

After a respite at Brooks, the mob made its way toward the Quadrangle. It was here that police made their stand, blocking off all access to the area. After a brief battle, the mob was turned back.

Three police officers were injured as a result of the fracas. Officer Donald Zidik was cut by flying glass as the window of his polic car was smashed by stones. Officers Philip Cavanaugh and John Taylor received stone bruises.

One non student, supposedly from Greenfield, was apprehended. It took four officers to subdue him.

Spring riots are an annual fixture at the University. In past years, however, they have grown in severity, at one point almost forcing state police aid on the campus police.

J IS FOR JAZZ

Salute To Mike Conners

AT THIS TIME OF THE YEAR, WE TURN OUR ATTENTIONS to the disc-jockeys in the area who feature JAZZ. Today we salute Mike Connors of Radio Station WACE in Chicopee. His "JAZZ '64" program may be heard on Saturdays from 1-4:30 followed by "JAZZ Con Sabor Latino" (JAZZ with a Latin flavor) from 4:30-5 p.m.

We had the pleasure of speaking with Mike the other day. Our discussion consisted mostly in the promotion of local live talent. Many people from this campus have asked us just what clubs around this area feature JAZZ. Such places that we frequent include in Springfield "JINXY'S" and the "FAMOUS DOOR." In Chicopee the SCHINE INN is worth a vist for the cooler sounds.

Mike told us that the only way a local performer can make good is to leave this area and promote his efforts elsewhere. Such examples of local people who "made good" include Springfield's Phil Woods and Sal Salvador. This is one of those situations that only time and suport from local people can correct.

MIKE IS NOW BUSILY PROMOTING DIZZY GILLESPIE FOR PRESIDENT. This promotion, originated in California, is now in full swing. If you'd like to join in, bumper stickers and campaign buttons are available if you drop Mike a line at WACE. Also Sweatshirts may be purchased at Ronnie Drumm's House of Music in West Springfield.

Hartford, Connecticut has its own Hartford Jazz Society dedicated to the promotion of JAZZ in that area. Mike Connors is also interested in promoting a similar type of club in this area. If you have any ideas at all, why not drop Mike a line. Again, Hats off to Mike Connors.

SOUNDS IN THE NIGHT: At TRASE'S in Springfield, Miss Georgette Labreche is packing the crowds in. Not only a good singer but a very pretty girl, Georgette may be seen nightly.

An album on Verve is the hottest moving album in the country. "Getz-Gilberto featuring Antonio Carlos Jobim" is one of those latin type albums with the guest appearance of the writer of "Desafinado" (Slightly out of Tune). A very fine collection, the album has one song which is destined to be a hit, perhaps as a single "The Girl From Ipanama."

REZ SAYS: Two full time Jazz stations are now in operation in California. One often wonders what is happening to this part of the country in the way of radio programming.

"JAZZ Casual," a television program, may be seen on Channel 24, WEDH Trinity College's Educational Television outlet.

Also, appearing at Newport July 2-5 will be Errol Garner (who usually tours Europe in the summer), Sarah Vaughn, and Count Basie.

Marlena Shaw (a local girl we spotlighted last week) is appearing at Basin St. East in Boston.

Gerald Wilson's album "Portrait's" on Pacific Jazz gets five stars. The album is a real swinger.

Watch for the release of a new album by the Tony Chris Trio. These fellows from Easthampton teature Tony Chris on piano, John Hunt on drums, and Jimmy Cottle on bass. Mike Connors has written the liner notes for the album.

Within the next few weeks we'll be reporting the opening of a JAZZ Workshop in Easthampton. Be sure to Watch for it.

ART EXHIBIT

by AXEL

Listening to one of our art professors make comments on the student art exhibit (now in Bartlett and Memorial Halls) there seemed some major hoax in process. The hoax was not in what the prof had to say, but in what those who did not hear him generally believe.

The signs say "Student Art Exhibit" and indeed much of what is on exhibit is "art". However, certain corners of that conglomeration of student attempts are really only lessons in design, or fulfillments of art-class assignments that demanded special effects. Some of those wroks are not finished (by the profs own admission); some do not even fully achieve the intended effects.

Now, good design may be an "art"—that's the ambiguity in the word art; but the public, viewing the busy color combinations, plaster washbowl, bird cage, etc., are generally assuming these works to be art in a classical sense. Without anyone present to explain, people might try to equate these experiments and exercises with a Mona Lisa!

However, they are not to be thought of in that sense: so the professor seemed to say. So the case must be, or we can only bewail a nadir of art.

It seems wrong to include this different category (learner's exercises) in an art exhibit. Unless one of the staff of the art department is willing to stand in the lobby and explain the intents and specific assignments that resulted in the works on exhibit, presenting them to the public as art will do no good. The public remains upset and misled, and the art department gets a bad name—at least in my handbook to living-room art!

From Where I Sit

BOLD STEP

AL McNAMARA

The University has taken a bold, foreward step in admissions by its favorable response to a plan which would allow high school students on the "waiting list" for admittance to enter this summer.

The plan is, of course, a portent of things to come. The vast number of rejections sent by the University to qualified high school students points out a definite need for a fuller utilization of the space available here at the University. This proposed plan would increase the freshman class by ten percent.

There can be no argument to the fact that many high school students will not be able to matriculate at any university because of lack of space. There can also be no arguing the fact that it is up to the Commonwealth to provide for these, its citizens. As the largest state institution of higher learning, the burden lies heavily upon us. This plan is perhaps the most intelligent and practical step toward alleviating a pressing problem.

We recognize that there will be those who will object to this plan on one ground or another. All that we can say to them is "explain your position to those students who have been rejected."

This plan opens the discussion of year round operation again. We feel that institution of a system of year round operation is necessary if we are to fulfill our obligation to the citizens of the Commonwealth. Education is too precious a commodity, to leave a vast potential for education, i.e. this University, virtually idle for three months of the year.

We do not here advocate any particular plan. Our knowledge of these and their efforts is too minimal to pass on any one. We merely wish to point out that if the vast number of applications stay the same, or increases, more and more students will be turned away.

Again we wish to commend those responsible for this plan. Their foresight will be blessed in hundreds of homes across the Commonwealth.

Concerning the Time letter on Oswald: We note the apparent assumption of Oswald's guilt—"and how his slayer was in turn murdered" (par. #2)—that seems exactly the biased attitude to which Mr. Lane objects. We wonder if Isabel Kouri will handle Time's report. — Ed.

Time and Mark Lane

To the Editor:

Enclosed is a letter which I received from Time magazine concerning an article which appeared in the Collegian in March about Jack Lane's claim that the case against Oswald is not conclusive.

If TIME's editors felt that Attorney Mark Lane had anything useful to contribute to the investigation into President Kennedy's assassination, you may be sure that we would give considerable space to his arguments. The only ax we have to grind in this affair is to present an accurate, informative account of what happened on the weekend of November 22. For this account, we believe we are wiser to rely on information originating with the members of the Warren Commission than with Mr. Lane. Chief Justice Warren and the members of the Commission—men of the highest integrity and reputation—are conducting as comprehensive an investigation of the crime as possible. Lengthy reports of several Federal agencies, most prominently the FBI, Secret Service, Immigration and Naturalization Service, are being reviewed. The FBI report alone is divided into five volumes. Every detail of these reports is being evaluated. Insofar as it is possible, the Commission is seeking to disprove the rumors that have developed about those three historic days.

When it has amassed all the information that it can possibly pull together, the Commission will write its report, which will be the most factual account possible of how President Kennedy was assassinated and how his slayer was, in turn, murdered. The report should comprise an impeccable review for future historians and should serve to remove many of the doubts that have been cast over official versions of the assassination by imaginative amateur criminologists. Commission member John McCloy has said: "Our only client is the truth."

We eagerly await the official report of the Commission, and in the meantime, we are trying to keep readers informed on pertinent developments from its inquiries. The February 14 cover story about Marina Oswald, for example, was part of this planned coverage. In it and in previous stories about the assassination, we have attempted to pull together the known facts and make some sense out of them. There has indeed been conflicting information published about aspects of the crime, and where intelligent explanations are available, we have passed them along to readers. Of one thing we are sure, however: that neither Attorney General Kennedy, the President's own brother, President Johnson, nor Chief Justice Warren would be parties to any conspiracy to misrepresent the facts of the case.

Thank you for the interest in TIME's reporting which your letter indicated.

Cordially yours,
Isabel Kouri

Professor Comments

To the Editor:

Mr. Lane has come and gone, and I must confess that I do not know why Oswald took a bus in the wrong direction, why the stripper hanged herself in the jail, or why the Luce publications persisted in switching guns in their pictures. I do not know where the bullets came from or where they went, and I am unclear about what happened to Mr. Click.

I do know, however, that the Warren Commission is not dominated by rightwingers, and I cannot conceive of circumstances in which the commission would conceal its findings for reasons of state. Congressman Ford of Michigan, characterized by Mr. Lane as a "Goldwater Republican," is not a Birchite fanatic but one of the most respected and intelligent Republicans in the House. Congressman Boggs of Louisiana, dismissed by Mr. Lane as "another Southern Democrat,' is, except on racial questions, ideologically indistinguishable from Hubert Humphrey. John McCloy is one of those Established Republicans who adorn Democratic Administrations, a class of people without whose services the Republic would long ago have collapsed. Allen Dulles is an honorable public servant whose talents at concealment were fully exhibited in the U-2 and Bay of Pigs affairs. Senator Russell has been accused of narrowmindedness but never, so far as I know, of knavery. Nothing need be said about Senator Cooper or Chief Justice Warren. The Commission is, in short, a distinguished group, the predictable attacks upon it by the French left notwithstanding. If the findings of Mr. Lane and Mr. Warren should conflict, the temptation to accept those of the latter would be strong.

Critique Criticized

To the Editor:

Critique, a student publication, purports to provide useful information and guidance to the students of the University of Massachusetts concerning the content of courses and the ability of instructors to competently communicate the content to their classes. The standards applied in assessing the quality of courses and teachers are roughly those used by Madison Avenue in discriminating between the Boston Red Sox and the New York Metropolitan Opera Company for sponsorship by a beer company on television. The students of the classes were asked to rate the professors, the results of the polls were tabulated, and writers who were unacquainted with either the courses or the professors interpreted the statistics for Critique's readers.

The only difference between the Madison Avenue tabulators of audience response to the content of television program and their Critique colleagues who measured student reaction to courses and professors is that the men in the "grey flannel suits" shake their heads in resigned despair when they find that the public prefers the Beverly Hillbillies to Hamlet; whereas the writers of Critique faithfully recite with the earnest guilelessness of the innocent and the simple minded an absurd attack by students on David Truman's classic work, The Governmental Process, along with peans of praise by other students for a course which is a source of embarrassment to the faculty and administration of the University. Madison Avenue men and the management of the television networks defensively rationalize their attention to Nielsen ratings in terms of necessities imposed by business competition and counter with the claim that they seek to elevate the tastes of the public by frequently offering relatively unpopular cultural fare. The editors of Critique, however, take their audience seriously. The reason for the difference is that many of the network officials and Madison Avenue workers are educated men and women.

A defense of Critique might include reference to a similar publication at Harvard, as though traffic jams in Harvard Square justified congestion in Amherst. More seriously, an important difference between the Harvard publication and the University of Massachusetts counterpart rests in situational distinctions. When Dean Price's course at Harvard was criticized it was akin to juvenile halloween pranksters upsetting a bird bath in the back yard of a bilious billionaire.

In addition, Harvard has lines of communication which compete with the Critique kind of gossip.[1] For example, the classes of one of Harvard's great teachers were once described as "dry". They were dry. They were also excellent. And they were jammed with students.

The question to be asked at the University of Massachusetts is "what should a good education consist of?" And not "what is popular with a majority of the students?"

John H. Fenton
Commonwealth Professor
Government Department

[1]It should be noted that the residential plan scheduled to take effect next year is designed, in part, to facilitate the development of just such competing lines of communication at the University of Massachusetts.

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

The Tri Sigmas are very proud of Dottie Stoklosa who has had a very exciting week with her election as Secretary of the Class of '65, and with her selection for Mortar Board. Our warmest congratulations also go to Donna Arsenault who was tapped for Scrolls, and Libba Johnson who was announced as one of the recipients of the Campus Chest scholarship.

Congratulations are also in order for: Laurie Niemyski who was chosen as an exchange student to New Mexico next semester; Judy Hripak who was elected as Recording Secretary of the Art Club; and Carolyn Hulton who is the new Corresponding Secretary of the Political Science Club. The Tri Sigmas also wish to congratulate Chris Olsen who was chosen as Senior State Representative from the Home Economics Club; and Beth Eastman who was chosen as the freshman delegate to represent the Home Ec Department in Michigan this summer.

Two Sundays ago, the Tri Sigmas celebrated Founders' Day along with 100 parents who were invited for the occasion. After the program and skit, the parents and sisters enjoyed a delicious buffet.

The sisters of Tri Sigma would like to thank TKE for the exchange on Thursday, April 23. Everyone had an enjoyable evening.

The Tri Sigmas are very happy to welcome three new sisters who were initiated last Wednesday night. They are: Gail Drummond, '66; Karolyn Forsburg, '66; and Marilyn Miller, '67. After initiation, the sisters were surprised at the house by a pledge raid. We are still trying to find our Gordon Linen!

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

As the year draws to a close and finals approach, the sisters of Kappa Kappa Gamma have an eventful year to look back on. As we were still in the process of getting settled in our new house, Pledge Formal time was upon us. Honored at a dinner dance at the Wycoff Country Club were:

These pledges entertained us with their song, "I Want to Wear a Key." The seniors, however, stole the show with their hilarious rendition of "The Kappa H'lton." The next day we entertained our dates at a buffet which ended a wonderful weekend.

Initiation was preceded by Inspiration Week which included blue and blue dinner, big and little sister dinner, poems 'n paddles, and, of course, l'heure de fleur de lis. The new Kappas were the guests of honor at the Initiation Banquet held at Wiggin's Tavern. Pledge Trainer Bernadette Menz presented the Scholarship award to Karen Harrison and the Outstanding Pledge award to Roxanne Gile, president of the pledge class.

SIGMA KAPPA

We would all like to welcome our new pledge, Jan Ferry, who was pledged Monday, April 13.

Congratulations to the following sisters who were honored at Student Leaders' Night: Mortar Board, Mary Pat Carrol; Scrolls, Phyllis McAteer, Mary Carol Lundberg, and Barbara Ennis; Distinguished Service Award, Jane Lunney; Scholarship, Carol Belonis.

After busily scrubbing the house from the basement to the attic, the sisters entertained their parents on Parents' Day with a buffet, skit, and tours of the house.

The sisters spent a very pleasant evening last Monday with our dinner guests, Mr. and Mrs. Boicourt. A professor of Horticulture, Mr. Boicourt gave a demonstration of floral arrangement.

We would like to thank the brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, and Alpha Epsilon Pi for our recent exchange suppers.

Rita Crosby and Dick Littlefield as co-editors of Critique for the coming year, have put out a desperate call for help with the mammoth undertaking of producing a magazine four times the size of this semester's publication.

They have estimated that at least 150 students, in addition to their present staff, will be needed to assist in questionnaire administration.

There will be two short meetings for sign-up, briefing and choosing of courses. Those who can help have been asked to attend one of the two meetings scheduled for: Saturday, May 9, at 12 noon, and Sunday, May 10, at 6:30 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union. ed out that "it is traditional for aspirants to political offices to make promises, and tonight is no exception. I would like to draw the attention of the body to the manner in which I have improved the public relations of the Senate with the Student body and the administration." He then clarified what he would see as the goals of Student Government.

Senators Bill Landis and Phil Howard then spoke to support their nominations and were followed by Senators Scott Freedland, Dave Mathieson, and Bill Mahoney for Michael, and Senators Maureen Flanagan, and Elwin McNamara for Boyd. After two attempts to close debate, the vote was taken. George Michael was elected President of the Student Senate by a close vote of 27-25.

After nominations were made for the office of Vice President, Tom Kiernan, in his acceptance speech, first explained why he did not run for the office of President of the Senate and then set forth his qualifications for the office of Vice President. After the acceptance speeches of Senators Wendy Hall and Bill Landis, the floor was opened to general debate. Senator Jim Allen, speaking for Landis, accused Kiernan of political bargaining which in his opinion was all right except for Senator Allen's continued allegations that Kiernan had threatened to lambast candidates Boyd (president) and Crooker (Secretary) if Landis ran.

Senator George Michael accepts Presidency: "All I can say is thanks."

Due to the number of candidates, three ballots were necessary to decide the Vice President. On the first ballot Hall came three short of the necessary majority to win. After a second ballot Tom Kiernan was eliminated since he received only eight votes to Wendy Hall's twenty-two and Bill Landis' twenty. On the third and final ballot, it was Landis (26) and Hall (24) with one abstention.

After the Vice Presidential election, that for Secretary was anticlimatic. Senator Wendy Hall was renominated for the office of Secretary, but declined the offer. Judy Crooker and Toby Kaplan were nominated with Crooker winning 25-23.

As in the Vice Presidential election the contest for Treasurer between incumbent Ross Jones and Joe Piecich fell into a discussion of personalities. An attempt to close debate was defeated, but after several more accusations debate was closed.

The election culminated with incumbent treasurer Ross Jones who lost to Senator Joe Piecuch 25-24 with one abstention.

Before the meeting was adjourned, the entire Senate rose as one to applaud the outgoing officers, in addition to the praise already heaped on each individually.

Redmen Scrimmage Indicates Power

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts football team gave some 500 fans and coaches in an indication of what they can expect to see come next season. Coach Fusia brought spring practice to an end as he broke his charges down into the Reds and the Whites and ran through a game condition scrimmage. The Red triumphed 33-0.

JOHN SCHROEDER emerged as the big star for the Reds as he completed 10 of 12 passes. The team of Reds consisted of the lettermen from last season and the top prospects for the coming season.

The defense of the Reds also was something to see. The Whites pushed the ball across the midfield stripe early in the game, but that was the only time.

The Reds scored in the first period with Phil DeRose taking a 12 yard pass from Schroeder. Big John also set up the TD with passes to Ken Palm and Bob Meers.

The Whites then managed to shut off the more experienced Reds until the third quarter when hard driving Bob Ellis went over on a seven yard burst. The score going into the last period was 13-0 as Terry Swanson converted the PAT after the second touchdown.

In the fourth quarter it was all Reds as they pushed over three touchdowns. Ken Palm came up with two of these as on 3 and 1 yard plunges. Swanson coverted on another PAT and the margin was 26-0.

DON DURKIN up from the frosh and playing on the Reds got the last TD as the team raced the clock. He scored from 14 yards out just before the end of the contest. Steve Trbovich added the point.

The game was played as part of the annual clinic for schoolboy coaches in Massachusetts. Some 146 of them sat in the day long proceedings.

the inning with a long triple to left. Rhicard struck out, but Bill Kolodziey hit a fly to right. Harris had moved over to right and made the catch. His throw to Karl Kamena was wide, but Slomback missed the bag and Kamena tagged him out.

THE UMASS RECORD fell to 5-4 on the year. AIC has a 9-6 mark while Davis has racked off five wins in a row. An unusual facet of the AIC team is that many of the players are from Chicopee, the school that won the state title for two years in a row. Davis, Porowski, Slomback, Suchecki, and Lussier are just a few from that school.

THE REDMEN now travel to Orono for a two day series with Maine. A sweep is almost a necessity if the club is to remain in conference contention. On Wednesday, UNH dropped their second game of the year to Rhode Island to fall out of first place tie with Maine.

Coach Lorden plans to use Rod Corey (2-2) against the Black Bears. Corey has dropped two conference games despite the fact he has allowed just one earned run. He is carrying a sparkling 0.28 ERA for the year. The other pitcher will be either Johnson or Ross Piken. The latter was supposed to hurl against the Aces, but was hit in the foot during batting practice and was unable to pitch. Lorden could always use ace reliever Jim Ritchie in a starting role if necessary.

The most recent statistics show that Neil Harris with a .333 batting average leads the regulars. John Awdycki is continuing to hit well as he has raised his average to .297 after an early season slump.

In Seventh Victory Of Season Golf Team Sweeps Over Jeffs

The varsity golf team beat rival Amherst College at the Orchards C.C., South Hadley. The score was 5-2, and was the Redmen's 7th victory against 2 defeats for the season.

The matches played to date have been plagued by wet, cold, and rainy conditions. Tuesday's match was played in the fine weather we are presently enjoying; with the temperature soaring, the linksmen's scores dropped. Medalist was sophomore Dave Wells, who fired a fine 1 over par 73, he was closely followed by Capt. George De Falco's 75, while Amherst ace Dan Boone was low for Amherst with a 75. UMass sophomore Bob McNeil won his first varsity match.

IN A PRELIMINARY MATCH, the UMass freshmen beat Amherst 5½-1½. Jim McDonald was 4 under par when he closed out his match on the 12th hole. McDonald fired a blistering 32 on his first nine.

This weekend, the Yankee Conference and the New England Intercollegiate Golf Association championships are being played in Rutland, Vermont. The winner is decided over a two day medal play. Each team sends five players and the four lowest scores are used. Making the trip for UMass are Capt. George DeFalco, Jack Donasky, Bill Glass, and sophomores Dave Wells and Howie Atkinson.

Here's the breakdown of the Amherst match.

UMass 5—Amherst 2
Frank Pluta	lost 5 and 3
Jack Donasky	won 3 and 1
George DeFalco	won 5 and 4
Bill Glass	won 3 and 1
Dave Wells	won 5 and 4
Bill O'Donnell	lost 5 and 3
Bob McNeil	won 2 and 1

scored again. In less than a minute the Redmen had notched three goals. The score was 6-3 UMass and, although Amherst scored a goal in the fourth period by Charlie Lewis, the game was beyond the Jeff's reach. The final score read UMass 6, Amherst 4.

UMASS has now beaten Amherst two years in a row. The Redmen now are 5-3 with three games to go. Saturday afternoon the last home game of the season takes place as the Middlebury Panthers visit the Redmen.

defeated the Crusaders by only 9 points, so this should be a really close meet. Brandeis is weak as a team, but it has several outstanding runners who could well decide the outcome of the meet. This will be the Redmen's last tune-up before the Yan Con Championships on May 16.

Tennis Team Seeks Conference Crown

Coach Steve Kosakowski's University of Massachusetts tennis team seeks its fifth straight Yankee Conference championship this weekend in the league tournament at Durham, New Hampshire, Friday and Saturday.

THE REDMEN have won the crown seven of the past nine years, with a second place in 1958, and no champion in 1961 due to a rain out of the championship weekend. Kosakowski stated in pre-season predictions that he felt the Redmen would be the team to beat, especially since he had a veteran team returning from last season.

Massachusetts takes a 7-1 record into the playoffs. The Redmen have topped Brandeis, 8-1, New Hampshire, 9-0, Springfield, 8-1, Fairfield, 8-1, Rhode Island, 7-2, Holy Cross, 7-2, and Tufts, 7-2. UMass lost at Connecticut, 5-4, and Kosakowski expects the Huskies to give his Redmen plenty of competition at the Championships. He also looks for trouble from much-improved Maine and Vermont teams.

CAPT. RODGER TWITCHELL (Westfield, N.J.) carries a glittering record into the tourney. Twitchell, 6'6 basketball standout, is 8-0 in singles play this Spring and 7-1 in doubles competition. Rodger has a three-year singles mark of 23-1 and is 17-4 in doubles. He has been the Yankee Conference singles champ the past two years and is definitely the key to UMass success aspirations.

Kosakowski has named his squad for the weekend to include seniors Twitchell and Dick Leete (Andover), juniors Bob Neal (Lowell), Mike Rose (Worcester), Bob Greenberg (Newton), Bill Martin (S. Dartmouth) and sophomore Roger Harper (Ware). Twitchell and Neal, Greenberg, and Martin, and Rose and Harper will probably form the doubles combinations.

Following the Conference Championships the Redmen will have a final home meet against American International College May 12 starting at 2:30 p.m.

UMass Skydivers Sweep Intercollegiate Meet

Last Saturday, the University of Massachusetts Sport Parachute Club "A" team clinched top honors in the intercollegiate Parachute Meet at Orange, Mass., by topping the second place West Point "A" team by more than a hundred points. The UMass "B" team finished a close third.

UMass' Phil Bedaw, Government '66, placed first in the individual competition, establishing himself as top intercollegiate jumper in the nation. UMass' Paul Jones, Mech. Eng. '66 took home a silver mug for the closest target landing, a mere five feet from the pin under windy conditions.

AMONG THE COLLEGES COMPETING IN THE MEET, were UConn., Harvard, Yale, University of New Brunswick, Boston University, and Northeastern.

UMass' "A" team captain, Dick Fillmore, E. E. '65, accepted the collegiate championship trophy, "The Gavin Gavel" from Parachute Club of America director, Jaques Istel, at the banquet following the victory. "The Gavin Gavel" symbol of collegiate parachuting was donated six years ago by General Gavin, former Army Chief of Staff, Pioneer in Sport Parachuting, and a director of the Parachute Club of America. Defending champion, Harvard, released the Gavel to UMass who must win three consecutive annual meets in order to retain permanent possession.

UMass Shutout By Aces, 5-0; Visit League Leader, Maine

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts dropped a 5-0 decision to the American International College baseball team earlier this week at the Alumni Field. Bill Davis went the route for the Aces allowing the Redmen just four scattered hits. He had good fielding support as well as two home runs to back up his fine hurling.

MIKE JOHNSON went the route for the Redmen giving up seven hits, but only one after the fifth inning. The Aces did all of their damage in the third and fourth inning.

IN THE THIRD, Johnson walked Al Lussier. After getting Davis out, Johnson went to work on lead-off man Jack Slomback. Slomback got the pitch he wanted and slammed the ball far over the head of center fielder Neil Harris. The ball rolled all the way to the trees as Slomback easily made it home. The ball was on of the best seen at Alumni Field for many years. Terry Rhicard followed Slomback to the plate and hit the ball on a line to left center and Harris moved to cut it off. The ball however caught the lip of the track and skipped past Harris on its way toward center field. By the time Al Nordberg caught up with the ball it was too late, and the score was 3-0.

CAPT. JOHN AWDYCKI has continued his slugfest in raising his batting average to .297.

IN THE FOURTH, the AIC football quarterback, Dick Kolodziey singled. Dick Klett followed with a single, and both runners were moved along on Walt Porowski's sacrifice bunt. Davis then popped a single to right to get the two men home, and that was all the scoring in the game.

Mass had Bill Cleary coming up with two of the four hits. He singled in the third and again in the eighth. Dennis Della Piana opened the fifth with a Texas League double, but stayed right there as Davis got the next three men. The only other hit for the Redmen was an infield single by John Awdycki. He got to third on an error and a wild pitch, but Harris flied out to center to end the inning.

THE ONLY OTHER THREAT in the game came in the AIC seventh, when Slomback opened

UM Rifleman Chosen All-American

DANIEL J. SULLIVAN of the class of '65 has recently been named a member of the ten man National Rifle Association college All-American team. Sullivan is a student in the school of Engineering here at UMass. The men chosen were picked on many different factors.

40¢ DIFFERENT SCHOOLS are in the association, and these ten represent the Elite of the pistol shooters. Sullivan was the team high scorer for the year and has won a dozen individual trophies including the pistol he uses.

Sullivan is the second All-American for UMass pistol shooters with Roy Fritz being the first in 1960.

Redmen Down Amherst Topple Rivals, 6-4

by MORRIS SHUBOW

Charlie Glew who was out all last year with an injury sparked the Redmen lacrosse team to a well-deserved 6-4 victory over arch-rival Amherst College, Wednesday afternoon at Amherst. Glew's three goals, two within 11 seconds, give him 11 for the season and goal-scoring leadership on the team. It was a hard fought contest with both teams playing aggressively in this big game.

CHARLIE GLEW put the varsity ahead at 5:28 of the first period with Co-Capt. Steve Harrington receiving another of his many assists. Amherst came back at 14:07 with a goal by Co-Capt. Rick Stauffer; but 22 seconds later Dick Brown set up Gordie Webb for a UMass goal, and a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period. In the second period the Jeff's star Co-Capt. Howie Jones scored at 10:45 to tie the game at 2-2 at halftime.

by GENE COLBURN

The varsity track team won 96-48 Tuesday night to up its record to 4-1. Bob Larson was the only record breaker as he ran the 440 yard intermediate hurdles in 57.4 to establish a new UMass and meet record. Bob never ran the hurdles prior to this year, and his constant improvement has reflected his hard work. Senior John Harrington also ran a fine race, as he took a second with a time of 57.5. John also won the 120 yard high hurdles (17.4).

Without the services of co-captain Bob Brouillet in the mile and 2 mile, Jim Wrynn moved up from the 880 to replace him, and did a very fine job. Jim won the mile (4:25.7), and took a second in the 2 mile. Tom Panke took a second for the Redmen in the mile. Craig Erickson ran his fastest 440 this year as he just missed catching Depaolo of UConn. Depaolo's time was 51.0 and Erickson was 51.2. Doug Sloane took third. Bob Molvar, Bob Pendelton, and Don Campfield swept the 880.

SOPHOMORE JOHN MEDERIOS won the broadjump (21'¼"), high jump (5'8"), triple jump (40'4¾") and took second in the 220. Sophomore Phil Hall scored his first double of the year as he won both the 100 (:10.4) and the 22.4). Dave Sadowsky took second in the pole vault with a leap of 12'6", as well as second in the broadjump.

DAN CONNORS got off his best throw of the year as he threw the javelin 178'7". Dick Delve took a second. Doug Renwick took second in both the shot-up and the discus. Gus Anagostopolus took second in the hammer and second in the triple jump. The mile relay quartet of Basil Robinson, Bob Molvar, Doug Sloane, and Craig Erickson wrapped things up for UMass as they won the race with a good time of 3:32.7.

THE FINAL MEET for the Redmen will be this coming Tuesday when they will host Brandeis and Holy Cross in a tri-meet at Alumni Field. Last year UMass

Population Explosion Huxley Lecture Topic

Sigma Xi in conjunction with Distinguished Visitors Program will sponsor Sir Julian Huxley this Thursday evening, May 14, at 8:00. His topic will be "The Population Explosion."

Sir Julian Huxley, one of the 20th century's greatest scientists and philosophers, scholar and author, served as Director General of UNESCO for three years.

Sir Julian Huxley was born in London in 1887, the second son of the late Leonard Huxley, grandson of T. H. Huxley, grand nephew of Matthew Arnold, and brother of Aldous Huxley. He was educated at Eton and Oxford where he won the Newdigate prize for verse. He has taught and lectured widely in both England and the United States.

After serving in Italy during the first World War, Mr. Huxley was a Fellow of New College, Oxford, until 1925 when he was appointed Professor of Zoology in King's College at the University of London. From 1935 to 1942 Mr. Huxley held the post of secretary of the Zoological Society of London. In 1946 he was made Executive Director of the Preparatory Commission of UNESCO and from November of that year until 1948 he was Director General of UNESCO itself.

Mr. Huxley has lectured and held important positions in scientific fields in many parts of the world including the United States. He makes his home in London, is married and has two sons. He has written many articles, scientific papers, film commentaries, and has appeared on radio and television. In 1953 he was awarded the UNESCO Kalinga Prize for Distinguished Popular Writing in Science.

Among Sir Julian Huxley's many books are "Knowledge, Morality and Destiny," "Man in the Modern World: An Eminent Scientist Looks at Life Today," and other distinguished volumes.

Insecure Nation Seen As Cause Of US Contradictions

"The United States as a nation bearing nuclear arms has a contradiction at its source." These were the words of Professor Charles Barker, Head of the History Department at Johns Hopkins University, given in a lecture entitled "The Forked Road to Disarmament" last Friday afternoon. This contradiction stems from the insecurity every nation has to bear. However, he went on to say, it has never been so acute for the United States. Professor Barker went on to explain that the contradiction appears in human rights because of the burden of insecurity. Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson have all been aware of the problem and have commented on the importance of disarming.

At this point Professor Barker drew the analogy of a city—a future city of organized peace and disarmament, with only small arms for police protection. In some ways, he commented, this city is far off; yet in other ways there are some hopeful signs such as the test ban theory and the attempts at a two world organization, with the second still existing. To this city, there is a forked road, a high road and a low road. The low road is that of deterrence or keeping the balance of power, arguing about arms control, and finding inspection sights. On the low road the talk is concerned with only equilibrium and balance, not real disarmament.

The high road is that of the tender conscious. This road reflects people as William Penn, or even Ben Franklin. Today it claims men like Albert Schweitzer or Pope John. It conceives of a world federation.

Professor Barker went on to explain that the mind is not like material reality and can travel both roads at the same time. President Kennedy did this. On the one hand he urged all possibilities for disarmament, yet was able to make a stand at Cuba, against pressure.

The values of the high road are reconciliation, control of power and limitation on arms. The values on the low road are power, nationality, deterrence, sovereignty. As a result of these low values, the U.S. has developed the policy of "striking back after initial attack."

Professor Barker counseled "we should take every advantage of the high right road." However, at the same time he identifies with the insecurity that grips Americans when they think of China and other belligerants.

Professor Barker was sponsored by the History department and the only regrets of those present were that more people were not able to hear him and engage in the interesting discussion that followed.

Over 400 To Visit Campus For Honor Students' Day

Over 400 of Massachusetts' brightest high school students will visit the UMASS campus tomorrow.

The students, accompanied by their guidance counselors will participate in the University's High School Honor Students' Day.

The Day is the Adelphian sponsored portion of UMass' SCOPE project. SCOPE, or more precisely Special Committee On Promising Entrants, is attempting to attract to the University the best minds graduating each year from the states' high schools.

The students are all juniors and are being given this opportunity to view UMass before they start applying to colleges next fall.

Manny Smith, Adelphian in charge of the Day, has stated that the program is designed "to acquaint students and guidance counselors with the facilities and educational system here, and to give them an overall picture of a large growing University."

The visitors will have ample opportunity to meet with UMass students, faculty and administrators during the course of the day. Panel and group discussions along with a tour of the University are on tap.

Dr. Thomas C. Medenhall, President of Smith College and noted historian, will address those participating in the program at a luncheon in the Student Union Ballroom.

In addition to the juniors seven high school seniors have also been invited to campus. These students will be given book prizes and honored by the University as the most outstanding graduating high school students in the state.

This will be the third High School Honor Students' Day sponsored at the University and it appears that each year UMass is garnering a larger share of the cream of the crop of Massachusetts high school graduates.

Mortarboard, the Senior Women's Honorary Society, will be aiding Adelphia and the chairman of SCOPE Dr. William C. Venman in the execution of the well-planned program.

The University Concert band performed last night on the Terrace of the Student Union.

DVP Plans For Coming Year

In 1960 the Student Senate established the Distinguished Visitors Program Committee for the purpose of presenting guest speakers and other programs "in order to pursue excellence in our scholastic society."

During this past year, DVP presented Pirandillo's "Six Characters in Search of an Author" which was performed by the Circle in the Square Players. Ambassador Khan, past President of the United Nations General Assembly and William L. Shirer, author of The Rise and Fall of The Third Reich, delivered, under the auspices of DVP, addresses to a capacity-filled Ballroom.

In conjunction with the Fine Arts Festival, DVP presented a poetry workshop featuring Robbert Bly, Robert Fitzgerald, and Stephen Spender. Shakespearean scholar, Dr. G. B. Harrison introduced this year's Fine Arts Festival. On May 14 Sir Julian Huxley will speak on population explosion.

Plans for a Symposium on Poverty for next year are already under way. In this connection, the Program Sub-committee is working with Dr. Schumer of the Psychology Department, also a member of the committee.

DVP APPLICANTS

Distinguished Visitors Program committee membership applicants for all classes will be available in the RSO office Monday, May 11, through Friday, May 15. There will be a coffee hour for all applicants on Sunday, May 17, at 7:00 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

The Italian Club will meet Tuesday, May 12 in Mem. Hall at 7 p.m.

Lo-Lo Luau Decoration committee meeting Tuesday 7:30 p.m. at Nantucket Room Student Union.

Hillel Coffee Hour

On Tuesday, May 12, Mrs. Ted Slovin, Hillel secretary, will be the honored "guest of the week" at the Hillel coffee hour. As Mrs. Slovin will be leaving campus at the end of semester, all students who have come to know Barbara are encouraged to drop in to say hello and to quench their thirst with a cup of "Hillel" coffee. The coffee hour is held from 2:30 till 4 o'clock in the Worcester room. All students are invited.

On Thursday, May 14, 1964, there will be a class meeting in the S. U. Ballroom at 11:15 A.M. This is a very important meeting and should not be missed.

Student Wins Poetry Award

Mary Ann Radner of Wellesley College is the winner of the $100 Irene Glascock Memorial poetry contest at Mount Holyoke College. William Hunt of Wesleyan University won the second prize of $25.

Judging at the contest, which was held on April 17, were Robert Fitzgerald and Ralph Humphries, both well known poets and translators, and Mrs. Rosamund Field, who teaches at Tufts University. Mr. Fitzgerald holds the Florence Purington Visiting Professorship at Mt. Holyoke this semester, and Mr. Humphries teaches in the English department at Amherst college. The other four contestants this year came from Princeton, Connecticut College for Women, the University of Massachusetts and Mount Holyoke.

Commenting on Miss Radner's poetry, the judges praised its "genuineness of poetic insight, consistency of idiom and lyric quality." They particularly praised her poem, "A Dead Bird as the Sign of Summer's End," which ends:

Heaven gave light, rain, air and from the earth
Grew Darkness, heavy grass and insect-thunder;
Night spread out like a tree to shelter under,
These flowering gifts exceed what I am worth,
I think, aud yet these rocks,
this shattered bird
Menaced me always. How have
I not heard?

Twenty-one year old Miss Radner lives in Evanston, Ill. She has published poetry in high school and college publications. Interested in drama, she has acted in and directed several Shakespearean plays. She plans to work on the translation and adaptation of French, Latin and Italian verse and will study next year at the University of Florence, working on medieval Italian literature.

The judges noted that the self-consciousness of language in Hunt's poetry was "evidence of the potential poet." Assistant editor of the Wesleyan Literary Magazine, The Cardinal, Hunt has been awarded several poetry prizes, including a prize at Shrewsbury School, England, which he attended. Aged 20, he is married and has one child.

The contest was established in 1923 by the late Colonel and Mrs. Hugh Glascock of New York City, in memory of their daughter, who died shortly after graduation. Among well known poets who read for the prize as undergraduates are John Holmes, Kimball Flaccus, John Chamberlain, Muriel Rukeyser and Robert Lowell. The second prize is given by Prof. Emeritus Ada L. F. Snell, a former member of the Mount Holyoke English department.

Meeting Tuesday, May 12, 1964, will be in Hampden Room at 11:15 a.m.

LOLO LUAU

There will be a ticket committee meeting Monday, May 11 at 7:00 in the S.U. Bring money, unsold tickets and list of names.

Sharpshooters Practice For Future Success

The Air Force ROTC Rifle team motto, "Sharper through Sharpshooting," is faithfully adhered to by its 12 sharpshooting members. SSgt. Florian Dugay, Air Force team advisor, announced that the team is going through a "difficult period" of readjustment. Loss of the team commander has left the team without its high scorer and damaged its chances of success in the future.

Said Cadet 1/Lt. Ken Moon of his team, "Many things are important for a team to be successful; for shooting at a target 50 feet away is like trying to hit the head of a pin at a foot away." Cadet Lawrence Vandiford added that "the rifles weigh 12 lbs., and without learning the proper positions, the rifle tends to control you instead of you controlling the rifle."

Team members had only enthusiastic praise for their advisor, SSgt. Dugay. "He's very cooperative and always encourages cadets to better their shooting abilities and sense of sportsmenship."

Sgt. Dugay revealed that the team has no plans for the near future but for "practice and more practice makes for improvement," and hopes to have the team's members sharpened up for future successes.

Other team members include George Drake, Michael Greene, James Carnivale, John Bergs, Paul Winslow, Peter Johnson, Gregory Mayhew, Arthur Lipman, Richard Yourga and Fred Boyajian.

1. I've come across a fascinating fact about the population.

Do tell.

2. There are more females than males in the U.S.A.

Where are they all hiding?

3. If you really want to find out what's going on with the population you should go see The Demograph.

The who?

4. The Demograph—it's this gigantic population counter that Equitable put up at the World's Fair.

It tells you where the girls are?

5. It gives you the up-to-the-minute story of the population explosion.

I've noticed more people around lately.

6. Tells you how many babies are being born, how fast the population is growing. Stuff like that.

Can it explain how come, if there are more females than males, I have so much trouble meeting them?

New Column To Cover Area Beyond Undergraduate World

Editor's Note:

The University is made of more than undergraduates. This is a new column for and by members of the faculty, administration and graduates. Anyone interested in expressing his views, especially concerning his field of specialization, is invited to leave a message at the Collegian office or call Ext. 2550.

The wary senior may view the prospect of attending graduate school with some reservations. After four years of higher education it's time for a rest. However, graduate school does have its advantages, even if it only avoids the immediate problem of getting a job and going to work.

For those who may worry about where the next meal is coming from, a unique form of financial support is generally available to the graduate student who has done well in his undergraduate work,—science majors in particular. A teaching assistantship offers a monthly salary, plus tuition and fees, for instructing undergraduate classes or laboratories. The salaries are usually not generous enough to purchase a new '64 Sting Ray, but are sufficient to keep one financially solvent.

Academically, the graduate student may find less pressure than he had as an undergraduate, at least as far as volume of coursework is concerned. Classroom competition is keener, so a little more effort is required to get that elusive "A". A "B" average is expected. Independent study and research beyond assigned classwork is encouraged, and is necessary if success is to be achieved. Here is the opportunity for original thought, and a place to put one's ideas to work. Graduate study differs significantly from the undergraduate programs in that it allows specialization in a particular area of interest. The English major need not worry about meeting a science requirement, or the chemist about 18th century English literature. (A relief to both!)

With the possible exception of a few completely dedicated souls, the average graduate student engages in campus social activities as far as the time and/or finances permit—limitations familiar to all students. Students are permitted to live off-campus, and this is practically a new dimension of freedom to those accustomed to dormitory life with its accompanying rules and restrictions. Perhaps it is really this increased sense of freedom and independence, both academic and social, that sets graduate school apart from undergraduate life.

UMies Travel To Peru For Project

by LORNA SASS

Last week Peter Goodman and I were invited to Putney, Vermont for an orientation session of "Peru 64", the World University Service project supported this year partially by UMass Campus Chest funds. Besides feeling the thrill of being surrounded by Robert Frost country, we were both instilled with tremendous excitement by the people we met, the plans we helped to form, and the proximity of our fabulous adventure.

I was very impressed with the World University Service which states, "Because we believe in the inherent worth and human dignity of all men, we are concerned that opportunities be made available for the full development of all members of the University community." The project we are participating in is involved with building a student cafeteria at the University of Huamanga in Ayacucho, Peru.

Ayacucho, a town of about 40,000, is situated in a remote region high in the Andes Mountains. Up to very recently it has been in such a stupor of backwardness that the University was closed for 73 years (1886-1959). In the area, seven out of ten babies die, the average life expectancy is 30 years old and the average wage is ten cents a day! It is precisely to check this horrible standard of living that the University has been reopened.

A word on the students—nearly all come from Indian or "mestizo" towns of from 2,000 to 10,000 persons and from families that have been impoverished for generations. It is not at all uncommon for six or more students to live together in a room hardly fit for one or two. Forty percent live in dwellings with no hygienic facilities and nine out of ten live without electric lights. Only 30% get vegetables daily and only 10% have at least one glass of milk every day. It is therefore no surprise that two-thirds of the student body are chronically undernourished!

Well, I'm trying to prepare myself to see some pretty "ugly" sights this summer but I've been exposed to so little poverty that I hardly know where to begin. Needless to say, it's very important that we're very well informed about our own country as well as about Peru. We'll be living in the dormitories on campus where there are supposed to be rather large and inquisitive left wing, communist-oriented groups. Students of Latin America are generally much more aware of and involved in the politics of their country than Americans. We'll have to be on our toes!

Although the guys of the project will definitely be doing construction work on the cafeteria, it's not certain the girls will. Peruvian society does dictate that women shall not wear slacks. As you can imagine, it would be pretty sexy but pretty inefficient to climb a ladder in a skirt. Well, I'll be writing letters back to the Collegian during the summer, so I'll let you know how that one works out. Truthfully, right now I'm a little more concerned with another matter. Since diseases aren't too discriminating, I've been advised to make some trips to the infirmary. Ain't that a shot in the arm? Yup!

SEVEN DAYS IN MAY

by OLEH PAWLUK

A miniature crisis will envelop the campus during seven days in May and the first day in June. The atmosphere will become humid, stifling, and tense. Shaven faces and sport shirts will make way for bristly beards and dirty sweatshirts. Sale of No-Doz pills and cigarettes will increase triplefold. The area around the campus pond will no longer be filled with embracing couples. The library will become swamped with dreary-eyed students oblivious to everything but books. Lights in dormitories, fraternities, and sororities will burn into the early hours of the morning. Police cars will cruise the campus to make certain that pent-up emotions will not trigger off a full-scale riot. The reason for all this restlessness and anxiety will be those harbingers of trouble—Final Exams.

The depressing part of the whole matter is that such a marked disruption of University life occurs every semester. What is even more depressing is that no significant changes have been made in the final exam system. Many instructors over-rate the final exam, making it constitute as much as 50% of the total semester grade. Such an overemphasis on the final seems unfair, for in a time span of less than two hours a student can ruin the good scholastic standing he has maintained in a course throughout the semester.

However, professors have a hackneyed reply to this problem. They maintain that if a student has been doing the required work all along, he can't possibly do poorly on the final exam. Many instructors even go so far as to say that students should not "cram" for the final. Unfortunately, if the average student on campus were to adhere to this unrealistic advice, UMass would soon develop the highest flunk-out rate in the country.

The fact remains that the majority of final exams are not geared so as to allow the student to integrate what he has learned throughout the semester. Rather, the demand is for facts, facts, facts. On rare occasions instructors will insert questions in which the student is to give his own viewpoint supported by facts. Of course, if the so called "personal viewpoint" doesn't coincide with that of the professor or with the material printed in the textbook, the student receives a "personal F" for his "personal viewpoint."

In reality, what is demanded of the student on a final is to wrap up the entire course in a nice bundle of factual statements which are to be written down in one or two bluebooks. The result is that the student memorizes the material, regurgitates it on the final, and a week later, forgets it.

It would be much more beneficial to the student, if in place of a final exam, he had to submit a lengthy term paper which he had been allowed to work on all semester. Such a paper would enable the student to combine his own reasoning with the material presented in the text or lecture. Of course, in certain science, math, or language courses this plan would not be feasible. In such courses the final could simply be regarded as a third hour exam. There are a few courses on campus now which operate under this system, including Educational Psychology. Moreover, if a student has been doing A or B work throughout the semester, he deserves to be excused from taking a final examination. A few benevolent instructors abide by this policy, but the majority balk at making exceptions for outstanding students.

It is high time for the faculty and administration to answer the student May-Call and re-evaluate the existing final exam system. The fact that the suggestions stated above are now successfully incorporated into the system at many colleges warrants their introduction to this university.

SHADOW HOVERS OVER VIETNAM

by KEN FEINBERG

The recent crash of an American transport plane in Vietnam has raised the death toll of American "consultive personnel" to 277 and has further personified the need for a United States policy shift in Asia. Washington continues to stress the fact that we are fighting a "defensive war" in Southeast Asia, but this present policy is both detrimental to the best interests of our nation and South Vietnam as well. The communists fail to distinguish between "consultive personnel" and Vietnamese soldiers.

The United States must end its policy of limited aid to Vietnam and estabish a course of action in one of two directions. The first plan is frowned upon by a majority of the American people; withdraw United States aid to the impoverished country and neutralize Asia, with French, Chinese and possibly British consultants acting as the arbitrary body. The argument runs, that American withdrawal means a defeatist attitude and certain victory for the subversive Chinese communists. However, what is to prevent immediate aid from the arbitrating body if such Communist tactics are initiated?

The second line of action has much more favorable support here. Take the war to the enemy in North Vietnam. Strike at strategic installations in communist controlled areas by inceasing United States military aid by means of soldiers and military equipment. End the fallacy of fighting a "defensive war" in which "defense" has become the rule. No longer does Defense Secretary MacNamara promise victory by 1965. There can be no victory until Washington analyzes its position. One can "feel" a shadow, as yet indiscernible, of defeat. A policy change is required.

Frats—Cultural Versus Social

by DICK SOBLE

There appear to be two diverse schools of thought in regard to the survival of fraternities at the University. The first, adhered to by the majority of independents and a surprising number of fraternity men, feels that the role of the fraternity is slowly receding. The second, supported mostly by fraternity men, feels that the present status of fraternity is an adequate one. It is true that there are many psychological reasons for the independent being anti-fraternity which would cause him to be associated with the former school of thought; however, my aim is not to analyse these reasons, but to offer some constructive criticism of the present day fraternity system on campus. For it is my belief that fraternities should and can play a positive role in the cultural and educational aspects of University life.

The concept of fraternity embodies a unique way of life for its members. It enables men to live in an environment set up by themselves and not imposed on them by an impersonal source. It enables them to develop firm association within their group more easily. Through these associations, the men are able to obtain a unique cultural experience that is carried over to their outside environment. These, in general, are my criteria of the ideal fraternity. How do fraternities on this campus measure up to them?

Through the rushing and selection procedure, the fraternities are able to choose the men with whom they wish to be associated. Their inability to accept a larger proportion of the student population is a physical rather than a moral deficiency. By living in close quarters with people, one is able to share the many experiences of others. Through these experiences he gains a deeper insight into human nature, and is better suited to deal with society as a whole. It is in this area that I feel the fraternity system is lacking.

There are several ideas of my own and others that were suggested to me that might help in this respect:

1. Instead of having so many exchanges with the sororities, have fraternity exchanges. This is an excellent way to meet the brothers of other houses.

2. Institute a Distinguished Visitors Program whereby people of interest either at the University or in Amherst can become better acquainted with fraternities. I would also suggest that invitations be extended to other fraternities as well as the dormitories. The purpose here being twofold: to enable students to benefit from the informal discussion, and to give them a chance to see the fraternity in another light.

3. The donation of 500 dollars to the J.F.K. memorial fund was a fine gesture by the I.F.C., but think how much more it would have meant if a proportion of each brotherhood had solicited the funds from contributors. The sacrifice in time spent canvassing Amherst for donations would have been very satisfying to the students, and the gift would have meant more due to the time and energy in collecting the money.

4. Several of the houses have extended themselves to worthwhile causes on campus. The I.F.C., being the fraternity coordinating body, should plan some day in which the entire system will join together for some charitable project. I'm not suggesting that the fraternities become social workers; only that one day each year should be set aside to try and establish a new tradition.

These ideas I feel can help fill the cultural lack in fraternities today. Since, at the present, many fraternities do not offer these personally rewarding experiences, their main calling card is the social calendar. If this remains to be the main point on which they can rest their laurels, then places like the New Orchard complex will rival the fraternities for members. They will offer various social, cultural and recreational opportunities that will be an enticement to the incoming freshmen.

It is my honest feeling that the fraternities can play a positive viable role on campus. They have the potential to give students a unique way of life that will reach fruition after graduation. For then, they are out of the microcosm, and enter the macrocosm.

F-Day Plus Or Minus One

by MIKE HENCH

Of all the bizarre and exotic devices designed to produce frustrated madness in the college undergraduate, none is more absurdly effective than the plus or the minus sign. Once famed touchstones of education, which were studied by eager young minds learning to add and subtract, these new-device instruments of torture have become a favorite crutch for the sadistic and feeble-minded corrupters that preside gleefully over the insane ritual known affectionately as "passing back exams."

These spiders watch with delight as the nervous student peers tentatively around the corner of the heinous "blue book", and then laugh hyena-like as the poor victim's brow knits in puzzlement over the small letter followed by a plus or minus sign. The student ponders confusedly "Now it says C plus, which means that my grade is above average, only I can't be above average because the Almighty has assigned the symbol "B" for above average. I can't be average because the Almighty has assigned the symbol "C" for that." And finally as his face contorts in mental anguish he may scream "Just where do I fit in?" Surely this would rend the heart of even the most battle-scarred, but it fails to move the corrupting torturers.

Another student, upon receiving an "A minus" will ask, a little more intellectually, "Why do they discriminate against good students? There are no pluses and minuses attached to the stigmatic sign of the "F". Why does the Almighty attach them to the illustrious sign of the "A"? Is excellence easier to diminish than failure?" Even the noble Socrates would have to wonder at this superior logic, but the sadistic corruptors remain unmoved. The D minus wonders where below "below average" is, and all cry out in unison "Oh, the injustice of it all."

THE SHATTER OF GLASS

To the Editor:

It would seem a natural and human masculine tendency to yell and scream, clap and stamp, to hang out windows and to yell at the dark fortress of girls. It is not malicious or evil—the guys enjoy it, and so do the girls. However, the childish and immature must step in—for it seems there are some individuals on this campus who have not passed the stage of juvenile vandalism, and in fact, rather enjoy it.

With the throwing of a rock, fun leaves, and evil and immaturity enter in. The shatter of glass??—only a noise perhaps, but signifying a sick and childish mind. Is not innocent fun enough? Why must some think it fun to endanger the lives of others? Yelling and screaming are fun, providing a little necessary excitement, signifying only a little immaturity. The throwing of a rock is vicious and mean, signifying nothing, resulting perhaps in the loss of sight.

So grow up boys! If you must—throw rocks in your own window. It makes a BIG noise.

LOSES TO UCONN AWAY

Frosh Nine Continues Home Win Streak

The Freshman Baseball club continued its record of winning at home and losing on the road this weekend when it dropped a 7-5 game at the University of Connecticut after beating Holy Cross 10-9 with three runs in the last of the 14th. UMass bats collected 11 hits in the game Thursday but Holy Cross led most of the way with the aid of four first inning walks and a grand slam homer and ten Mass miscues.

The Redmen had a frustrating afternoon Saturday in Storrs, Conn., when UConn had a pair of two run homers by Paul Wislocki in the first inning and Dom Dacunto in the second that built up an early Huskie lead. UMass scored first with a run in the opening inning, but they had to fight back all the way to end within two runs of Connecticut. The Redmen added scores in the fourth and sixth and two in the eighth, but base running misplays cost big innings in the fourth and sixth when UMass threatened to erupt and wipe out the UConn edge. The pair of eighth inning markers came across on a pinch hit double for Bill Breen.

Thursday's game in Amherst against the Holy Cross Freshmen was a wild game from start to finish. Bill Russell started for Mass and walked four in a row after retiring the first batter. Carl Boteze relieved in the first inning and made one bad pitch to Dick Frankel that resulted in a bases clearing homer. Jim Babyak poled a homer in the last of the first with two men on to slice three runs off the lead.

Boteze gave up solo runs in the fourth and seventh, both unearned, during his 13 innings of nearly flawless work in which he struck out 17 Crusaders. Going into the last of the seventh Boteze trailed 7-4 but Mass came back with three in that inning to even the score. A two run Marc Greenberg Texas League single and Roy Lasky's double accounted for the scoring. Once the game was tied Boteze was untouchable until the top of the 14th when two men scored.

Things didn't look too bright for Mass in the bottom of the 14th as Jack Avis had shut them out since he came in the ninth. The Holy Cross infield aided the Redmen cause by committing two errors and misplaying a pair of sacrifice bunts. A single by Roy Lasky and an intentional walk to Frank Stewart also were involved in the scoring of three runs.

The winning pitcher was Ken Ohlson who relieved Boteze in the top of the 14th and retired the only batter he faced. UMass had a total of five extra base hits in the game, two baggers by Bud Kruse, Ed Polchlopek and Lasky, a triple by Lasky and a homer by Babyak.

Due to a mistake at the Collegian office last Monday, the story of last week's Freshmen games was not printed. To recap the two games: A week ago Thursday UMass beat the University of Rhode Island 7-4 behind the strong hurling of Boteze. Stewart was the hitting star with a first inning double, a sixth inning triple, two runs scored and one batted in. Boteze had a two run single in the seventh that put the game on ice in addition to whiffing 13 Rhoddy batters.

A week ago Saturday the Redmen traveled to Hartford with no more success than they had this past weekend at Storrs. Trinity college handed Mass a 4-1 loss, their second of the season and second on the road. That defeat broke the UMass four game victory streak. Ohlson started for Mass but was knocked out by two Trinity runs in the sixth. They added one more in the eighth off Lasky. Bob Brickley threw a four hitter for the Bantams with the only Mass run coming in the third when Jeff Whitney doubled and later scored. He also had a single in the game. The key hit in the game was a long double down the left field line in the sixth by Steve Griggs that knocked in the second and third Trinity runs.

The Little Redmen will try to snap their road jinx at Rhode Island Wednesday and they entertain Springfield College at home Saturday.

Netmen Lose Yan-Con Crown

by DAVE PODBROS

Roger Twitchel, the greatest tennis player in UMass history, highlighted his varsity career with an unprecedented third consecutive win in the Yankee Conference championships. Facing no real competition in any of his matches, he defeated a Connecticut player, 6-0, 6-0, to win the number one title. Twitchel, a senior from Westfield, N. J., now has a singles record of 24-1.

Even with Twitchel's win, the Netmen were not able to win their sixth consecutive conference title, which fell to Connecticut. Bob Neal, in the second singles, won a good match from a Vermont player, but was unable to defeat the former number one man from Connecticut.

MIKE ROSE at the third spot went all the way to the finals, but was defeated there in a three set match. The second doubles made up of Billy Martin and Bob Greenberg lost to a Maine team. Dick Leete and Bob Greenberg in the other singles spots were first round winners, but were unable to go any further.

ALSO A WINNER IN SINGLES besides Twitchel was Billy Martin in the sixth spot, who did a good job throughout the entire conference, although he lost in the doubles.

In the first doubles, Twitchel and Neal were rained out as well as the third doubles, which was ended as Mike Rose and Roger Harper, playing well in his first Yankee Conference, were winning 5-1. However, even if UMass was able to continue in the matches that were rained out, they still have lost by one point.

TUESDAY, THE NETMEN PLAY A.I.C. here at the University. This will be the last chance to see Roger Twitchel play in varsity competition.

Diamond Price Increases

Speaking before a group of geologists and interested students in Morrill Science Center Tuesday, Mrs. Gladys B. Hannaford, a former technical writer for the diamond industry, outlined the evolution of a diamond from its volcanic origin to the fine polished gem.

Diamonds today are found usually associated with the deep "pipes" of volcanic material that are the remnants of the ancient fires. Where the elements have worn down some of the pipes, the diamonds have been carried to the sea and today lie under heavy layers of sand on some of the world's beaches.

Though about 96% of the world's diamonds come from South Africa, some stones are to be found in India, Borneo, Brazil, and Russia. Approximately 80% of the stones mined are used for industrial purposes, and the rest are cut into gems for a booming world diamond market.

In the process of diamond mining, tons of gem-bearing rock are blasted loose from the earth, crushed, and sorted to remove the valuable ore from the worthless rock.

The separation of the gems is accomplished by heavy media separation, optical separation, or electrostatic separation, but the main part of the work is still accomplished on "grease tables" which remove only the diamonds and allow the worthless material to travel past.

In finishing the stones, expert craftsmen use diamond dust to cut and polish the gems, since only diamonds can cut other diamonds.

Finished stones are judged on the four criteria of: carat weight, clarity, color, and cutting. A stone is considered flawless if a ten power magnification does not reveal any inclusions, and the best stones register no color, but depend on the skill with which the facets are ground and polished for their "inner fire."

The current rise in world diamond prices, Mrs. Hannaford explained, has been the result of a wave of European buying in an attempt to keep wealth in a portable form after the experiences of two world wars fought on that continent.

Redmen Nine Drop Pair

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts baseball team dropped a pair of crucial Yankee Conference games to the University of Maine at Orono this past weekend. The scores were 9-6 and 16-7. The losses virtually eliminated the Redmen from any chance at the conference title for this season. The present standings are:

Maine	5	1	.833
Vermont	4	2	.667
Rhode Island	3	4	.428
Massachusetts	3	4	.428
New Hampshire	2	3	.400
Connecticut	2	6	.250

In an effort to get the series off on the right foot, Coach Earl Lorden called on his ace Rod Corey to pitch. Corey came into the game with a fine 0.28 ERA and when he departed three innings later the record was even better. He had still only allowed that single run, but some poor fielding behind him cost him five runs and the game.

COREY hit Don Sones to start off the third, and his teammates followed with three straight errors. Next came a passed ball. Corey, now pretty shaken, allowed two hits and the Redmen were in bad trouble. With Ross Piken in relief of Corey the Black Bears came up with four more runs in the sixth.

Mass meanwhile was pecking away at the lead. They got a run in the first, another in the fifth, two more in the seventh and two more in the eighth. Mass came up with 11 hits to only 8 for the Bears, but those errors really hurt. It was not a well played game at all. There was four errors total by Mass and Maine scattered five more.

JOE FERRIS recorded his fifth win without a loss as he went the distance for the Maine team. He recorded 13 strikeouts, which kept him out of many potentially dangerous situations. He managed to leave 10 UMass runners stranded on the base paths.

Rod Corey took the loss, his third against a single victory. Joe Apicella had a big day at the plate for the Redmen as he came up with four hits in five trips to the plate, including a pair of triples. John Awdycki and Jim Kuczynski each had two for the Redmen.

NEIL HARRIS, Redman outfielder combine with Nordberg to create a power hitting outfield.

On Saturday morning, the Black Bears really put on their hitting shoes as they came up with four home runs. They raked five different pitchers for the runs, all of which were earned. It was a very close game for the first five innings as the Maine team held a 2-0 lead. The Redmen were saved from any damage in the fifth when Dennis Della Piana raced into deepest left-center field to bare hand a drive off the bat of Ron Lanza.

MASS TIED THE GAME in the top of the sixth John Awdycki singled in a run and Rod Corey hit a sacrifice fly. Maine responded with six big runs in the last of the inning. Dick Nelson walloped one of Jim Ritchie's offerings for a bases loaded home run. Then Lanza not to be robbed again, came up with a two run blast.

Once again Mass came back, primarily on the strength of a two run triple by Steve Wojnar, and cut the margin to 8-6. Then in the bottom of the seventh Carl Merrill and John Gillette hit three run homers as the Bears got eight more runs to wrap up the contest. Mass added the last run in the top of the ninth but it was too little too late.

Dick Flaherty worked the first five innings for the Bears to record his fourth win without a defeat. Mass had a parade to the mound that included Mike Johnson, Jim Ritchie, Ross Piken, Rod Corey and Rick Farrell. Ritchie picked up the loss, his second against one win. Awdycki came up with three hits for the Redmen and Kamena and Wojnar two each.

MASS NOW HAS A 5-6 RECORD on the year and will face Williams at Alumni Field on Monday. The loss marked the fourth in a row for the team on the road. The club would appear to be following in the footsteps of the basketball team that won all their conference home games but lost all their road games. The baseball team has its last chance to win a conference road game when it travels to Rhode Island on Wednesday.

COMMENCEMENT GAME

Lacrosse Team Loses To Middlebury 7-4

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The Middlebury Panthers came down from Vermont Saturday afternoon and beat the Redmen lacrosse team 7-4. Don McLean's three-goal hat trick, little Fred Beam's two goals, and Marv Kelley's stalwart goaltending were the principal reasons for the Panther victory. The Redmen outshot Middlebury 38 to 25 and came up with fifteen shots in the last period but the shots were mostly wide of the mark and those on the goal were usually stopped by Kelley who had 15 saves.

DICK BROWN of UMass opened the scoring at 0:28 of the first period with an assist to Co-Capt. Steve Harrington. The Redmen led 1-0 but were never to lead again during the game. At 1:12 Jeff Nichols scored for Middlebury tying the game. Then on a Redmen defensive lapse at 12:06 Fred Beams ran all the way up the middle twisting and turning to score to give the Panthers a 2-1 lead.

In the second period the scoring was all Middlebury. At 12:00 Fred Beams set up Don McLean for his first goal of the game and 54 seconds later McLean got another, this time assisted by Jack Mettee. Then at 13:03 Fred Beams got his second goal of the game and in a minute and three seconds the Panthers had scored thrice for a 5-1 lead at halftime.

THE REDMEN RALLIED in the third quarter with Harrington getting his 9th goal of the year at 4:01, followed by a goal by Charlie Glew, his 12th, assisted by Fran Casey on an extra-man situation. Then at 7:45 Soph Bob Kelly playing on the third midfield line with Sophs Bill Houde and Wayne Morgan got his first goal of the year unassisted and the Redmen were only down 5-4. But a few seconds later there was a UMass penalty and Panther Don McLean scored his third goal of the game and the Redmen had lost the much-needed momentum. Near the end of the third period Middlebury's Jed Maker scored on another extra-man situation giving the Panthers a 7-4 lead.

The last period was very disappointing for the Redmen. They came up with 15 shots to 2 for Middlebury but could not score. The game ended with the Redmen on the bottom half of the 7-4 score.

TAKE 14 FIRST PLACES

Frosh Trackmen Win Again

Paced by double victories by John Lisack and Art Larvey, the Freshmen track team took 14 first places to easily dispose of Northeastern University and Tufts College. It was the third straight win outdoors for the undefeated frosh and the seventh consecutive victory for the track team extending back through the indoor season to cross country.

IN THE FIELD EVENTS, John Lisack led the way by taking the high jump (5'11"), his best jump of the year, and the triple jump (41'4"). Hall took fourth in the high jump, and Christopolis third in the triple jump. Christopolis also took fourth in the broad jump, while Garsys was taking third. In the pole vault, John Fitzgerald took a second with his best leap of the year—11'6". Ted Monette led a UMass sweep in the discus. He was followed by Folkowski, Solomon, and Bassett. Ted's throw was his best yet at 131'4". Monette and Bassett also took third and fourth in the hammer. The frosh showed unexpected strength in the javelin. Alex Kulpa led the way with a toss of 147'6". He was followed by Domina in second and Ullian in fourth. Bob Davis took the shot with a throw of 43' and FREEDMAN was third.

ART LARVEY, STEVE ST. CLAIR AND JOHN ANDERSON shone the spotlight in the running events. Larvey took first in the hundred and was unable to compete in his key event, the 440 yard hurdles. Steve St. Clair placed in the distance events. In the mile which was won by Mike Sheeley in 4:30.4 (Mike's fastest time), St. Clair placed third as Terry Carpenter was fourth. Bill Thoms won the 880 in 2:02, his fastest; St. Clair was third again. In the 2 mile, Steve placed second behind Terry Carpenter who ran 10:07, his fastest of the year. Taking a fourth in the 2 mile was Jim Parker. Andy Mann won the high hurdles in 16.7, while Damion Gaffney took first in the 440 intermediate hurdles in 59.5, his best time. John Anderson ran away with the 440 with a time of 51.5, took a second in the 220 and anchored the victoring relay team. Other members of the relay team, which ran a 3:34.2, were Bill Thoms, Pete Federovich, and Dick Panta. The final score of the meet was UMass—108, N.U.—56, Tufts—19.

The most exciting race of the day came in the 880, when converted 440 man Bill Thoms kicked it out with Northeastern's Bowry for the finish. Also providing some excitement was Mike Sheeley when he came charging out of fourth place with a quarter-mile to go to lead in the field in the mile. The next and last home meet for the freshmen is May 12, at 2 p.m. against Holy Cross. At this meet the frosh will be trying to complete an undefeated season.

SPRING DAY

Termed "Well Organized"

by ELWIN McNAMARA

THE CLANGING OF OLD CHAPEL'S BELLS Monday morning signaled the beginning of the first "Spring Day" since 1958. In what was termed a "well organized plot", a small group of students planned and executed a reinstatement of Spring Day.

Over 5000 leaflets were distributed across campus, to all dormitories. The leaflets stated: "Today is Spring Day. Listen for the Chapel Bells." The sheets were signed RSO.

At about 8 a.m., faculty members received letters requesting their co-operation. A "Charles Johnson" was the letters' signer.

A GROUP OF STUDENTS FORMED in front of the Student Union slightly before 10 o'clock. They carried signs asking for reinstatement of Spring Day, and stating that "Spring Day is Risen Again".

Soon after the pickets had formed, Deans William Field and Robert Hopkins arrived on the scene, seemingly in an effort to forestall any action. As they approached, the bells began to ring, provoking a lusty cheer from the assembled crowd. The bells continued ringing for at least 5 minutes.

DEAN FIELD STATED "I can't let them have Spring Day."

Assistant Dean of Men William Burkhardt commented on the organization shown by those planning the event, but expressed hope that no-one would be hurt.

Smith College President Speaks; Calls UMass "Great University"

by BILL MAHONEY

Dr. Thomas C. Mendenhall, President of Smith College, spoke of the University of Massachusetts as a "great university" as he urged the visiting high school students at yesterday's Honor Students' Day to "take full advantage of the educational opportunity offered in college."

Calling the process of learning, hard, tedious, and a lonely business, the Yale and Oxford scholar said, "I am excited and optimistic about today's undergraduates and their growing sense of responsibility. Student concern with such national issues as civil rights is heartening."

Focusing on the college student and his motivation, the noted historian asked the nearly four hundred outstanding guests "not to drop education at the classroom door" but to accept the social as well as individual responsibility to gain from the college experience. Mendenhall further stressed the value to America's democracy in an "enlightened citizenry".

Members of Adelphia, Mortar Board, APO, and GSS meet with visiting students at High School Honor Students' Day for luncheon in the Ballroom of the Student Union.

The keynote address by Dr. Mendenhall followed a morning of panel discussions where representatives from Adelphia and Mortar Board meet with the visitors to discuss the many aspects of life as a UMass student.

Questions were raised regarding many subjects such as engineering - physics requirements, Mandarin Chimes, and the availability of closet space in the girls' dorms.

The afternoon schedule was so constructed as to provide the students with a chance to inspect the various fields of prospective study as the academic departments provided tours and meetings with professors.

While these were in session, members of the administration met with the high school guidance directors as part of the attempt to present the school personnel, as well as the students, with a picture of "a large and growing University."

PANEL DISCUSSION

Negro Identity & Discrimination Spotlighted

by KATHY YUKNA

"Does the Negro sacrifice his identity to justify participation in campus life?" This one of the major questions asked by moderator Fred Lazin to the five members of the panel, John Parnell (AEPi), Don Johnson (BKP), Stu Holmes (Independent), Joe Jones (TEP), Phil Johnston (Former President of Student Rights), in Thursday night's Hillel sponsored discussion in the Commonwealth Room.

With the answers coming quick and sure, Don Johnson of BKP told members of the audience, "I can't sacrifice my identity—the Negro can't, it's inherent." Siding with Don was Joe Jones of TEP. "I consider myself an American—I'm not aware of any differences I possess." Speaking for the campus civil rights movement, former President Phil Johnston added, "If the fraternity means having the Negro give up his heritage, it should be denounced."

The small crowd on hand saw the panel discuss subjects ranging from the question of a negroes ethnic dowry to the problem of fraternity discrimination, and the revoking of national charters of those fraternities on campus engaged in discrimination.

Said Johnson, "A fraternity shuns the negro who relinquishes his ethnic dowry. A house either accepts the whole man or rejects the whole man. A fraternity doesn't take part of a person, so I haven't had to give up anything." Stu Holmes, an independent added, "It's not a matter of being socialized—the negro is self-critical of his actions."

Moderator Lazin then brought up the possibility that fraternities accepted one or two negroes as a token to show that there was no discrimination in a house. This was refuted by John Parnell and Don Johnson. Said Parnell, "I wouldn't join a house if it had a discriminatory clause, because I wouldn't feel as though I fit in, knowing the national chapter disapproved, even if the local chapter accepted me." Johnson felt that this would hurt a fraternity rather than help it, because people would say they didn't want to go there because it had a negro. The point was made that TKE has a discriminatory clause, yet Pete Bernard was accepted at TKE—the local chapter waved the rule. Johnson said that he had been asked to join a National Negro Fraternity, and had refused because—"I don't like to be in groups of oneness."

Another potent question was brought to light when moderator Lazin asked, "If a negro should choose to integrate, do the brothers approve?" Johnson said that there was no discrimination in a house. Parnell clearly stated, "If I bring a white girl disapprove, I'm not going to to my house, and my brothers punch him out. I'll just think differently about them. They trust me, and I trust them. If they did think anything about it, they'd tell me." Johnson continued, "This community fosters liberalism. I don't think people who can read discriminate as much."

The fireworks really started when audience participation ensued. Said former IFC President Steve Gray, "Discrimination is ending in fraternities not because of administration pressure, but because the brothers realize it must end."

Thus the discussion was brought to close as a small, but intent group lingered for particular questions for the panelists.

Attention Class '65

Junior Class Meeting Called Thursday

THERE WILL BE AN IMPORTANT CLASS MEETING for the class of '65 on Thursday, May 14, 1964 at 11:15 a.m. in the Ballroom of the Student Union, announces Dave Podbros, vice president of the junior class.

Podbros stated that Evan Johnston, Executive Director of the Alumni Association will speak on the function and purpose of the Alumni Association.

"This meeting is extremely important and all members of the class are urged to attend," he said.

Also on the agenda, he noted, will be the senior tax, suggestions for a new advisor, a Winter Carnival financial report, a class gift, and applications for Executive Council.

Podros concluded by stressing that "this is probably the most important class meeting the class of '65 will ever hold."

Poll Shows Student Senate Has Intelligent Membership

For the past month, the Senate Public Relations Committee, under the Chairmanship of Senator Donald Boyd, has been administering a series of polls to members of the Student Senate to determine what overall-type of student is attracted to an extra-curricular activity of the type and function of the Student Senate. Nearly 70% of the Senators responded.

According to the polls, the cumulative quality point average of this group is a somewhat scholarly 2.5, the same average required of all scholarship recipients on this campus. This fell within a range of a high 3.6 to a low 1.7.

Other data compiled showed that 20% of those replying or nine individuals were dormitory House Counselors.

In addition, 44% of the respondents were members of either fraternities or sororities.

Finally, 40% of the polled Senators were engaged in part-time work on or off campus.

These conclusions were not totally unexpected, since it is well known that members of the Senate are generally quite active in other areas also. These results do, however, indicate that the degree of activity of these students in the entire spectrum of campus activities is of a very high order.

The Student Senate seems to be representative of the group of intelligent students who find activity a very necessary and desirable part of their college experience.

Independents' Rally Is Set For Thursday

END THE DRAFT NOW is the theme of a public rally and demonstration to be sponsored by the Young Independents in front of the Student Union on Thursday, May 14, at 11:15 a.m.

The rally will feature speakers from the New England CNVA and the Young Independents. The meeting is one of a five-day series of demonstrations being held in the Connecticut Valley. It is based on President Johnson's proposal calling for a restudy of the draft laws, and is an attempt by students to make their feelings known.

The CNVA advises that "if you are under eighteen, do not register; if you are registered, apply for deferment; if you are conscripted, refuse to serve."

Masters of Deceit

When Senior year arrives in college, Madison Avenue concerns begin to send out literature telling the Seniors of the marvelous benefits to be derived by possessing certain all-inclusive credit cards. "The key to your future enjoyment," they tell you. Not to be left behind by anyone, even Madison Ave., the University offers the same program to high school Seniors. In their colorful brochure, the University paints in glowing terms the advantages of owning a college ID card.

The unsuspecting Freshman, after a life with fairly close familial ties, gets a quick orientation to the new role of the student. On the first day of class he gets his ID card with the personalized student number and picture, and then begins his career as an individual. This tiny card unlocks a vast world of opportunity to him, and with it he derives so many benefits. Think of how it soothes the student's need to have a clear picture of where he fits into things at the University—why he, 030915, is right between 030914 and 030916. There may be a lot of Smiths on campus, but as 8443103 you certainly won't be mistaken for someone else. It is so nice to be unique for the first time in your life.

The peachy little picture on the ID card comes in real handy for the student also. It is such a good picture that all bartenders can readily identify it as the person who is asking to be served, and when a graduate school asks you for a small picture of yourself, what could be better than a copy of this masterful picture. Also, to protect the student from vice, the ID is tamperproof. Anybody would think that the University students were evil minded or something.

There are many other surprises that this little plastic packet of joy offers. For the student who is so immersed in school work that he forgets the world around him, there is valuable information stamped on the card to refresh his memory. It tells him what school year it is, when he graduates, when he was born, and whom to notify if he feels ill after a meal at the Commons. Finally, the student need not worry about losing the card, for he is commanded by the University to defy this stringently enforced ruling.

Oh yes, one more thing. I understand that the Psych department is working on a machine into which you thrust the ID and it looks at the picture, analyzes your handwriting, and then tells you what your cume will be and assigns you to the correct advisor so that you can get expert and personal guidance.

Race Pregnant Turtles At NU?

By Inez Brand

Would you bar pregnant turtles from entering a race? Northeastern has made this a rule in their annual Turtle Dash Marathon. Further, no professional turtles may be entered. Pep pills may not be given to participants, and only U. S. Ked track shoes may be worn. However, any turtle, if he wants to, can run barefoot.

Are you always chasing rainbows on the golf course? You may have good reason as somebody has invented a golf ball that leaves a trail of rainbow-colored smoke. "Looks just like an ordinary golf ball, but, oh, what a difference!" an ad reads.

Easy living infecting you too? How about investing in a toe straightener for those afternoons on the "beach." And why use all your energy dragging on cigarettes when you could refresh yourself with a Vig-Air-Ette. They have no dangerous tars and are available in lemon, licorice, or mint.

Thinking about graduation gifts? Take a hint from the Parintinin Indians of South America who give a young bride to a new warrior. The Tacuna Indians give the initiated a sniff of tobacco and a toot on the sacred trumpet.

In the Middle Ages at Oxford, if you wanted to graduate, you couldn't indulge in constant sword practice or bring your knife unsheathed into the dining commons. Nor could you shout or sing when somebody was trying to sleep. At Cambridge, you couldn't keep your falcon on the premises.

REVIEW

Siddhartha

by HERMAN HESSE and LEW LUCHANS

"No longer to be Self, to experience the peace of an emptied heart, to experience pure thought—that was his goal," that was the goal of Siddhartha, an Indian Brahmin. With these words the youth left his parents, his village, joined the Samans, an ascetic group, and began the search that was to last his lifetime.

In his search for the answer to this enigmatic question of man, Siddhartha llved the ascetic life, left that, met and conversed with the Buddha, but knew that he could be a disciple of no man, that he must solve his own doubt and work out his own destiny. In his search he accumulated riches by his application of the ascetic code of patience and self control; he carried on a love affair with a lovely courtesan, Kamala; and eventually ended up leaving his wealth and position and went to live with a ferryman. It is here, after many years of experiencing the life of a ferryman and of listening to the river that he discovered the answer to his question.

He found that life eventually is its own reward if one lives it in a manner of awareness of Nature. Nature, the River, in its unchanging state, in the continuous repetition of its message, brought to him the culmination of his search. He found love for the river, love for all of nature. He found that "love is the most important thing in the world." Here was serenity.

For those who search for life, for its meaning; for those who look for a complete life, but see only its incompleteness, this book should be read, slowly, meditatively.

History Prof. Wins Book Award

The boigrapher of a political zealot who distrusted democracy received the Manuscript Award of the Institute of Early American History and Culture during the annual meeting of the Institute Council May 8-9.

Winfred E. A. Bernhard, assistant professor of history, received the $1,000 prize for his biography of Fisher Ames, a prominent Massachusetts leader of the Federalist party in the early years of the American Republic. Bernhard won the award, according to Wesley Frank Craven, professor of history at Princeton University and chairman of the Institute Council, for the best manuscript in early American history submitted to the Institute in 1962-63.

His book will be published for the Institute by the University of North Carolina Press.

Bernhard's life of Ames is the first full-scale biography of the Federalist statesman. A child prodigy who entered Harvard college at the age of twelve, Ames became a leading scholar before he was twenty, then turned to law as a career at the age of twenty-three. He soon entered politics and served in local and state offices before being elected to the Massachusetts ratification convention which adopted the federal Constitution.

At the age of thirty he was elected to the First Congress, defeating the veteran Boston leader, Samuel Adams. Re-elected to the next three Congresses, he became the outstanding congressional orator in an age accustomed to oratory.

Bernhard portrays Ames as an advocate of energetic federal government, one of the party whips who supported Alexander Hamilton's economic and political program during Washington's presidency. Though a political leader, he feared that democracy would threaten liberty and defeat the American experiment in self government. After the French Revolution erupted, he warned against Jacobinic radicalism in America and backed the use of the Sedition Act of 1798 at an instrument of repression against Jeffersonian Democrats.

When President Washington retired from office, Ames declined re-election and assumed the role of elder statesman at the ageof thirty-eight, devoting himself to his law practice, the East India trade and real estate. In 1805 he was offered the presidency of Harvard College but declined on grounds of poor health. He died in his hometown of Dedham, Mass., on July 4, 1808.

The Institute is a research and publication organization sponsored jointly by the College of William and Mary and Colonial Williamsburg, Inc.

Fancy That Happening Again!

In the spirit of the occasion, the Collegian bannered its Monday issue with "Spring Day." Now, in the great-try, let's-do-it-again days after the celebration, we can sit back and appraise the reinstated tradition a bit more soberly.

A well planned set of missions, neatly executed by a group titling itself RSO ("Regular Scheduled Orgies," we are told) fulfilled a seven year promise to let the bells ring out a holiday for the campus. The crowd did not grow to the anticipated size, however, because they weren't sure what the Spring Day really would involve.

When the initial wave of students flooded the lawns by the Student Union, the only knowledgeful persons there to greet them were the Deans. They, of course, told anyone who asked that the day off was not sanctioned by the administration and standard cut policies would be applied, if not intensified. If the students were made aware that the day off was not authorized, but would work if all agreed to cut classes, more people would have stayed for the fun.

What did occur seemed to demonstrate an important thing: given sufficient organization, explanation, and entertainment, a safe and succesful Spring Day might yet be possible. The crowd that gathered was spirited but orderly. The brief march to South College (after a band was not allowed to provide entertainment) ended in what was largely a display of respect for the University. No ill effects (directly related to Spring Day) were apparent in the remainder of the day and evening. Indeed, the day (or morning) off, and the excitement probably acted to relieve tension that might have led to another unwholesome demonstration—like a mob of rock throwers.

Though a condoned Spring Day still seems far off (if not impossible), the Monday attempt seems a good point to start from next year. The success of students this year will, no doubt, encourage Spring Day attempts for several years to come, and the responsible people on campus will have to face the consequences—discuss the situation further.

The only immediate problems with Spring Day now are the "consequences" that might befall those found responsible for the Monday festivities, or those who exceeded their number of allowed cuts. Here, from an admittedly fun-loving approach, we can only express the hope that administrators and faculty will be lenient. It may not be worth your degree to take a day off, but a day off doesn't seem justification for forfeiting a degree.

FANCY, AGAIN

Up The Hill They're Marching Down

Figuring that the riot last week will be followed by many more, I have decided to explain the rules which must be adhered to while staging these "revolutions". They are the rules established in a game, similar in appearance to any "board" game, called "Dethroning the Czar".

The game can be played by any number of people, although the ideal of number ranges between 6000 and 7000 participants. Each individual participating must choose a pseudonym and for the remainder of the game is recognized by that nickname. Some of the more popular names in the past have been, Lenin, Trotsky, and Stalin, although the majority of the individuals fail in originality and settle for "Chuck", "Butch" or "Ignacious".

The object of the game is divided into two parts. The first object is for the male revolutionaries to ally themselves with the females, called, in the game, the Bolshivicas (the female ending). There are two possible ways of achieving this aim. The first is by luring the ladies out of their dormitories with promises of "an end to capitalism", or the like. However, this plan works only on rare occasions. When it falls, the men attempt, by violent means, to coerce the ladies into an alliance. They attempt to excite them with cries of "down with Czar Lederle" or "a revolution means an integrated orchard". If frustration arises, rock throwing and vulgarisms follow, all of which excite the ladies and they concede the alliance.

The integrated revolutionists then move on to the Czar's residence, located near the new "capitalist" dormitories. This is the primary object of the game, to dethrone the Czar and Czarina. With the dethroning of the Czar, the revolutionists, usually from Baker, Greenough and Van Meter, assume the crown themselves until they too are dethroned in a similar manner by the secret police.

However, the road to victory is not without its drawbacks. There are numerous obstacles and harassments. Chief threats to the revolutionary movement is the head of the secret police, Ivan the Terrible, who is considered a "party pooper" by the revolutionists. Ivan is equipped with his famous riot truck which is used to prevent the rioters from achieving their goal. The Czarina approves of Ivan's methods and the Czar has no choice but to sanction his violent methods. So far this year, the Czar has maintained his strength and one revolution has failed. However, he is aware of the potential volution and, with the help of the Czarina and Ivan, he is fortifying the "Kremlin" with barbed wire. The revolution is at hand!

We Don't Horse Around

(With something as conspicuous as a Mustang—a big red car not an horse!—We don't feel we are in any position to subvert the paper with plugs for Ford. We prefer to think we are taking them for a ride!—Ed.)

To the Editor:

In the old days, so they tell us, some newspaper editors used to accept favors from all and sundry, with the resulting suspicion that in what they wrote thereafter there were concealed sundry favors for their benefactors.

If it were ever so, the practice has certainly fallen into disfavor. Responsible editors today look askance at those who come bearing gifts, and most newspapers—including this one—frown upon even the little Christmas gifts which politicians, public relations men and advertisers sometimes want to shower upon their reporters.

So we read with a somewhat jaundiced eye the news that the Ford Motor Company is offering Mustangs—that's a car, not a horse—to college editors about the country for a bit of free test driving during their campus year. The professed idea is to give "an insight into the importance Ford places on satisfying the automotive needs of the young men and women of America."

As a college father, we doubt that any college student needs a bribe to convince him of young people's satisfaction in an automobile. But we've no doubt at all that if any of the student editors ever become real editors they aren't going to sound very convincing on the subject of ethics in high places when they have a free-loading Ford in their past.

Comments On Art Show

To the Editor:

In your recent criticism of the Student Art Exhibit, you fail fully to comprehend the meaning of that title. Implicit in the word STUDENT is the learning experience which accompanies the study of art, be it design, construction, or painting.

The attitude of the Collegian toward art has always been to ignore it or to pass it off as a joke. It is sad indeed, that a student organ should echo and thus reinforce the mediocrity of public opinion. Past Collegian "reviews" have done little to make the "upset and misled" public more aware of contemporary art. Since the Collegian is obviously incapable of constructive criticism in this area, perhaps an art student should review future exhibits to insure competent and intelligent reviews.

In your search for "living-room art" may I suggest a visit to the S.U. Commonwealth Room.

J. Michael Egan '65

To the Editor:

I would like to make a few comments concerning last Friday's editorial on the student art exhibit. The main point of this editorial seemed to be that the exhibit is misleading and "upsetting" to the public because they will assume the work to be art "in a classical sense." But this is a student art exhibit, not a classical art exhibit.

Is the public misled or upset by student publications or student productions because they expect them to be literature or theater "in a classical sense"? Hardly. They rather enjoy these creations of fresh and exciting, if rudimentary, first steps of the young people who may go on to create the "classical" literature or theater of the 20th Century.

So why should their attitude about a student art show be any different? True, some of the works in this exhibit are unfinished or fall short of their goal and some are "only lessons in design" or "special effects assignments." But they are student work (yes, "learner's exercises") because they are the attempts of young people who are trying to learn to create art which is not just an example of "classical" or "living-room" art but a real creation that can defy the ambiguity of the word art and be art—concretely, undeniably. I have enough respect for the public which goes to art exhibits to feel that they understand this and therefore know just what a student art exhibit is and what value and importance it has for them.

One more point—as to the possibility of this exhibit being a major hoax, perhaps a comment of Guillaume Apollinaire is appropriate: "There are no collective errors or hoaxes in art; there are only various epochs and dissimilar schools. Even if the aims pursued by these schools are not equally elevated or equally pure, all are equally respectable, and, according to the ideas one has of beauty, each artistic school is successively admired, despised, and admired once more."

Population Explosion Huxley Lecture Topic

Sigma Xi in conjunction with Distinguished Visitors Program will sponsor Sir Julian Huxley this Thursday evening, May 14, at 8:00. His topic will be "The Population Explosion."

Sir Julian Huxley, one of the 20th century's greatest scientists and philosophers, scholar and author, served as Director General of UNESCO for three years.

Mr. Huxley has lectured and held important positions in scientific fields in many parts of the world including the United States. He makes his home in London, is married and has two sons. He has written many articles, scientific papers, film commentaries, and has appeared on radio and television. In 1953 he was awarded the UNESCO Kalinga Prize for Distinguished Popular Writing in Science.

Among Sir Julian Huxley's many books are "Knowledge, Morality and Destiny," "Man in the Modern World: An Eminent Scientist Looks at Life Today," and other distinguished volumes. Sir Julian Huxley was born in London in 1887, the second son of the late Leonard Huxley, grandson of T. H. Huxley, grandnephew of Matthew Arnold, and brother of Aldous Huxley. He was educated at Eton and Oxford where he won the Newdigate prize for verse. He has taught and lectured widely in both England and the United States.

After serving in Italy during the first World War, Mr. Huxley was a Fellow of New College, Oxford, until 1925 when he was appointed Professor of Zoology in King's College at the University of London. From 1935 to 1942 Mr. Huxley held the post of secretary of the Zoological Society of London. In 1946 he was made Executive Director of the Preparatory Commission of UNESCO and from November of that year until 1948 he was Director General of UNESCO itself.

game in the bottom of the eighth, as Joe Apicella singled, and was sacrificed by Awdycki. Apicella then stole third, as he got a big jump on Silver. The pitch went for a passed ball and Joe scored standing up.

Mass cut out a threat by Williams in the ninth on some fine work by Awdycki. Bob Leroy started the inning with a single. Jim Straub followed with a walk. Pitcher Silver then hit a grounder to Apicella who stepped on second threw to first. The ball landed in the dirt and Awdycki blocked it with his chest. He then grabbed the ball and rifled a throw home to cut down Leroy at the plate.

The game then proceeded to the extra innings unil the twelth when Silver's luck ran out, and Mass really hit him. UMass with a 6-6 record now plays at Rhode Island, with Rod Corey expected to get the call for the Redmen. Williams has breezed to a 1-7 record for the year.

tures at an Exhibition" by Moussorgsky.

The bass, trombone and baritone sections gave the band's sound a depth and resonance that filled up the hall. They were controlled and smooth in Leidzen's "First Swedish Rhapsody", yet spirited and open in Texidor's "Amparito Roca".

Peter Ordway, trombonist, soloed in "Carnival of Venice Variations". After a weak opening, he went on to a fine display of difficult double and triple tonguing passages.

Soloists Peter Ordway, William Skulley and Alan Bunce played David Rose's "Holiday for Trombones" accompanied by an excellently muted band in the background.

THE PERCUSSION SECTION showed a fine sense of tempo In both "Beguine for Band" by Osser and "Amparito Roca".

Toward the end of the program, Henry Fillmore's "Crosley March" had more than one foot in the audience keeping time with the spirited beat.

Jenkins controls the band with a firm hand. Perhaps the only complaint is that at times he tends to overcontrol. This was noticable most in "Pictures at an Exhibition," which ended somewhat weakly.

A continued ovation from the audience at the end of the program brought Jenkins back to lead the band through the University "Fight Song" and "When Twilight Shadows Deepen".

NEXT SUNDAY THE BAND PLAYS its second Twilight Concert on the South Terrace of the Student Union.

Polynesian Feast At Luau

Lo-Lo Luau, after 3 months of preparations, has finally arrived. The Luau is one of the most extravagant events ever to hit the University of Massachusetts Campus. The feast will begin at 5:30 p.m. and continue until 7:30 p.m. The food will be catered a la Hawaiian: Malihini (Fresh Pineapple Hors-d'oeuvres, Wau Kauai (Barbecued Pork Luau), Oceana (seafood), Hanoli Muffins (Banana Muffins), Waikiki Salad (Pineapple cole slaw), Adamia Cake, Kahula-udi Juice.

The orchids, flown in directly from Hawaii by Pacific Orient Airlines to preserve their dewy freshness, will be given to each girl. Upon arriving each Luauer will be given a lei and kisses by the dancers.

THE ENTERTAINMENT will be provided in three phases. The first, immediately following the Polynesian Feast, will be the famous Waikiki Quartet straight from the sand dunes of Hawaii. They will play throughout the evening until curfew. The second act will be the Umie dancers featuring Annetta Wong, a transfer student from the University of Hawaii. They will do several of the famous Hawaiian native dances. The third feature will be the movie "My Geishia" starring Shirley McLaine. At this point the Luau committee would advise the Luauers to bring their own blankets in case of a sudden cold spell.

There has been some worry by the ROTC Cadets as to whether they can be allowed to eat, leave for the ROTC Spring Review, and return again. It is assured that there will be no conflict at all.

ANNETTA WONG, the featured Hula dancer for the Luau.

The Luau Committee would at this time like to publicly thank the Keys and Revelers, who have graciously offered their services for this event.

In case of inclement weather the festivities will continue in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets will be sold today through Friday. Please buy your tickets before Friday. Tickets may be bought from the dorm captains and at the Union.

Spring Day . . .

Over 500 students gathered on the South Terrace of the Union. Some sang, most just milled around. Many leaders of campus activities were seen in the crowd. From the terrace, the crowd moved to the front of South College. There they chanted "We want Spring Day", sang the Alma Mater, and gave out with a few football cheers. Few administrators, save those concerned with student activities, showed much interest. It was noted that President Lederle was in Boston, attending a meeting of the Board of Trustees.

The crowd then journeyed to Bartlett Hall, growing as it moved, where most of the students sat and sang. Prof. John Van Steenberg was cheered as he passed. Several students addressed the crowd, emphasizing order.

Dean of Men Robert Hopkins said that "no-one has authority to dismiss classes", but added "it's a lovely day to be outdoors," Hopkins also commented on the orderliness of the gathering.

University News Director Bill Deminoff '52 thought the event somewhat less organized than those he had seen.

The crowd filtered down to the Pond, and, as lunch hour approached, gradually left the area.

JOHNSON GOES ROUTE

Redmen Subdue Williams; Break Losing Streak, 3-2

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts scored a win on the baseball diamond as they downed the Ephmen from Williams College. The win broke a four game losing streak of the Redmen, but it took them 12 innings to get by the opponent 3-2.

MIKE JOHNSON WENT THE ROUTE, hurling a very strong ball game for the Redmen. The win gave Johnson a 2-1 record for the year. Along with Johnson, the heroes were Karl Kamena and Tony Simone. It was a single by Simone that got the club rolling in the last inning. He rode home on a long belt down the left field line by Kamena. Karl was credited with a triple, but would have easily made a home run if it were necessary.

These were but two of the seven hits off the Williams hurler, Jeff Silver. The left hander went the route and kept the home club pretty well off balance with his assortment of slow stuff. This guy threw more curves than a room full of girls. A couple broke off in the dirt well in front of the plate but the majority were up around the batters necks.

Mass scored first in the second inning. Steve Wojnar came up with a single to get things started. Jim Kuczynski followed with another hit. Bill Crane laid down a sacrifice bunt, and the fielder chose to play it to third. Pete Williamson accommodated by dropping the ball, and the Redmen had the bases loaded. With high hopes for a big inning, Ray Yando came to the plate. Yando hit into a double play to ruin the big opportunity, but a run still managed to score, and the club went ahead 1-0.

This score remained until the sixth inning. Until this time, Steve Hyde had the only two hits for the Ephmen. Bill Mosher was retired, but Williamson came up with a hit. Johnson then walked Ben Wagner, and Hyde to load the sacks. Johnson then went to work, and used a full wind-up on Ron Kidd, a .400 hitter before the game. Kidd laid down a suicide squeeze bunt to score Williamson. Johnson played the ball to first. Wagner who took off as soon as Johnson started his wind-up was almost at third when the bunt was made. Wagner kept right on coming home and scored easily. Mass did manage to cut down Hyde as he reached third base. End result: two RBIs for Kidd, and a UMass double play from Johnson to Awdycki to Apicella.

MASSACHUSETTS kept hitting Silver, but the line drives were right at the infielders, and the wind held up the flies to the outfield. The Redmen tied the

UMass Meets UNH In Lacrosse Rivalry

May 12—The red-hot rivalry between the University of New Hampshire and the Massachusetts lacrosse teams continues Wednesday in Durham.

Last year Coach Dick Garber's Redmen won the Northeastern title with an undefeated record in league play but needed a four goals rally in the second half to beat UNH 6-5.

IN 1962, the Wildcats reversed the procedure, outscoring UMass 6-2 after intermission for an 8-7 win.

Massachusetts has no hopes of retaining its Northeastern title this year while UNH needs a victory to keep its slim hopes alive. Currently the Wildcats trail undefeated Williams and Wesleyan in the race.

GARBER'S REDMEN have a fine attack unit, some clever and speedy midfielders, but suffer from a lack of muscle on defense. The football linemen who have made UMass so tough in recent years are missing. There is only one football player on the UMass squad.

By contrast, UNH has 11 football players included among the 18 men who play regularly for Coach Bill Haubrich.

SENIOR STEVE HARRINGTON, a 22 goal scorer last year, is the key man in the UMass attack. He has Charlie Glew, a UNH nemesis in hockey, and Frank Infusino as his partners.

New Hampshire prepared for this three o'clock game in Cowell Stadium with a pair of exhibition wins over the Boston Lacrosse Club 9-6 and the UNH Alumni team 9-5 last week.

Revelers To Revive Varieties

The Revelers got off to a head start last Thursday with the election of officers for the new year. Results of the election were: President, Art Labrie; Vice-President, Charlie Pike; Sec.-Treas., Ann Richards; and Publicity Chairman, Sally Minich.

At a meeting of both new and old Revelers, it was unanimously decided that the group would concentrate its main efforts next year toward reviving the tradition of Campus Varieties. Al Sarno will organize the production.

The Revelers have already swung into action and will have members of the group present at several of the Summer Counseling sessions to continue to promote spirit among the incoming freshmen.

S.U.G. BOARD

Wants S.U. Director Out

by ELWIN McNAMARA

A special sub-committee of the Student Union Governing Board has recommended that Student Union Director William Scott be removed from voting membership on the Board.

In a report submitted to the full Board, the study committee recommended that "the present membership of the Board be re-examined to determine the propriety of awarding the right to vote and debate . . . to the Director of the Student Union and Program Advisor."

The board reached the decision on the grounds that the present situation constitutes "an executive-legislative overlap". The report further stated that some members felt debate was being stifled by Scott's membership on the Board.

Also, the committee recommended that election of a student or faculty member as Secretary of the Governing Board

Admission to the concert will be free.

Thefts Cause Interrogations

by DON BOYD

A rapid increase in the number of "petty thefts" of money, jewelry, and clothing, which Campus Police Chief Alexander "Red" Blasko explained has "spread like wildfire" over the past three weeks, was brought to a head early Thursday morning when a personal interrogation of residents in Van Meter North and South was conducted by Campus Police officers O'Neil and Anderson.

Dean of Women Helen Curtis was also present.

This investigation, which occurred shortly after midnight, followed close on the heels of a similar event Wednesday afternoon in Arnold House that led to the implication of at least one upperclass women in a series of thefts in that building.

The thefts have generally been unrelated but have been found to occur in areas where large concentrations of students normally gather.

In addition to the dormitories, the Education building, Chemistry building, Women's Physical Education building and several fraternities have been mentioned as locations of the increased stealing.

Director of Security John Marchant stated that the "police have been reasonably successful" in apprehending the offenders, although he noted that the theft of personal articles and money

Womens' Rules Battle Finishes Senate Year

by BILL MAHONEY

Under the leadership of Karen Garvin, the Women's Affairs Committee presented the Student Senate with this year's "Major Women's Rules Revisions."

Called the "fruit of much cooperation", the changes will extend the sophomore curfew from 10:30 to 11:00 and the senior curfew to 12:00 midnight.

While objections were raised to the provisions calling for a freshmen curfew (Monday-Thursday) of 8:00 p.m. from Setpember 15, 1964 to October 15, 1964 and the limiting of second semester freshmen to five "late libes", commendation of the whole Committee preceeded the passage of the Women's Rules Revisions.

A bill presented by Senator Jim Allen ('65 Commuter) to recommend to the Faculty Senate that Spring Day be recognized as "an organized and sanctioned function" was also passed.

Tabled to the Constitutional Revisions Committee was a motion by Senator Pete Brown ('65 Married Students) which provided for the study of equitable representation of the married students in the event that Hampshire-Suffolk house is removed as their constituency.

Finished with the year's regular business, President George Michael ('65 Brett) turned the gavel over to Treasurer Joe Piecuch ('65 Baker), as the Senate moved into a Finance Committee of the whole.

Hillel Sponsoring Collection For Miss. Freedom Schools

This summer, 25 freedom schools are being set up by the Council of Federated Organizations to supplement the high school education of 10th and 11th grade students in Mississippi.

The goal of the project is to give broad intellectual and academic experience during the summer and to form a basis for statewide student action. Tenth and eleventh grade students are emphasized because of the need to be assured of having a working force that remains in Mississippi schools.

The curriculum of this program will consist of basic reading, math, grammar, typing, and history; cultural programs; political and social studies; literature; and film programs.

To raise money for this project, the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation is sponsoring a collection in the lobby of the Student Union on Wednesday, May 20th, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. All interested are urged to contribute.

Incoming Freshman Named Twirler

Pretty Jane Mackay, incoming Freshman of the class of 1968, will be featured as twirler next fall with the University Marching Band. Announcement of Jane's new position was made last night by John A. Jenkins, conductor of the Band, following the all campus tryouts in which Jane competed against coeds of all classes. Jane will appear along with Sue Long fellow, Senior twirler from Springfield, Massachusetts.

Daughter of Mrs. J. Grant Mackay, 228 Montgomery Avenue, Oreland, Pennsylvania, Jane traveled to the University of Massachusetts last Tuesday in order to compete. Just sixteen years old, Jane is an honor roll student at Springfield Sr. High School in Oreland. She plans to major in mathematics.

Jane is a student of nationally known twirler, Linda Gross, and expertly handles one, two and special lighted batons. Jane, who has been twirling for the past four years, recently won first place in a twirling competition held in Morrisville, Pennsylvania on May 2.

PROFILE: Mr. Butler

Language Lab Leader

by JOE AUCIELLO

After waking up from a nap while supposedly listening to your lesson in the Language Lab, have you ever wondered who the grey-haired gentleman behind the plate-glass window was? He's Mr. Butler, ex-inventor-soldier-diplomat, and presently the general caretaker of the Lab.

While most of us enjoy the excitement of history from the comfort of an easy chair, Mr. Butler has taken part in two World Wars and a direct part in the reconstruction of Germany after W.W. II. Mr. Butler had charge of the Marshall Plan Housing Program in Germany. Before taking that post, Mr. Butler was the Military Governor of an area in Southern Germany.

During his earlier years, Mr. Butler went in for contact sports. He belonged to wrestling teams and played 18 seasons of football. He is still a formidible competitor when it comes to playing tennis or doing pushups. To celebrate his 66th birthday last week, Mr. Butler did 66 pushups.

Mr. Butler formed his own consulting engineering firm in the late 1930's; but the advent of the Second World War interrupted his plans. He was soon back in uniform and in 1944 was promoted to the command of an Air Service Group.

After service in England and France, Colonel Butler's group was stationed in Germany at the end of the war. There Mr. Butler became interested in the political and economic problems of the Germans, which later lead to his appointment as a Military Governor. Altogether, including his Air Force and State Department service, Mr. Butler spent 11 continuous years in Europe.

Mr. Butler enjoys his work at the Lab and is active in designing and building electronic equipment for it. Also, there he smoothly directs the flow of the 1400 students who use the Lab each week to listen to one of five languages.

A Snaig In The Hand

by INEZ BRAND

Are you tired of elephant and grape jokes? How about a snaig? You know, "a snaig in the hand is worth three in the bush." Nobody really knows what a snaig is, but several opinions are gaining popularity:

1. A snaig is a snom with wire wheels. 2. Snaig is what young men's fancy turns to in spring. 3. And according to the rationalists, a snaig is a run in a lady's nylon. As a famous philosopher once said, "A stitch in time saves snaigs."

J IS FOR JAZZ

Newport Jazz Festival

Last Monday evening, we had the pleasure of attending the 1964 Newport Jazz Festival at kick off press party for the Boston's JAZZ WORKSHOP on Boylston St. Tentative plans were announced and featured guests to perform on July 2-5 include Chet Baker, Louis Armstrong, and Gloria Lynne. Four major concerts will be held. The evening concerts on Friday, Saturday, Thursday will begin at 8:30 and the Sunday concert at 6:30 for the benefit of those who have to start driving home early.

The Tony Chris Trio paid us a visit on Monday evening. Their album is about to be released on the Loudville label entitled, "Penetration at Clearfalls." The trio from Easthampton include John Hunt, Tony Chris, and Springfield's own Jimmy Cottle. One of the selections in the album, "The Glow of Love" was written by Tony and the lyrics by Gene McDaniels.

Today we received the Jazz releases for the month of May from Capitol Records . . . . BLOSSOM DEARIE makes her vocal debut with her album, "May I Come In." A soft, swinging album with such songs as "When Sunny Gets Blue" accompanied by the orchestra of Jack Marshall . . . JUNIOR MANCE'S offering "Get ready, Set, Jump" is a groovy set of twelve including the old tune "Molten Swing." Junior is the pianist who backed up Joe Williams at Newport last summer. . . . Everytime I hear a new NANCY WILSON album, I more readily realize why she is one of the best Jazz singers of today. She sings better with every new release as proven by her latest offering "Today, Tomorrow, Forever." In this album Sweet Nancy swings softly through twelve current hits including, "One Note Samba," "Call Me Irresponsible," and "On Broadway." Her husband, Kenny Dennis, leads the music behind her.

GRAMMY AWARDS ON NEW YORK'S WNEW:

For the best instrumental Jazz performance by either a soloist or a small group, the nominations were "Conversations with Myself" by Bill Evans, "Criss-Cross" by Thelonius Monk and the Quartet, "Dave Brubeck at Carnegie Hall," "4 To Go" by Andre Previn, "Our Man In New Orleans" by Al Hirt, and "Peter Nero In Person."

REZ SAYS: May 29 is Nancy Wilson Day on WACE (Radio 730). For the entire broadcasting day WACE will feature Sweet Nancy plus give away every hour of one of her albums.

Diz Gillespie comes to Springfield College on Friday evening, May 22. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the Memorial Field House on campus. It is sponsored by Cultural Affairs Committee of faculty and students at the College and the concert is open to the public. There is an admission charge.

Les Pyenson of Alpha Epsilon Pi played at the 1956 Newport Jazz Festival. He • played the French Horn with Marshall Brown's Newport Youth Band.

If you're going to be in New York this weekend, the place to go for good JAZZ is the CAFEAU GOGO on Bleeker St. Booked here are the Stan Getz Quartet featuring Astrud Gilberto. Also included on the bill of fare are Adam Keefe, George Carlin, and Toby Reynolds.

We'd like to say some nice things about America's young adult drivers

And we think we've got good reason! Last January, we selected twenty 18- and 19-year-old young men and women through the Junior Achievement program to drive our team of Chevrolets in the Mobil Economy Run, April 3-9. It was the first time any company had relied entirely on drivers with limited experience in this exacting competition.

We brought these young adults—most of them college students, some from the business world—to Arcadia, California, in late February. For six weeks, our expert teachers trained them in the skills of economy driving. Then, on April 3, they set off on the Run, 3,243 miles from Los Angeles to New York.

We were going against the grain. It takes high proficiency to win the Mobil Economy Run. Competition is tough. Why did we rely on drivers with such limited experience?

Chevrolet wanted to give the Chevy Teen Team a chance to prove in front of the nation that they and the 6.5 million licensed drivers in their age bracket are safe, sane people behind the wheel. We felt the Run offered a splendid chance.

The Corvair, Chevy IIs, Chevelles and Chevrolets driven by the Chevy Teen Team in the Mobil Economy Run did remarkably well compared with the class winners in overall miles-per-gallon figures. The final results are a tribute to the high degree of driving skill displayed by the Chevy Teen Team representing the youth of America.

No wonder we're proud of America's young adult drivers. We couldn't have a better reason.

Our Day May Come

Spring Day, fact or fiction, has come and gone, leaving us with a wide variety of questions concerning the possibility of desirability of making it an annual Spring feature.

The advocates of a regular Spring Day, in support of their argument, cite the declining number of institutionalized traditions on this campus, allege the need for a tension-releasing entertainment break before final exams, and even theorize on the therapeutics value of such an event, so that: One Spring Day equals—no panty-raids. Simple, no? No!

The first point is a valid one. Traditions are time-honored characteristics of college life, and are important to the student body's esprit de corps; however, points two and three leave me cold.

For whatever it's worth, I submit that a large majority of students (myself included) would find it much more rewarding to take part in a tension-producing study or reading period just before finals than to cavort on the grass near the campus pond. Then there is that other reason; who decides when we've had enough therapy?

Don't get me wrong! I think that Spring Day is a great idea and a fine tradition which should be revived at the earliest and all that; but I also believe the education of you and me and such to be an infinitely greater idea and an unquestionably finer tradition—so I'm a square.

Let's face it. If Spring Day is to be revived it must be approved by the administration so as to have that day compensated for on the academic calendar. It cannot be otherwise. An academic calendar that was not flexible enough to absorb the days we were absent after the death of President Kennedy, is scarcely equipped to accommodate an unscheduled Spring Day. It is not geared to such emergencies.

Let us hope that the Faculty Senate will act favorably on the request of our Student Senate for a Spring Day in 1965; in the meantime, let us refrain from envolvement in such a puerile truancy as that of an unsanctioned Spring Day. Patience, y' all.

Ban The Draft

To the Editor:

(The following is an interview with Fred Moore, Jr., New England Committee for Non-violent Action taken by Vic Aronow.)

How old are you?

"I am 22."

Did you register for the draft?

"Yes, I registered three months late."

Why?

"Because I viewed registration for the draft as a part of the military machine and as such could not comply with that requirement. But then I did register and applied to be a conscientious objector."

Have you been classified?

"Yes, I was classified 1-O, the conscientious objector classification. However, I have returned the classification card with a letter to the draft board. The letter says in part:

"The fact that the Selective Service System still exists and continues to operate, concerns me now. Registering and applying for the special provision permitted certain religious persons, as I have done, in effect, only contributes to the smooth functioning of the system. Further, any cooperation given Selective Service acts as a psychological gag on those who might voice their opposition to the system.

"The meaning of my loyalty to God and conscience in this case can be simply stated. To fulfill the duties and responsibilities I have to my fellow man, I must be free to follow my conscience. I am not only a conscientious objector to war, but also, to conscription.

"Therefore, I have enclosed with this letter the 1-O classification card, now marked "REFUSED," in order to make clear that it becomes my duty to cease cooperating with the Selective Service System and oppose it forthwith. Understand that I take this action openly, knowingly, and willfully.

"With conscription begins the indoctrination and regimentation of youth, and thus the march toward totalitarianism and war is initiated. Clearly the tyranny of conscription must be abolished."

Why do you feel the draft should be ended?

"Because it is immoral, anti-democratic, and a form of slavery."

What do you mean by a 'form of slavery'?

"Conscription is compulsory service. Such compulsory service which is not freely given, is but another name for involuntary service or slavery."

Where will you go after leaving the Amherst area?

"We will go to Vermont and will be speaking to students about ending the draft there."

LETTERS

To the Editor:

The brothers of TKE take exception to the statement in the article on the front page of Wednesday's Collegian regarding discrimination within this fraternity. TKE does not practice, nor has it ever practiced, racial or religious discrimination in any of its 210 national and international chapters. Of the five largest national fraternities, TKE alone adheres to an openly selective memebrship policy within its chapters. It was cited for this policy in The Status Seekers by Vance Packard.

The by-laws of TKE plainly state: "Throughout its entire history, Tau Kappa Epsilon has never had any provision in its constitution or by-laws or ritual limiting membership on any basis other than college enrollment and satisfactory scholarship, and is virtually the oldest fraternity to have no so-called discriminatory clause, either written, implied, or suggested in any of its international laws or reulations."

We realize how such a point may slip by in the course of a panel discussion, however we hope that neither the ethical responsibility of the Collegian nor the reputation of an individual, a local group of men, or a large national organization has been damaged.

Roy M. Milligan,
Secretary, TKE

To the Editor:

In your May 11 issue of the Collegian, Mr. Feinberg proposes that the United States should take a stronger stand in the Vietnamese border dispute. Should our indirect method of fighting this war by means of 'military aid' be converted into a battlefield where the South Vietnamese could "strike at strategic installations in communist controlled areas by increasing United States Military aid by means of soldiers and military equipment" we might well find ourselves in an undesirable position.

There is every reason to believe that such an increase of personnel, capital, and equipment in South Vietnam would lead to an equally great concentration of power on the part of the Red Chinese. Should this game continue, as well it could, the possibility of the Vietnamese border conflict blossoming into a Third World War becomes an uncomfortable probability.

But I am not unpatriotic; I regret the death of 277 of our men, but I know I would feel worse should be American casualty rate in Southeast Asia increase from a handful a year to tens or hundreds of thousands a year.

I realize the futility of our present situation, but I believe that as there appears no honorable or safe way out of this situation, we must bear the brunt of our loss with all our characteristic courage and faith in our system and our way of life.

Victor Lloyd

To the Editor:

I was extremely pleased to note the addition of a "Faculty Symposium" to the Collegian. (May 4) For too many, the general faculty attitude toward the paper has been a negative one; the appearence of this feature must indicate a definite reappraisal of the paper's quality, and seems to mark a step forward in student-faculty relationships.

Governor Peabody —Bellotti Fight

The 1962 Democratic Party platform was a model of reform principles. To streamline the state government, the platform advocated the abolition of the Governor's Council and electing the Governor and Lt. Governor on the same ticket for a four year term. Other items associated with the reform principles of the party were cutting down the size of the legislature (the number of legislators in our state in relation to the population is the highest in the nation; Result—more patronage must be appropriated to the stand-pat legislators, since there are more of them that must be pleased) letting the Governor appoint department heads and having their terms expire with the Governor's (Can you imagine President Johnson being forced to have a Cabinet of holdovers from the Eisenhower administration?), and forcing the legislature to adjourn in six months, promoting more legislative efficiency? This was the platform on which Endicott Peabody campaigned and for which he fought.

Today Governor Endicott Peabody has been challenged by a fellow Democrat and many people sense a low popularity rating for the Governor.

Governor Endicott Peabody's one problem seems to be a poor public relations staff. His public image is that of a "bumbler". As a result, having asked many people what they thought of Peabody, I would get the reply, "What did he do?". Surprisingly enough I remember having gotten the same reply two years ago when I asked certain people what they thought of Volpe. There seems to be a terrible public attitude that Governors who don't make headlines catching crooks or lowering taxes do not do much else.

When Peabody first came to office he had a tremendous number of progressive proposals for the legislature, many of which were "watered down" by the legislature, others which were completely rejected. Many people have not given the Governor credit for what he tried to get passed as well as what he did get passed. Yet, the percentage of bills proposed by the Governor that were passed, is greater under Peabody than under any other Governor!

First, there was the state's financial problem. Remembering Foster Furcolo's political death over the sales tax, Peabody advocated an income tax to help the state give aid to local towns and cities. To satisfy conservative interests he had the tax cover those whose income was over $2,000 per year instead of only those whose income was over $4,000 a year. As usual, every local political hack paraded himself as the friend of the people vs. Peabody, who wants to soak the poor. The bill was lost and the public had to vote on a referendum, for which Peabody campaigned. Naturally, it didn't get passed. (The public, which thinks that every tax is highway robbery, anyway, to be taken for the personal benefit of the crooks on Beacon Hill, would never vote for a tax.)

Then there was Peabody's fight for the abolition of capital punishment. Peabody actually got the bill passed with Speaker Thompson's support, but strong pressure by the Police Chief's Association caused an about-face by the legislature. Despite the obvious evidence by all research sources that more police officers have NOT been killed (according to other factors, such as population increase) in states where capital punishment has been abolished, sensationalism by the press over a few "cop killings" that occurred at the time of the controversy gave Peabody the public image of being "soft". (He's "soft as a grape", one person told me.) "Getting tough" is a favorite public image of politicians. (So and so's getting tough on Communism, getting tough on juvenile delinquents, getting tough on the bookies, etc.)

Peabody's successes involved an expansion of the junior college facilities started under Foster Furcolo (Furcolo—what did he do when he was Governor?—that "crook" wanted a sales tax), a pay-raise for state employees, revision of the Department of Public Works. He couldn't have been too "soft" to have gotten rid of Jack Ricciardi, head of the department. Ricciardi had a lot of friends on Beacon Hill. Peabody signed a minimum salary bill for elementary and high school teachers but actually had reservations, not because he was against education, but because he thought it unfair for the state government to force local governments to pay more for education without financial aid from the state. State legislators love to spend money for the folks back home without having the courage to raise taxes. Peabody missed out by one vote (Speaker Thompson's) on abolishing the Governor's Council. The Governor will have a four year term starting in 1966, although the Lt. Governor is not on the same ticket (another compromise the legislature forced Peabody to swallow). The Lt. Governor still runs every two years. This week Peabody's pushing for a mass transportation bill in the legislature and he has the support of both labor and business—but there's a catch. It costs money and Peabody's courageous enough to advocate an increase in the state cigarette tax during an election. The question: Is the legislature that courageous?

Why is Francis Bellotti running against Peabody, seeing that Bellotti supported all of Peabody's reform principles in 1962? Bellotti, like many other members of the political profession, wants to achieve election to higher office. The word is out: Robert Kennedy would like to be Governor in 1966 when he will have a four year term. Bellotti must take a stab now or never. Bellotti, in order to make friends with Peabody's enemies, has come out against abolition of the Governor's Council, and, so I've heard, also against putting the Lt. Governor on the same ticket with the Governor, a complete reversal from 1962.

As college students, we must be able to see through the camouflage of public images and judge candidates for public office by the true criteria for election to high public office. You might not like Peabody personally, but if you're a Democrat, and you do not support Peabody, you're not just knifing Endicott Peabody in the back but the entire Democratic party. You're saying, in effect, that any Democratic candidate for high office who takes the party platform literally and means what he says during the campaign is a fool.

Holy Cross Edges Redmen Trackmen In Final Meet Of The Year

by GENE COLBURN

Despite a fine team effort, the varsity track team split its last meet of the season Tuesday at Alumni Field as Holy Cross edged UMass 88½-85½. Brandeis was a far distant third with 12 points. Co-captain Bob "Digger" Brouillet set 4 records. Bob won the mile in 4:15.4, to set a University and meet record. Tom Panke ran his best mile race all year to take third. Digger then came back to run his best double all year as he won the 2 mile in 9:20.6 to establish new Alumni Field and meet records in that event. John Harrington finished third in the 440 yard hurdles, but his time of :57.1 established a new University record. John also took a second in the 120 yard high hurdles. The varsity relay team accounted for the other University record as they ran 3:27.7.

JOHN MEDERIOS won the broadjump (21'3½"), took second in the high jump and tied for second in the 100, finished third in the triple jump and was fourth in the 220. Sophomore John Hall won the 100 (10.2) and was fourth in the high jump. Bob Pendelton ran his best race all year as he took fourth in the 880, and Bob Larson took fourth in the 440 yard intermediate hurdles. Doug Sloane won the 220 (22.6). Jim Wrynn and Tom Panke took third and fourth respectively in the 2 mile. Dave Sadowsky, Bob Murray, Phil Lizotte, and Jim Dennis swept the pole vault. Sadowsky's winning leap was 11'6". Craig Erickson ran his best race all year as he took third in the 440 with a time of 50.5.

GUS ANAGOSTOPOLOS WON THE HAMMER with a toss of 164'9" as Dick Karagosian took third. Gus also took a fourth in the triple jump. Dick Delve and Dave Connors took second and third respectively in the javelin. Milt Morrin won the discus (138'3") as Doug Renwick took a fourth. Doug also placed in the shot-put.

The team closed the season with a 5-2 record. There are now only 2 meets left—the Yan Con Championships this Saturday at New Hampshire, and the New Englands on May 23. Saturday the Redmen will have to fight it out for second place with Rhode Island, as the defending champion Maine should have no trouble repeating its victory of last year.

at 0:51 of the first period it looked as if UMass was going to break the game wide open. The Redmen came up with four straight goals in about four minutes. Charlie Glew scored his 13th of the year at 2:56 with an assist to Fran Casey. This was followed by Casey's first of the game at 5:18 as Fran came around on the right and poked the ball into the goal. Less than a minute later Co-Capt. Steve Harrington scored on a beautiful fake giving him ten goals for the year. Then at 7:06 Steve Vengrow got his first of the year with an assist going to Harrington and the Redmen led 4-1. The Wildcats came back to get two goals in 22 seconds, one each by Paul Lovallo and Bruce MacLean, but Fran Casey scored another in the last minute of the period and UMassB led 5-3 at the end of the first quarter.

THE SECOND PERIOD was scoreless until 11:35 when Ken Olson scored for U.N.H. putting the Wildcats only one goal behind. Then with time running out in the half Tom Allison scored at 14:59 to tie the game. The Wildcats had scored with one second left and made it a new ball game. Though the Redmen did get the lead again this goal was a key point in the game.

CHARLIE GLEW got his 14th of the season on an extra-man situation at 9:32 of the third period with an assist to Fran Casey. Then on a fast break Casey scored his 3rd goal of the game and 12th of the season with an assist to Harrington at 12:19. This put UMass in front 7-5 but they were not able to score again. The Wildcats' Tom Packard scored at 12:48 and a minute later Mike Eastwood tied the game with a goal. Then in the last minute of the period Pete Ballo got the go-ahead goal for New Hampshire and the score read U.N.H. 8, Mass 7 at the end of three quarters.

In the last period the Redmen could only get three shots off against the Wildcats' strong defense, while U.N.H. came up with three goals on 11 shots to wrap it up 11-7. The last three goals were by Mike Eastwood, Sterling Hammond, and Tom Allison.

Redmen Golfers Win; Down H.C. & Stockbridge

by DAVE McIVER

The Redmen golf squad continued their winning ways this week when they downed Stockbridge and Holy Cross. This brings the overall team record thus far to 9-3 with all the losses being 4-3 decisions.

JACK DONASKY again has proven to be the most consistent player on the squad. Against Stockbridge he fired a 74 in ousting his opponent 3-2, and in winning his match against Holy Cross he shot 75 on a showery afternoon at the Orchards C.C. in South Hadley.

In the team match against Stockbridge the two teams were tied at the end of the regulation eighteen 3-3. Capt. George DeFalco won the playoff and in turn the team victory on the second extra hole.

In New Hampshire David Wells made a great come from behind victory. He was five down with six holes to go; and won six straight holes to win his match one up. Frank Pluta was medalist in Portsmouth with a fine 78 over a long wind-blown course.

THE FINAL MATCH of the season will be played against MIT this Monday at home at 1:30.

Dean Curtis, when questioned concerning these incidents, emphasized that "it is foolish to leave personal property unattended."

She stressed the importance of dealing with each student offender on an individual basis, but also felt that those who have been guilty of such thefts have "violated the standards of honesty and integrity which must be expected of college students".

The campus police have employed a number of methods in tracing the stolen money and articles.

score. Piken came out of the game in the eleventh after tiring. Rod Corey was called on to do the duty. In the last of the thirteenth, the Rams wound the game up in fine fashion. Corey hit Hallworth. Art Peterson singled to center and took second on the throw to third. Frank Peterson walked to fill the sacks and Dave Forsythe came up with his third hit of the game through the drawn in infield to decide the contest.

Corey took the loss, his fourth behind two wins. He is 1-4 in the conference despite an ERA of 1.24. Della Piana, Crane, and Simone each had three hits for Mass. Awdycki, Apicella and Piken had two each. Mass now stands at 3-5 in the conference and 6-7 overall. Their next action is at Alumni Field Saturday against the University of New Hampshire. Mike Johnson is expected to pitch for Mass.

be closely studied. Scott is present Secretary.

Expansion of the Governing Board was also recommended. This would be accomplished by the election of three additional students, and according to the committee, would assure adequate student representation, greater student continuity, and further, would act to remove any doubt amongst students that the Board is not operating in their best interests.

Scott told the Collegian that he could "not care less". He stated that the Board was an educational experience for students, and that he was favorable to student responsibility as expressed on the Governing Board. Much, Scott added, is contingent upon the membership of the Board, when relations between it and the Director are discussed.

In addition to Board membership, the committee expressed concern over debate, feeling that "from meeting to meeting, the Board totters on the brink of an abyss of trivia". Greater reliance on individual department heads was called for.

It was pointed out that the Board had debated three weeks over whether or not to move a piano yet passed, with little debate, an expenditure of $35,000.

In closing its report, the committee recommended greater coverage by campus publications in order to "increase the awareness of the campus at large . . . and as a means to check any apathetic or pathetic lapses by the Board."

Fall Further In Conference

Redmen Nine Downed By URI

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts seems to have fallen in the habit of playing wild baseball games. On Wednesday the club traveled to Kingston to take on the University of Rhode Island, and came away with their fifth consecutive conference loss on the road, this time in 13 innings by an 8-7 score.

Massachusetts came up with 17 hits to URI's 7 but couldn't seem to bring the men home when necessary. Mass stranded 14 runners and URI 12, in the battle of conference also-rans.

ROSS PIKEN worked the first 11 innings for the Redmen, five hits, and seven runs, six of which were earned. He also walked 12 and struck out 13, a couple of interesting statistics. As could be imagined, he threw a lot of pitches, some 201 of them to be exact.

Most of these came in the early innings as Piken was in and out of trouble very often. Mass scored in the top of the first as Joe Apicella doubled and Dennis Della Piana singled him home. Rhode Island responded WITH THREE IN THEIR HALF of the inning. A walk, a texas league single, and an infield bleeder loaded the bases. Piken then uncorked a wild pitch to allow a run to score. Al Marolto then hit a checked swing grounder that got between first and second for two more runs.

Mass tied the game in the third as Crane singled, was forced at second by Apicella, and Awdycki singled. Della Piana got his second RBI with a single, and Tony Simone singled home another.

THE RAMS came up with three more in their half of the inning. After two were out, a walk and a hit batter put two men on. Bruce Hallworth then smashed a three run homer to open a 6-3 lead. That was all the scoring for the Rams until the ninth, and all the hits they got until the 11 as Piken settled down and hurled a fine game.

Mass came back in the top of the fourth with two more. Kuczynski singled and Piken doubled him to third. Karl Kamena then walked to load the bases. Apicella hit a grounder to the shortstop who made the play at the plate. The throw was in the dirt and the run scored. Della Piana followed with a walk to get his third RIB. Simone then popped out to end the inning with the bases still loaded.

MASS struck again to tie the score in the sixth. Bill Crane singled, was sacrificed to second by Apicella and rode home on a single by Della Piana, who knocked in his fourth and last run in a fine effort for the day.

Mass took the lead in the ninth as Neil Harris reached on an error and took all the way to third on Kuczynski's sacrifice bunt. He then crossed the plate on a grounder by Piken.

The bottom of the ninth saw the Rams tie the game with two outs. Steve Thornton had a 3 and 2 count on him when Piken came ever so close on a pitch that would have ended the game, but it went for a ball and the Rams had a second life. On the first pitch to Mike Fitzgerald, Thornton went down and went to third as the ball went into short center. He paused at third as Crane ran the ball into the infield, then took off for the plate. Crane's throw was late and off the plate as Thornton scored to tied the game at 7 all.

MASS had men on second and first with one out in both the tenth and eleventh, but couldn't

LOSES TO BKP

AEPi Smashes TEP In IFC Playoffs

The "A" Division of the I.F.C.'s intramural softball league was in a three way tie Tuesday night as a result of AEPi's loss to Sigma Phi Epsilon 11-9. The three teams were AEPi, BKP, and TEP. Wed. night TEP was eliminated by AEPi in a fiercely fought, exciting game.

A large crowd was on hand to watch this first round of the eliminations. They saw a well played defensive game, although a little lacking in sportsmanship.

THE PI'S jumped off to a three run lead in the first inning behind the hitting of Larry Kelevitch, Johnny Parnell, Bart Brass, and Richie Charloff. As it turned out this was all they needed for the victory.

Bob Schwartz, the TEP pitcher, pitched a good game, however, the fielding behind him was a little shakey. In the first inning two errors caused as many runs to cross the plate. Without these errors, the whole complexion of the game might have been changed.

The big hero of the game, was Stevie Bello of AEPi. Little Stevie played one of the best games at third base ever seen in an intramural game. On at least three occasions, Bello, saved runs from scoring by making sparkling defensive plays. On one occasion, with men on second and third with only one out, Bello made a miraculous stab of a viciously hit line drive and then doubled up the man at third to end the inning. It was just this type of solid defensive play that won the game for the PI's and completely demoralized the Tep-pers.

This was the second time that AEPi has beaten TEP this year. The first time, in a regular league game, the score was even more lopsided with AEPi coming out on top 13-2.

In the final round of the "A" league playoffs last night AEPi lost to BKPhi in an extra inning game which was forced to go under the lights. Trailing behind the Pi's for most of the game the play the Beta Phi's were able to tie the game, 3-3, in the sixth inning. After four extra innings of play the Beta Phi's were able to break the tie to win the title with a score of 6-3.

Lacrosse Team Succumbs To Powerful UNH Squad

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The Redmen lacrosse team journeyed Wednesday to Durham, New Hampshire to play the U.N.H. Wildcats. The Redmen had leads of 4-1, 5-3, and 7-5, but finally succumbed to the big Wildcat team 11-7. Fran Casey was the individual star for the Redmen with three goals and two assists, while linemate Charlie Glew had two goals. New Hampshire was sparked by two-goal performances by Mike Eastwood, Pete Ballo, and Tom Allison. Eastwood is remembered as the fine fullback of the U.N.H. football squad.

POPULATION BOOM

Huxley Favors Birth Control

by BILL MAHONEY

An exceptionally attentive and enthusiastic audience composed of students and professors from throughout the four college area overflowed Bowker Auditorium last Thursday evening to hear the lecture delivered by Sir Julian Huxley on "The Population Explosion."

Calling the problem "the most alarming event in history," Huxley told the audience that our world's population will have doubled by 2,000 and we are increasing by 160,000 people, or a good size city, a day.

Citing the rise of modern medicine and the general improvement of health conditions as the cause of a lessened death rate, Huxley spoke of a projected world census of 20 billion in 2064—giving each person about one square yard of the Earth's surface.

The noted biologist went on to say, "The affect of the population explosion is felt in every aspect of human life . . . Ecology (the study of people in relation to their environment) will be the central science of the future."

In discussing the depletion of the world's resources, Huxley pointed to California's need to go 850 miles for her water.

Turning to the Aswan Dam in Egypt, Huxley estimated that when completed, it will be able to handle the excess population that has appeared since its beginning and no more.

SIR JULIAN HUXLEY, as he spoke at Bowker last Thursday.

Interjecting humorous notes throughout his lecture, the world famous Englishman touched on the matter of America's cities as he called the blending of surburbia and the slums—"Slurb."

Huxley further warned that, "Man is in danger of becoming the cancer of his planet," he then spoke of the moral obligation to prevent the increasing

Warren Harding Was "Worst" President

by GEORGE MASSALEM

"Nice guys always finish last," were the words of Prof. Dean Albertson of Brooklyn College in the lecture "But he looked like a President". The man is Warren G. Harding, the president who finished last. Prof. Albertson described him as one of the nicest men that ever walked this earth; yet, he also described him as the worst president we have ever had. Being nice was one of Harding's only virtues. Thus, Dr. Albertson began a delightful lecture which was to be a comprehensive character study.

Harding's politcal speeches were empty yet he was able to capture a crowd by his patriotic sincerity for he was that. In the beginning of his career he was a Taft Republican and voted against those "dam Progressives".

Prof. Albertson claimed that Harding had been a front runner for the Presidency since 1916. When he was nominated in 1920 and won. He was a man who didn't particularly want to be President. He felt that he was lacking the qualifications for the job and he was right. Dr. Albertson claimed that the deciding factor in the Presidential race was the League of Nations (Harding was against the League and so were voters).

Harding's term began four years of the worst graft that has ever plagued our national government, the worst being The Tea Pot Dome (Oil reserves in Wyoming) scandal. Harding himself became a part of the graft by his irresponsibility as president: while he spent most of his time playing golf, illegality was carried on right under his nose.

Notorious was Nan Britton who was his mistress. Notorious, also, was Harding's ability to consume whisky without getting drunk. He died while making a trip around the country intent on showing the American people who their President was. He was a "man funny in part" and "sad in part". His story has a grim reality about it.

Warren G. Harding was the man wanted by the American people. He was bad as a President but he was voted in by a landslide. If he is to be blamed the American people also share this blame.

Indiana Gov. Matthew Welsh Presents Talk

Governor Matthew E. Welsh of Indiana, winner in that state's recent presidential primary, will speak on the Indiana election at 8 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

Welsh's address is sponsored by the government department. The governor will discuss Governor Wallace and events of the recent campaign.

Welsh recently came into national prominence when his slate of Democratic national convention delegates, pledged to President Johnson, finished strongly ahead of unpledged delegates headed by Alabama Governor George C. Wallace.

Welsh has been governor in Indiana since 1961. Before that, he served two years as a state representative in the Indiana general assembly and four years, 1955-59, as a state senator. He was Democratic floor leader in the Indiana senate in 1957 and 1959.

Age Limit On Cars Now 25

by PAM BRADY

Col. John Marchant has announced several changes in the Campus Motor Vehicle Regulations for 1964-65.

Next year the eligibility requirement for students will be 25 years of age rather than the present requirement of 21 of age. All seniors are still ellgible to register their motor vehicles.

All registration will be done through the campus police station. Students will register through the dean only when there are extenuating circumstances.

The hours when motor vehicles may not be operated on campus have been extended from the present hours of 7 a.m.-5 p.m. to 7 a.m.-6:00 p.m. This change is due to the many classes which get out at 5:15 p.m.

All students are held responsible for knowing the rules governing their use of a motor vehicle as soon as they register a motor vehicle at the University. Colonel Marchant also warns that all rules are strictly enforced.

Village Inn Loses License Following Police Hassle

(Reproduced from Amherst Journal Record)

Loud disagreement reverberated from the high ceilings of the selectmen's room Tuesday morning.

Police Chief Francis Hart and six officers told selectmen, as liquor licensing authorities, of three students they picked up at the Village Inn Tuesday evening, May 5. The students, all under 21, according to their ID cards, denied the bartender asked for their cards.

At the opposite end of the long row of visitors sat innkeeper Bradford Parker and his lawyer, Paul Ford. Ford asked selectmen to call the students for direct testimony before deciding on suspending Parker's license.

Seven policemen reported they visited the inn at 10 p.m. "The tables were loaded," said the

New Distribution Plan For Commuter Papers

If you once made it your habit to pick up the Collegian at the student union during the day, rather than at the dorm, you've probably been exposed, perhaps with some annoyance, to a new distribution system for the paper. To assure that Commuters get their paper, Collegians are being handed out at the check room or lobby counter with the showing of a newly issued "commuter-I.D." This means the on-campus student is no longer able to cop a copy of the paper from the commuter stack in the Collegian office.

The plan will remain in operation for the rest of the semester, and probably for a test run again starting next Fall. The third and last Caesurus and Yahoos will also be distributed to I.D. bearing commuters in this fashion.

The theory behind the system: to prevent on campus students from beating the commuters to their rightful copies of publications in the upstairs offices.

We can only say, if you are annoyed by the new trial system, be patient; make suggestions if you have them, and we will work things out.

ID's

All students who failed to get their ID pictures taken on Counseling Day MUST report to the Commonwealth Room of the SU on Tuesday, May 26, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. This is the final chance to get ID's for next year.

WMUA

Broadcasting To Conclude

This week, WMUA concludes its regular broadcasting for the semester. The final broadcasts of the Education Block will be Monday and Tuesday from 7-8 p.m. On Monday at 7 p.m. Professor Joseph Langland will continue his discussion of the poet Robert Frost on "Masterpieces of Western Literature". At 7:30 p.m., The "History of Music" series will be concluded with the fifth in Ron Engel's presentation of the history of Jazz.

On Tuesday at 7 p.m., WMUA will present "All America Wants to Know." This will be a presentation of the documentary broadcast of "Must It Be Bail or Jail?" This program brings up the point that the institution of bail providing money or surety to guarantee a man's appearance in court for trial is not fair.

"Meet the Professor" at 7:30 Tuesday will present Dr. Feldman of the Psychology Department. During the interview, Dr. Feldman will discuss the "Critique Magazine."

As it has in the past, WMUA will broadcast classical music 24 hours a day throughout the duration of the finals period. This will begin on Wednesday, May 20, at 12:00 noon. Included in the music played will be the music discussed in the Music one course offered by the University. This will be played from 6-7 p.m. each evening.

Openings Still Available For Peace Corps

Graduating seniors still have an opportunity to get into Peace Corps summer training programs, according to Robert J. Morrissey, campus Peace Corps Liaison, but it will take some fast action.

Interested seniors can get a Peace Corps Volunteer Questionnaire from their post office or their Peace Corps Liaison Officer. The Questionnaire should be completed and mailed to the Director of Recruiting, Peace Corps, Washington, D.C. 20525 as soon as possible.

Mr. Morrissey reports that 59 students at the University of Massachusetts have applied to the Peace Corps since school opened last fall. 28 former students are now serving and 5 others have completed their two year tours.

More June grads have applied this year than in the three previous years since the Peace Corps was established, but opportunities are also greater than ever. More than 5,000 applicants will be selected for summer training.

Professor Seeks Aid For Books For Freedom School

Professor Staughton Lynd of Spellman College in Atlanta, Georgia, is seeking aid for books on the history of the Negro and the South, to be used this summer for the Mississippi Freedom School project.

In correspondence with Rabbi Louis Ruchames, Jewish chaplain at UMass, Mr. Lynd has selected five books as a basic library in Negro history: Lay my Burden Down, B.A. Botkin; Life and Times of Frederick Douglass, Frederick Dougiass; Souls of Black Folk, W. E. DuBois; Slave and Citizen, Frank Tannenbaum; and The Strange Career of Jim Crow, C. Vann Woodward.

Needing at least twenty-five copies of each book, Mr. Lynd has asked for contributions. A packet of books costs $5.00, but contributions of any amount will be appreciated.

The collection will be held in the lobby of the Student Union this Wednesday, May 20th from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., under the sponsorship of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation.

Two resident schools, each 20 days long, are planned for the summer project. The schools supply what Negroes are not learning in high school in Mississippi, giving a broad intellectual experience to bring back to the state, and forming the basis of statewide action based on increased awareness. The curriculum will not only include basic math, grammar, history, reading, and typing, but also political and social studies, cultural and social studies, cultural programs, and films.

Another aim is to develop leaders in specific organizational skills needed for the development of southern Negro communities. Both professional and non-professional teachers will be used in staffing the schools.

Undergraduate Play Contest

A notice to all aspiring playwrights in the UMass community: The New England Theatre Conference, on the lookout for young and undiscovered O'Neils and Millers, is sponsoring a contest for original, unproduced, and unpublished one-act plays.

The contest, entitled "A 1964 Showcase" is an attempt to encourage New England playwrights and to assist the members of the Theatre Conference in the production of new plays.

The three plays judged the best will be awarded cash prizes of $25 dollars each, and will be given performances by leading community and educational theatre groups at a "Showcase" performance. A leading New England drama critic will comment on the award-winning plays.

The deadline for submission of plays is September, 1964. Contest rules and further information about the New England Theatre Conference are posted on the bulletin board of the Speech Department, Bartlett Hall.

to go along with six walks and five Redmen errors. Mass mustered only five hits with four walks and three UNH errors. The Wildcats left 13 men on base to five for the Redmen.

The loss was the second for Johnson against two wins. The Redmen have only a few opportunities left to get above the .500 mark for the year. The team will play at home Tuesday against UConn, then travel to Holy Cross on Wednesday. After that the club is off until May 30 when they play Springfield. The club will wind up the year with a commencement week game with Amherst. They were rained out of another game with Amherst earlier in the year and might try to make that game up.

Credit Offered Next Year For Orchestra Participation

Next semester the University Orchestra will begin its second season under the baton of its founder Ronald Steele. In order to continue growing in size and stature the Orchestra is looking to the students for continued support.

All interested students are cordially invited to join this new and expanding student organization. Next fall the Orchestra hopes to include such challenging works as the Brahms' First Symphony or Sibelius' Symphony #2 in its broadened repertoire. The need for student musicians is great, and the experience of orchestra playing is rewarding.

Credit is now being offered to all students in the Four College area who wish to participate in the weekly orchestra rehearsal and the section rehearsals held by arrangement duing the day. All interested persons may contact Ronald Steele at the Music Department in Old Chapel.

Course credit is now being offered to all students participating in the University Orchestra under the direction of Ronald Steele.

Chemistry Dept. To Offer PHD.

The department of chemical engineering at the University will offer a Ph.D. degree next year.

With the introduction of the new program, expected to begin in the fall term, UMass becomes the fourth institution in the Bay State and one of eight in New England to offer the Ph.D. in chemical engineering.

Dr. John W. Eldridge, head of the department of chemical engineering, said "the unsatisfied demand for highly trained chemical engineers" was the compelling reason for the school's latest advanced study program.

The department has had a master's degree program since 1957. There are currently 25 students enrolled in graduate study.

Specific areas of study and research within the Ph.D. program will include process dynamics and optimization, thermodynamics and kinetics, heat and mass transfer, application of electronic computers to process control, advanced applied engineering mathematics, nuclear engineering, and other subjects related to the chemical engineering field.

Extensive facilities and research equipment are already available within the department and in supporting areas, according to Dr. Eldridge. It is planned to augment facilities as the program expands.

The "Prophetic" Voice

by AXEL

Alas, the end of the year is come. Productive for some, devastating for others (as usual), the two semesters are almost history.

You don't think too much about who will be back next semester during final times; or you try not to. You worry about yourself, your grades, your summer work, finances, innumerable problems. Yes, you—second person plural, and all that worry is typical, even necessary to keep you on your toes 'til the end of finals.

Next semester, if you return, you look around for old buddies. Little by little you remember so-and-so and realize he didn't make it back, or luckier, that he graduated. That's the way it goes up here—the academic mill, you'll think.

It's the time, now, when you might be a bit too nostalgic; spiral into physical or mental lows. There isn't much consolation if it happens, but keep in mind that it does. Cheer up the worried faces that might indicate the problem—finalitis.

Our yearly editorial for mental hygene has two tid-bits to offer. Remember: "Life is made up of many moments, and this is one of them."

Then, "College is a place of which it can truly be said that you have had the course!"

The notebook wishes you good-grading!

Special Report

Those Who'd Act

"...SWORDS INTO PLOWSHARES..." OR, WAS ISAIAH REALLY A COMMUNIST?

Last Saturday morning, May 16, eight young men and women picketed the Armed Forces Day Parade in Amherst. Their signs protested conscription and urged "War on Poverty, not Viet Nam," "Pacem in Terris", "Thou shalt not kill", "End the Draft NOW", and "NO to nuclear, chemical, and biological weaponry".

As required by law, the picket line kept moving during the parade and for a short while after. Hundreds of people saw and read the signs. Some applauded, many jeered; the majority were thoughtful, and no one appeared indifferent. The eight people consider, therefore, that the demonstration was a total success.

During the Flying Redmen exhibition, a UMass student (one of the group) was handing out leaflets to the crowd. The man at the reviewing stand microphone called him over (through the P.A. system) and demanded to see a leaflet. The leaflet read "...And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war anymore." The man then demanded that the student cease handing out the leaflet. The student asked if the Bible was now being considered a subversive book, then obediently rejoined the picket line; but not all eyes were on the drill team. Immediately many people went to the man at the P.A. and asked to have a look at the "subversive" leaflets. The students purpose thus the better accomplished!

One disturbing observation from the demonstration was the reaction of many young men of near draft-age: that they think we've always had a Draft law and it would be impossible to change it, even if we desired.

They must be taught or reminded that there has not always been a Draft law; that the founding fathers of this country were very much opposed to conscription and standing-armies as detrimental to individual liberty, and that the law which does exist is one which must be renewed by each new Congress.

They should also be made aware, here and throughout the country, that there are alternatives to military service for those conscientiously opposed to war or to learning how to kill. Alternatives civilian work in Public Health, Education, and Welfare is offered. Prison is the lot for many others; there are those who would rather go to jail than join the Army, for in jail they will not learn to kill women and children. They know the answer to the song's question: "What does it take to be human? Love, not hate."

Dorm Room Treasure Hunt

I found this morning, in our lobby, a rather interesting memorandum from the Director of Housing, dated April 30, 1964, to all Heads of Residences and Fire Counselors, Men's and Women's Residences, concerning the Annual Residence Hall Inspection. What an interesting thing it is! In eleven long, single-spaced pages it details, dorm by dorm, room by room, all the violations of several categories of University regulations found by an inspecting team, presumably during the Spring Recess.

The first category, "Fire Hazard", is fairly straight-forward. The most common violation in this list is having bulbs too large for their sockets; but running a close second are wastebasket violations (having paper or plastic baskets, instead of the metal ones required). But a few unique and interesting things do appear here: a beer advertisement light plugged into the overhead socket (in Middlesex), a can of gasoline (removed by campus security officers, it says; in Butterfield), and a flammable hula skirt hanging on a wall (in Van Meter).

The second category, "Violated University Regulations", is a little more interesting. It is in this list that such things as a "room resembling a nudist camp bar room" are found, 6 beds in a room (both in Baker), 12 whiskey bottles (in Berkshire), alcoholic beverages in a grad suite (in Brooks), U of M furniture (in many rooms), a steam iron, hot pot, and four flatirons in a counselor's room (in Plymouth), dog food, two rooms "freshly painted, not by University painters", and eight instances of something called "evidence of candles having been used irresponsibly" (all in Van Meter). The most common violation in this list was simple untidiness, with trunks coming in a close second.

For sheer variety of material, the third and longest portion of the report details what are called "Security Violations." This is rather a catch-all term. Here is a list of some various types of signs found in campus rooms: "Obstetrics Geneology", "Noise Neck Rd.", "U.S.A. Forest", "Harvard University" (in Baker), "I Want YOU" sign, highway route signs—No. 21, No. 285, No. 40 (in Butterfield), "Fallout Shelter" sign (in Chadbourne), "Danger: Use Safety Glasses", "Dead End", "Danger—High Voltage" (in Goman), "Notice for Sanitary Reasons" (in Greenough), "St. Luke's Hospital", "Acushnet Ave.", "One Way" (all in one room in Hills North), "Mt. Wachusetts Ski School", "College Dump" (in Middlesex), "Camp Boss—Do not chip or deface trees", "Ladies Room" (in Mills), "No Parking", "Tow Zone", "Detour", "Fallout", "Men's Room Downstairs" (all in Van Meter), and an "MDC Keep Out" sign (in Wheeler).

One can only surmise that such a variety of signs is necessary to point the way through the gaps in that densest of all forests, the handbook of University regulations.

Other material of non-sign nature, turned up in delightful variety: public bulletin boards, SCUBA tanks, shotgun shells, gas masks, Amherst Creamery milk cans, cement blocks, shovels, and yellow highway cones. Van Meter though, had the best assortment of all: a Biltmore Hotel coffee pot, more than a dozen whiskey bottles (in one room), a U.S. Mail sack, hunting knife, telephone receivers, and a bull whip (labeled on the Report "display or weapon?").

Reading this curious list is quite an experience; wondering just who it was that went looking, and what their reactions must have been to some of the items, such as that nudist camp barroom. How do you suppose they knew it was a nudist bar—had they ever been in one? And do you suppose temptation crept in when they spotted that half bottle of gin in Mills?, or that unspecified "alcoholic beverage" in Brooks? We can only wonder. But it is reassuring to know two things—first; Big Brother hasn't forgotten you, and second; UMies are a fun-loving and acquisitive lot.

To those of you who made the list, I offer my congratulations. I offer special commendation to the girls of Van Meter, who consistently outclassed and outshone all other dormitories in number and variety of entries on this inspection report. Keep up the good work, girls! To those poor unfortunates who didn't make an entry, what can I say except . . . find something exotic for next semester.

OBJECTIONS TO DRAFT OBJECTORS

To the Editor:

Yes, the draft certainly should be continued. "With conscription begins the indoctrination and regimentation of youth, and thus the march toward totalitarianism and war is initiated. Clearly the tyranny of conscription must be abolished." I know nothing of Mr. Moore nor his organization. However, having spent several years in the Far East working for USIA, this sounds to me like much of the exaggerated distortions that emanate from Communist China, North Korea and North Viet Nam. How could any U.S. born American, other than the American Negro, be familiar with slavery and tyranny?

Taking for granted the privilege of being a citizen of the USA is natural perhaps, but not justified. Many young men immigrate to this country with the understanding that they must enter our military service within six months after they arrive. This is a fine opportunity for them, and one which is eagerly snapped up by many; but why do we have to have young men from other nations assume our responsibilities. Being born here by the Grace of God commits us to these responsibilities. Our Negroes assume them without enjoying the basic privileges of their citizenship. In obeying the laws of the land we fulfill our duties and responsibilities we have to our fellow men. This includes Selective Service.

To be able to spend all our life following our own pursuits, living our life the way we want to live it as only Americans can, and be required to spend two years or less in return for these privileges, seems a small price indeed. In some countries, like Korea, once you are in the Army, you cannot get out if they do not want to release you.

From my limited knowledge of the subject, no one has more opportunities for draft deferment than college students, although the four years of apprenticeship necessary in many trades are just as important to the future careers of those young men. The idea these days, seems to be to go to college with that deferment, and when that is about to run out, get married.

If any young man is anxious to avoid the draft, then let him join the Peace Corps. This will defer him for at least two more years, and by that time a law may have been passed making it possible for Peace Corps duty to suffice for military duty. At the same time a valuable lesson of appreciation for all that America offers will assuredly have been gained, and self-sacrifice demanded, an all too rare occurrence for many young people in these times.

If Mr. Moore is not willing to abide by the will of our freely elected government in this matter, it is suggested that he take up citizenship in some other country where military service is regarded with the respect that our military deserves but does not get, and conscription is not necessary.

J. F.

To the Editor:

To more effectively rid the United States of the atrocious military machinery, I suggest that the Ban-the-Draft Group join the Armed Forces and infiltrate from within. In this way it will be possible to reach the drafted soldier. He will have a grudge to bear against the United States for drafting him. Through effective organization, you could coordinate the movement, causing large scale insubordination throughout the world. Using the military group now under your power, it will be possible to do away with the undemocratic, immoral, and enslaving draft. Then the group can institute a regime of their own based on real freedom of speech, freedom of will, and freedom of movement.

Help Needed

To the Editor:

In today's Collegian you will see news of an opportunity to provide much-needed books for use in the "Freedom Schools" of Mississippi this summer.

Many students and faculty ask what they can do to make a constructive contribution to the educational task that must be done if we are to survive the American racial crisis without disaster. Here is a chance to do something constructive. We hope many will be moved to contribute toward the price of a single packet of five books. Those who can contribute smaller amounts are encouraged to do so. Every dollar will count towards improving the educational opportunities of Negro school children in Mississippi.

complaint. Fifty to 75 students made hasty exits, "some by the window."

After the detailed complaint and student statements were read, Ford snapped that it was "hearsay." He claimed students are afraid police will take them to court. "Of course they'll say I.D.'s weren't checked. They lie."

When asked by Chairman Norman MacLeod if he doubted the police report, Ford retorted, "Every bit of it." The lawyer said that without witnesses the proceeding was not a "hearing." "It's unfair. It's unconstitutional," he declared.

Hart boomed frequently, "You have your witnesses," pointing to policemen present.

"You couldn't prosecute this case in court," Ford countered.

"It' a beautiful case," the chief contended.

On busy nights the inn uses a photo machine called a "Regiscope" to picture I.D. cards and students. Parker said it wasn't put into action until about 9:30 that Tuesday. He added that he expected Tuesday to be "quiet." He had no advance notice that University classes were cancelled the following day.

A regiscope film taken that night is being developed.

At one point selectmen left the room and returned with the word that the hearing could be put off a week.

Ford pressed to have the students in for examination by police and cross-examination by himself.

Hart objected that he had no legal means of summoning them. Ford suggested the license authorities had power of subpoena.

The selectmen stepped out of the room once more. This time they made their decision. They suspended the inn liquor license for two weeks beginning May 18.

world suffering and the need for the availability and dissemenation of birth control information.

Huxley reminded the audience of an old nursery rhyme that he paraphrased; "There was an old woman who lived in a shoe. She had no children. She knew what to do."

Stressing the need for responsible family planning, Huxley said, "We must get the unmanageable increase down to manageable proportions."

He went on to suggest the establishment of an institution to give advice on birth control.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS

Lacrosse Team Ends Season With Strong Win Over WPI

by MORRIS SHUBOW

The Redmen lacrosse team ended the season Saturday with an 11-7 victory over Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Fran Casey and Gordie Webb each scored three goals and Dick Baird was superlative in the goal, holding W.P.I. to one goal in the three quarters he played. Charlie Glew had two goals and two assists while Co-Capt. Steve Harrington contributed a goal and three assists, the Redmen finished the season with a 6-5 record.

THE FIRST PERIOD was scoreless until 11:19 when Fran Casey scored with an assist to Steve Harrington. This was followed with goals by Harrington, assisted by Co-Capt. Frank Infusino Charlie Glew from Harrington, and Gordie Webb unassisted. The Redmen led 4-0 at the end of the first quarter. Fran Casey scored the only goal in the second period with the assist by Harrington on an extra-man situation. The score at halftime was 5-0 UMass. Dick Baird, the Redmen goalie, was shutting out W.P.I. coming up with 7 saves in the first half.

CHARLIE GLEW GOT HIS 16th GOAL of the year at 5:04 of the third period, and a minute later, Gordie Webb got his second of the game, set up by Glew. The Redmen led 7-0. But at 6:56 Ernie Chenoweth scored for Tech and Worcester had their first goal. With a six-goal bulge in the third quarter Redmen Coach Dick Garber decided to take out goalie Baird and to give Sophs Tod Flaherty and Bob Lawson valuable game experience.

Al Morris scored his fourth goal of the year with an assist to Soph Billy Houde. Then Gordie Webb got his third of the game, this time with the assist to Charlie Glew. Fran Casey got an unassisted goal at 12:43, his 15th of the year and the Redmen led 10-1 at the end of three quarters.

In the last period, with most of the inexperienced players in for the Redmen, Tech came up with six goals. Soph Bobby Edmonston scored his first of the year for UMass, and as the whistle sounded, the Redmen had won the game 11-7.

The regular season is over with Charlie Glew leading in goal-scoring with 16, followed by Fran Casey with 15 and Steve Harrington with 11. Also, Gordie Webb had 5 goals, Al Morris got 4, and Dick Brown scored three times. Charlie Avakien and Walt Gustavsen each came up with two, and single goals were registered by Frank Infusino, Bob Kelly, Jim Mahoney, Steve Vengrow, Bob Edmonston and Fred Thompson.

CO-CAPT. STEVE HARRINGTON, in three seasons, scored 42 goals and 40 assists and must rank as one of the finest lacrosse players ever at UMass. He scored 22 goals last year and this year his goal production was lower (11) but he was invaluable in his role of feeding linemates Charlie Glew and Fran Casey. He had 19 assists.

THE SEASON ITSELF was one of ups and downs. The team dropped its first two games to Wesleyan and Brown, but came back with a three-game winning streak beating Bowdoin, M.I.T., and Tufts. Then, against a fine Holy Cross team, the Redmen were beaten 8-6, but they bounced back in their next game with an 11-6 victory over Trinity. In the season's big game with Amherst, the team played perhaps its finest game, topping the Jeffs 6-4. Middlebury beat UMass in a tough game 7-4, and the Redmen lost 11-7 to New Hampshire in a contest which had the Redmen leading most of the game. This loss was probably the most disappointing of the year: In the final game the Redmen layed a fine game to defeat W.P.I. 11-7. The year's record: 6 wins, 5 losses.

Nine players will be lost through graduation, seven of them starters. The excellent attack unit of Steve Harrington, Fran Casey, and Charlie Glew will graduate along with Dick Baird, the fine goalie of the team. Hal Ryder who had a good year on defense will be sorely missed as will midfielders, Frank Infusino and Gordie Webb. Co-Capt. Infusino played inspiring lacrosse for the whole season and though small physically, Frank was big in action. Also midfielders Al Morris and Steve Vengrow will be missed.

Losing nine lettermen would make the job of building a strong team tough for any coach. But Coach Garber will have a good number of lettermen coming back, plus some very good prospects from this year's Freshmen team to bolster his squad.

Slumping Redmen Nine Decisioned By UNH, 9-5

by JOHN GOODRICH

The slumping Redmen baseball team dropped yet another game Saturday, a 9-5 decision to the University of New Hampshire. The loss marked the sixth defeat in the last seven starts for the Redmen. Since May 2, the club has fallen from a 5-2 mark, to a 6-8 mark, and in the conference from 3-1 to 3-6.

This time it was simply a matter of too much power for the Redmen to cope with. The teams blasted three home runs with UNH getting two of them, accounting for seven of their runs. Mike Johnson was on the hill for the Redmen and Dan Serieka, a powerful fullback on the football team, was hurling for UNH.

THE WILDCATS SCORED FIRST in the second inning. They had two hits in the first, but the runners were left stranded, along with a man who reached on an error, as Johnson got out of the jam. Mike got the first two men in the second before Cliff Chadwick lined a ball to center that Dennis Della Piana missed for a two base error. Then John Awdycki booted one to keep UNH in business. Paul Larkin then came through with a line drive between left and center, and he beat the tag for a home run.

The visitors continued to leave men on base, while Mass only had one runner until the fifth, and he reached on an error. Then Al Nordberg broke the slump with a long drive to left that went for a triple. Jim Kuczynski struck out and Bill Crane came to bat. Nordberg wandered too far off the bag and was caught in a rundown to cost the team a big out. Crane eventually walked and Karl Kamena singled to put two men on. Mike Johnson then stroked a long fly to right that bounced into the hedge at the 412 mark for a three run homer and a tie game.

It soon became evident that the long run around the bases had taken something out of Johnson, as UNH hit him hard in the sixth. He got the first man, but Pete Van Buskirk and Larkin singled. Ron Merrill then walked and Dick Ahrendt hit a home run over the cedar fence to the left of the 377 foot mark. Steve Camuso singled and Johnson was removed in favor of Rod Corey. Dave Federowicz singled and Serieka walked, but Corey settled down to strike out the next two men.

IN THE SEVENTH, Larkin walked and Merrill doubled. Ahrendt then singled home two runs to account for six rbi's himself. Mass was still not hitting, and UNH got two more in the eighth. Finally in the bottom of the eighth, the Redmen got a run as John Awdycki opened with a double, after one was out. He took third on a wild pitch and scored as Merrill committed his third error of the day on a grounder by Wojnar.

THE REDMEN got started again in the ninth, when Serieka ran into a little control trouble. He walked Bill Cleary and Tony Simone before Kamena singled in a run, and Mass looked ready to fly. Corey however nubbed a little popup to short for the first out. Then Serieka got leadoff man Joe Apicella to hit back to the box, and he started the game ending double play.

UMass took one of their worst all around beatings of the year in this game. UNH had 14 hits

Frosh Break Skein; Down Rams On Road

The University of Massachusetts baseball streak of three and one half weeks of winless ball on the road ended Wednesday when the Freshmen team won at Kingston, Rhode Island 4-1. The Little Redmen were winless in three attempts.

Mass broke a three inning tie with a run in the seventh inning and added two more scores in the eighth to take their second win of the season from the Freshmen Rams. Carl Boteze pitched another strong game for Mass. Boteze whiffed 15 with five walks to bring his total of strikeouts in the last three games to 45.

The big bat in the game was carried by Jim Babyak who had three hits including what would have been a home run had he not been called out for missing second base. Babyak scored the first run of the game after his single preceeded a single by Ray Johnson, and a two bagger by Marc Greenberg that split the gap in right field.

The Redmen held the lead until Rhoddy scored in the third. From there it was a pitcher's dual between Boteze and Steve Bakios. Jeff Whitney and Frank Stewart combined to score the go-ahead run in the seventh frame. Whitney singled and stole second, and Stewart delivered a right field double and a run batted in. A two run single by Bill Breen iced the game in the eighth, when Roy Lasky and Ed Polchlopek scored. Polchlopek was the only batter other than Babyak to pick up more than one of the ten UMass hits.

Index Distribution Delayed

Bad news for the 1964 Index—originally scheduled to arrive on campus May 25.

Word received late yesterday from the William J. Keller Co. of Buffalo, N. Y. reported that the Index could not arrive until May 29, four days later.

The reason for the delay was attributed by Keller to mechanical breakdowns, including four on Monday.

The Index is printed on modern high-speed presses that require periodic checks and rest periods. The Keller Co., in an attempt to get the book done for the May 25 delivery date, has been working around the clock on the 1964 yearbook.

The company said about one quarter of the books are ready for binding. However, the Index office would require at least half of the 7000 copies for satisfactory distribution.

Books will be distributed Saturday morning, May 30, at the South Lawn of the Student Union, weather permitting. Otherwise an indoor distribution will be worked out.

Student ID's will be required. Students who will not be on campus may receive the yearbook by letting a friend present his ID.

There is also a possibility that seniors who will not receive the yearbook on campus may be offered the chance to pick up the Index at senior week activities on Cape Cod and at Amherst.

Senate Is Presented Bill For U.M. Boston Branch

"As President of the University of Massachusetts, I not only welcome the proposal . . . but I look forward to providing facilities in Boston for 1,000 students by the fall of 1965 if the proposal is approved by the Legislature."

This was President Lederle's reaction to a bill calling for establishment of a Boston branch of the University of Massachusetts.

The bill, filed by Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, D-Holyoke, Sen. George V. Kenneally Jr., D-Boston, and Representative Robert H. Quinn, D-Boston calls for the appropriation of $200,000 for planning purposes.

Calling on the Legislature to approve the measure, Senator Donahue noted that " . . . despite the tremendous expansion that has taken place at the University at Amherst, and despite the fact that they will be growing by more than 1,200 students this September, many fully qualified young men and women from Massachusetts are being turned away."

He added that "two out of every five students at the University are from the Greater Boston

Gov. Welsh Lecture On His Battle With Wallace

by BILL MAHONEY

"George Wallace is an extremely persuasive and able political pro." So said Governor Matthew Welsh of the man he defeated in Indiana's Presidential Primary.

Speaking on the eve of Maryland's primary, Welsh lectured on his battle with the Alabama governor who proclaimed he was for "segregation, today, tomorrow and forever."

When Wallace entered the Indiana primary, three weeks before election day, the pollsters gave him about 47% of the democratic vote. Said Welsh, "Wallace ran as a Democrat and preached the philosophy of the far right wing Republicans."

Calling himself, "not the most popular Governor . . . and the only Democrat in the state house," Welsh told how his "central problem was to make the people look at the moral and constitutional issues."

Wallace was seeking to keep alive the trend it seemed he had started in Wisconsin as he attacked the federal government, the courts and called for the preservation of "states rights." Angered by lack of support from the news media, Wallace labeled the Indianapolis Star, (a paper termed extremely conservative by Pierre Salinger), as a "left wing pinko press."

When the votes were counted Wallace received only 29% of the Dem. total carrying only two counties. Welsh discounted this showing as "a protest vote of normal proportions." He went on to say that the loss of the two northern counties was in large part due to the fact that "We never got our message in there." The people were serviced by Chicago television stations which were not particularly interested in the Hoosier primary.

College Bowl Members Honored At Dinner

by NORM TRUMP

Monday at 6 p.m., the College Bowl team was feted at a dinner sponsored by the President's office and the Athletic council.

Among those present at the dinner, held in the Bristol room of the S.U., were President and Mrs. Lederle, Dean Field and Warren McGuirk, dean of the School of Physical Education.

The dinner was given because the President was not here when the team got back from New York. It had been planned for some time.

PRESIDENT LEDERLE spoke after the dinner and said, "The University has lived in the shadow of the more distinguished private schools in the area, giving our alumni an inferiority complex.

"The College Bowl win has alerted people of the state to the University," he continued. "Perhaps many of the applicants we had this year were entranced by our College Bowl victories."

The President then presented books to members of the first team, Sue Tracy, Mike Berrini, Dave Mathieson and Bill Landis.

THE BOOKS were on the subjects in which each student is most interested: archaelogy, history, zoology and chemistry, respectively.

George Richardson, chairman of the Athletic Council, spoke next. He said, "The Council's horizon is not limited to sports—we delve into any field worthy of recognition."

He went on to note that the primary purpose of the Bowl team was in the public image of the University that the members conveyed.

IT IS DOUBTFUL that their contribution will be matched for many years," he stated.

Richardson presented silver Revere bowls to the first and second teams, which included Sandy Graham, Jim Crawford, Jeff Davidow and Mike Hench.

MRS. ALBERT MADEIRA, wife of the team's deceased coach, and Dan Melley, the University news editor who took over the team, received bowls.

Melley then presented medallions from General Electric, sponsor of College Bowl, to the first team.

To conclude the program, Melley gave personal gifts to all eight members that had a "value which is commensurate with their wrapping," which was tissue paper.

The team was shown the silver winner's bowl before the start of the last show and Sue Tracy used its reflection to comb her hair. She got a pocket mirror.

JEFF DAVIDOW RECEIVED a toy auto to make up for his Mustang, which Ford will be taking back at the end of May.

Mike Berrini got a pack of cigarettes, an indication that it does pay to mooch from your friends.

Twenty-Four U. M. Students Head South

Twenty-four University of Massachusetts students will participate in the Intra-American Student Exchange program next year, said Dr. Robert L. Byrnes, coordinator.

Chosen by the advisors, house mothers and school of education staff, the students were considered on the basis of their grade point average, recommendations, academic major and the selection of an exchange school to supplement their major field of study.

Students may presently elect to go to either Florida State University, the University of South Florida or the University of New Mexico.

The purpose of the program, according to Dr. Byrne, are to "broaden the horizons of the future teachers, to combat provincialism since many of the students have not been outside their home states, to develop a better understanding of other parts of our country, and to supplement the academic program at the University.

"The program began as an elementary education exchange and now includes every department on campus," he added.

This exchange costs the Universities no extra money, and the students are able to attend out-of-state schools while paying the same tuition as residents of the state. The only extra cost involved is the expense of transportation.

Those students chosen to participate in the program are:

Owner Of "Borrowed" Gibson Guitar Wishes It Returned

A young man, identifying himself as a member of one of the recognized student organizations at the University, went to the office of the Secretary of Amherst College shortly after spring vacation and borrowed a guitar.

He was borrowing it for a friend to play in a benefit performance that the organization was connected with, he said at the time. The guitar has not been returned and the owner has not been able to contact either the borrower or user of the guitar. She sincerely hopes that one or the other will contact her.

If the guitar were left somewhere, perhaps forgotten, it still may be possible to find it.

A Gibson, classical style, model C, with a deep finish, gut strings, in a brown, imitation alligator case, describes the instrument.

Of sentimental as well as real value, the owner would deeply appreciate the guitar's return. If anyone remembers seeing a guitar unattended someplace, or remembers it being borrowed, or any other information concerning it, please contact Mary Alden or Jeff Davidow at the Student Union or call Lee Larsen at the Office of the Secretary, Amherst College or evenings at AL 3-7200.

Civil Rights Collects Books For South

Students for Civil Rights—begin a book drive today! The books that are collected this week will be sent to students in Prince Edward County, Virginia. In 1957, all public schools were closed by the county rather than be integrated. They have never reopened in the subsequent six years. Poor white and Negro families were not able to afford to send their children to private schools, and as a result, these children have had no formal education in the last six years. It would be hard to imagine a county where the majority of eleven and twelve year olds have never learned to read or write and college-aged students are waiting to begin high school. Yet this is exactly the situation in Prince Edward County.

Last fall, private funds were used to set up schools that were open to all students, Negro and white. However; due to the shortage of funds, these schools will not re-open next fall, leaving hundreds of eager-to-learn students with no class rooms. They can, however, read books. Books that will give them part of the knowledge that they strive for. Books that we can give them. These students, desirous of knowledge, will appreciate any kind of book at all. Anything from Shakespeare to psychology; from Clements to Cleland; from Hemingway to Horticulture.

The collection box for any books that you will give will be in the Barnstable Room all week, so bring all your old textbooks, novels, and paperbacks and let the students of Prince Edward County be educated!

Dear Mom & Dad

By now you've probably received a letter from the college with my grades. They really don't count, they are just temporary. Actually they don't give As' or Bs' here. The grade C is considered above average work and means Complimentary, D is doing fine, and F means finished the course.

I am quite proud of my grades because much more attention is being paid to me. I have been receiving special notices in my mail box and my teachers are even calling me in for special conferences. One professor even has suggested I go to Vocational School.

I do like college real well, but at the same time I would like to be independent, so if it's all right with you, I will be home next week to work for a semester.

Commenting on the future of the Exchange Program, Dr. Byrne foresees tremendous growth. In 1966, he named the probable schools involved in the exchange to be the University of Maine, Minnesota, Arizona and possibly the Universities of Nebraska and Purdue.

Exchanging with about 15 to 20 schools located in all geographical areas of the country, as well as South America, is the projected goal of the program as expressed by Dr. Byrne.

Application forms will be available in the RSO office starting Thursday, May 21 at 9:00 until Monday, May 25. They must be returned by Monday, May 25, by 5:00 p.m.

YAHOO REVISITED

by ANN BAXTER

Congratulations to Yahoo! Their new issue, Preyboy—you won't see it until tomorrow—is an unqualified success. It combines the humor and wit of the Harvard Lampoon with that distinctly local Yahoolsh flavor. Result is a darned good parody of Playboy.

The regular Playboy features are there: the 129th installment of the Preyboy Philosophy, "Preyboy After Hours," and—natch—the Preymate of the Month (now hanging in the Vatican!), not a fold-out, alas, but there in all her artistic glory. "Little Annie Fanny" becomes "Little Fanny Hill," in living color on the UMass campus, drawn by Abe Spencer of "Happiness Is . . ." fame.

"Silversteinberger at UMass," done by Roger Jones, rivals the original—equally funny and nearly identically drawn.

"Yes, Doctor," a parody of Ian Fleming, is, if anything bad can be said about it, slightly too unsubtle. "There Won't Be Any Pictorial Feature on Valdosta State Teachers College" is good, if slightly lengthy, and saves the editors from having the ire of the South College censors on their heads.

The appearance of Yushnik on the jokes page is an unprecedented delight, and the photographs accompanying the Preyboy Jazz All-Stars (they look pretty familiar) are professional, and, like so many features in the magazine, in color.

I'd be the last one to say that the loss of Dave Axelrod to the Collegian might be a good one—but I'll be the first one to say that the incoming Bob Flynn has done a pretty fantastic job.

Last Travel In Collegian Montaigne

by JOHN B. CHILDS

It came to pass that the time was upon us that we were to depart from the pleasant land of the universtay-ovmass. The natives regarded our departure with fear, pointing out the dangers of the great monster called the arm--ee. This monster we were told lies in wait for tender victims, upon their leaving the sanctuary of the Universtay-ovmass. Horrifying tales were told of this beast which can eat or in-duck numerous victims which it then digests (trayins) before excreting them from its bowels (discharge).

However, being somewhat suspicious of local myths, we were not sore afraid and proceeded ahead with our plans for departure.

During our stay much has been discovered. We had found that the mythological deity called the prez-eye-dint actually did exist—this was confirmed by our own eyes on one rare day.

We had finally analyzed the great quagmire of warm food and cold-minds—the Hatch, as a religious temple wherein dwelled the twin spirits of "small-talke" and "blank-gaze".

We had come upon a different spirit which prevailed in this land, a spirit of friendship.

The great nomadic migrations of the hill hordes in their frequent lustful wanderings had warmed our hearts. It is not often that one sees mass orgy personified.

This and much more had we beheld. Now we bade farewell to the rustic natives and the steely eyed armies of po-leeze. Now we marched into dry desert lands. Behind us we heard one lightly whispered question. "Are you sure those guys ain't Feds?" Taking our notebooks we departed.

To UMass,

This past semester we (20 of us) have experienced a truly wonderful and extremely rewarding stay on the University of Massachusetts campus. As the semester draws to an end, we feel a strong desire to express our feelings for the friendliness shown to us by the whole campus.

The chance to exchange with students from another school holds one of the best learning experiences available in our college campuses today. We have come to realize that the New England feeling for the old and truly American heritage is something that means a lot to each one of you. We too have felt this feeling this semester. We have seen many places throughout the Northeastern section of our country.

For most of us this was our first visit to this area, but we all hope it has not been our last. Yet, we will never forget the campus pond, the chapel bells and chimes, the Hatch, the Massachusetts accents, the snow that came too late for Winter Carni, clopping through the snow in our first boots, all the teas and parties given in our honor, the sun bathing in the quad, the late libes, eating at the commons, "Spring Day", and most of all you—the students and faculty of the University.

As we head back to our home states and again take up the books at our own universities, we will remember this semester with a special warm feeling in our hearts. How can one say goodbye to such a wonderful experience.

Thank you for making this semester one of the GREATEST! Y'all come see us sometime, ya'hear!

An Active Student Gives Parting Words

To the Editor,

Thank you for this chance to say a few words to the campus before graduation. I'd like to say something about the Student Senate and Critique, the things I've been most closely associated with this year, and then touch on the University as a whole.

While this wasn't a "great" year for the Student Senate, I've grown to think a lot more of the organization after riding its back for a year. Many of its members deserve the respect and gratitude of the student body and certainly the organization as a whole deserves your support. While I might not have picked exactly the slate that emerged from the recent election, it is a good slate and, hopefully, will produce some solid results in the coming year. A head start was provided by the excellent debate which ensued during the election. Through that discussion, most of the goals, problems, and responsibilities of the Senate were brought together for the first time, evaluated, and compared. If half the potential indicated that night is realized, a very productive year does lie ahead.

Critique, my pet project, I leave in your hands, hoping that with the help of the faculty, you will make it into the finest publication of its kind in the country. The first issue, though a great deal more objective than Harvard's or Yale's, is still far from being "truly" objective. I hope all will keep this in mind, students and faculty, and that you will take it for what it is, an experimental sample of what such a publication can be. Many suggestions from members of the student body and faculty have been implimented through drastic policy changes. If such cooperation continues, so will Critique, but without such cooperation the publication cannot go on, nor does it deserve to as anything but an avowed humor magazine, and one of those would seem to be enough for any campus.

The Senate and Critique personify an aspect of the University at once one of its most important virtues and one of its most unfortunate faults. The communication and cooperation among students, faculty, and administration are among the best in the country, yet the freedom which facilitates the former and the dedication which leads to the latter do not seem deserved.

With all the opportunities available to us for self-expression, and for creative participation in the University and world communities, we are sadly, all too silent and inactive. Politically, for example, we are one of the most backward campuses in the country, and this indictment includes the faculty, despite the fact that our state needs more help from the educated than most in the Union, and that our country, given the role it plays in the world, needs more help than most other nations.

Please use the opportunities we're given to make a good school great . . .

Sincerely,
Mark Cheren

Hell Hath No Wrath

To the Editor:

We are indignant! We have been slighted! Our room was not inspected. For a year we have been collecting—for a year we have been striving for the glory of Van Meter North—and we were bypassed in the General Inspection. But we will not be defeated! We will not wait until next semester to find something exotic. We have conducted our own inventory, and we submit it to you, our campus:

A pair of antique binoculars
A thirty-power telescope
An open window
One bumblebee named Cleopatra
Four apples
Three carrots
One half bag of stale pizza-flavored goldfish
A Keito's Michelob glass
Two nips of Seagram's 7
A half-bottle of Medoc wine
Six churchkeys
Three overdue term papers
One silicon-covered ironing board
Two G.E. steam irons
Six unironed men's shirts
A key to the Bunny Club
One pair of olive-drab men's rubber boots
Two ace bandages
Forty-nine feet of Saran Wrap
One automobile floormat
One unpurged edition of Fanny Hill
A seven-and-a-half watt red lightbulb
Two spare Gorden Linen sheets
Dr. Seidman's Becoming A Mother
One well-worn bathroom scale
Thirty-seven .22 long rifle cartridges
Three footprints on the ceiling
Seventeen pairs of size twelve shoes
Two pairs of bare feet
Twelve bottles of toenail polish
Half a semester of dust
One bottle of allergy pills

The Roommates

To the Editor:

This letter is written in reply to a recent article concerning S.U.G. Board.

Certainly it is true that the Board would like to see its actions and decisions covered by the Collegian so that the University community can have a fuller understanding of our efforts. But we do expect any such coverage to be a fair and accurate report of our business.

In an attempt at establishing a committee to consider a revision of the constitution and by laws of the Union, it was pointed out that an executive-legislative overlap is undemocratic. This was not meant to be a criticism of the Director of the Union or the Program Advisor, as the Collegian reporter seems to suggest. Quoting out of context from the report severely distorted the actual implications of the committee findings.

If debate was felt by some to be stifled by the executive-legislature overlap (not by Mr. Scott) than the blame cannot be shifted. It must be placed where it belongs on the individual members who are responsible to themselves and their fellow students to question present policies. This is what the special committee was set up to do. This is what it did.

Sheila McRevey, Chairman, S.U.G. Board
Mary Ann Brady, S.U.G. Board, Class of '66

To the Editor:

It hardly seems possible that my semester at U.N.M. is coming to a close.

By this time, I'm sure the College of Education has received numerous letters praising their exchange program. For me it has been one of the most rewarding and unforgettable experiences of my life. It really has been an education.

In the formal classroom I've had the opportunity to study anthropology under one of the leading authorities in the country. I've been able to take an art course designed solely for use in the elementary classroom. I've observed elementary classrooms in the Southwest and talked to the teachers. Yes, I've taken notes and exams like in my other college, too; the added opportunities, however, even made this something special.

Outside the classroom there have been learning experiences, too. I've come to learn "the other" side of the segregation question; like it or not, there is another side. And, I've become aware of Indian and Spanish problems which I never knew existed. We've discussed politics and religion, and I've learned.

And with all this learning has been a great deal of fun. There was dinner on San Diego Bay, an afternoon at Disneyland, a trip to Fort Union, a trip to the ski basin, a view from Sandia Crest, a day in Sante Fe, a weekend at the Grand Canyon, and so much more.

And above all there has been a chance to compare schools, tourist attractions, political ideas, social ideas, customs, fads, food, clothes—not only the East and Southwest, but all parts of the country. There is a large out-of-state enrollment here, and I've come to know girls and guys from Alaska, Los Angeles, small town North Dakota and Kansas City as well as Texas, Louisiana and Rhode Island. Something in comparing always leads to thinking. It's been a wonderful opportunity to re-evaluate my own ideas as well as the ideas of U.M. and the East.

I sincerely believe that this has been one of the most educational and enjoyable experiences I will ever have. I'm sure this experience has made me a better person, and I hope it will make me a better teacher.

Ten Outstanding Seniors

JOSEPH W. BRADLEY, JR.

JOAN M. LABUZOSKI

JOHN B. CHILDS

STEPHEN G. GRAY

Each year the Collegian staff honors ten students in the graduating class for their achievements on campus and the promise they show.

This year, well aware of the sharp criticism put to several committees that have attempted to chose students for commendation, the executive board has given special attention to the selections.

The students in our list have made significant contributions to the academic and extra-curricular life on campus throughout their years at UMass. Some, for one reason or another, have not gotten the recognition that others have gained in Honors Night, Who's Who, or the like. Others are right off the lists of previous selections.

Just as we are sure that there are many more than ten outstanding seniors, we are sure that the students we have chosen are exemplary of the important contributors to the University. To them, and to those we have not listed, we extend a thank you, and congratulations.

New Season Of Concerts Begins

On Wednesday, June 10, 1964 at 7 p.m., the Amherst Community Band under the direction of Miss Norinne Jacobus of Hopkins Academy, Hadley will begin rehearsals in Old Chapel for its twelfth consecutive season of Friday evening concerts in August on the Amherst Town Common. The band was organized in 1953 as a project of the Amherst Chamber of Commerce.

The Amherst Community Band giving a concert on the Town Common last year. The lighting has been hastily arranged after a summer rainstorm. (From the Amherst Journal-Record, Aug. 8, 1963.)

For many years it was under the direction of Joseph Contino of the University music department. In 1962, sponsorship was assumed by the Amherst Lion's Club. This year, additional concerts are proposed to be given in Northampton and Hadley.

The band's membership consists of professional musicians, college, high school, and junior high students from all over the Connecticut valley. If you are a brass, woodwind, or percussion player living in the area during the summer, you are welcome to join the band. For further information, call Jesse Rydenski, Business Manager, Northampton, JU 4-5397.

International Club Now Merges Cultures To Create Casual Fun

Anyone unacquainted with the University's International Club might assume the U.N. General Assembly was taking its coffee break in the Governor's Lounge.

The club's Tuesday coffee hour, in the Union at 5:15, is an opportunity for foreign and American faculty members, and students to exchange views in an informal atmosphere.

Faculty wives and friends of the club serve as hostesses each week to the forty or fifty members who regularly attend.

Claudette Cacciabeve, the sophomore government major who is the club's president, describes it as "truly international". As its name implies," she says, "it is not just a group of foreign students but is open to Americans as well."

The club was originally a formal discussion group on international relations. Last year's president, Russy Sumariwalla, an Indian graduate student, brought its social program to the foreground.

Eastern and western cultures cross in the Club. Recently the group went to Sturbridge Village. For the Americans the visit was a picturesque look into United States history, but one Indonesian remarked, "Why they dip candles like that today in my country!"

Miss Cacciabeve has been conducting dancing lessons for men in the club. They have learned to cha-cha, waltz, rhumba, and even twist.

One of the highlights of the club's year is an evening of dinner and entertainment following a designated theme.

"An Evening in the Land of the Arabians" was presented May 9. Arabian food and entertainment are planned. The evenings will be open to the entire campus and proceeds will help finance club activities.

From time to time members exchange ideas on a current world problem or talk about the customs of their countries.

But the interest and enthusiasm of its nearly 150 members seem to rest on the opportunity of making a friend from another country.

One American member commented, "I've found that talking to Persians, Egyptians, Britons, and Koreans, all in one group has been a fine experience."

area, but more than 1,400 fully qualified candidates from the same area were turned down for next year's entering class."

Actually, of 8,000 applicants that were turned down, more than 3,500 were from fully qualified students who would have been admitted if there had been room. Great numbers of these were from the Boston area.

In establishing this extension, Massachusetts would be following in the footsteps of California, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin. These state universities all have extensions into major metropolitan areas, the most notable being the University of California at Berkely and at Los Angeles.

At present, Massachusetts is the only major state whose State University does not offer public University education in its major metropolitan area.

more than $75,000 and those of Wallace at about $150,000, Governor Welsh offered the audience a "backlash situation."

In a fifty-fifty white Negro precinct where an anti Negro vote would be expected Wallace polled only six votes while Welsh rolled up 246. Stressing the short time that was available for Indiana Democrats to confront the crusading Wallace, Governor Welsh spoke of the paradox in the failure of the southern counties to vote for the segregationist while two northern industrialized ones did.

Asked how his state would go in the Presidential election Governor Welsh felt if Goldwater were the Republican nominee it would most probably go for him; but if he were not President Johnson could carry Indiana and possibly the whole middle west.

FINISH IN TIE FOR LAST

Redmen Nine Ends Yan-Con Season With Tie Against UConn

by JOHN GOODRICH

The University of Massachusetts baseball team ran into some more bad luck Tuesday as its game with the University of Connecticut was rained out after five innings with the score tied 1-1. Since there is no plan to make the game up, the Redmen finished the conference season with a 3-6 record to tie with UConn for last place. Maine won the title by defeating Vermont twice the past weekend.

The rain washed out a fine pitching job by Ross Piken as he had held the Huskies to just a single hit, a second inning home run by first baseman Ed Carroll. He walked four and struck out five in the stint. Piken had been bothered by control problems all year and seemed to be coming around in fine shape until the rains came.

OPPOSING PIKEN on the mound was Jim Parmelee who also was doing a solid job, though Mass hit him in the fourth and fifth inning. Parmelee gave up four hits, struck out three and walked two over the span.

Piken walked the first batter as the game began under ominous clouds. He was erased as he tried to steal on a fine throw by Karl Kamena.

Massachusetts got started in the bottom of the inning as Joe Apicella walked. John Awdycki sacrificed him over to second. After Dennis Della Piana had grounded out, Tony Simone came up with a line shot to right and Apicella scooted home just ahead of the throw.

Carroll was leadoff batter in the second as he rapped a Piken curve over Simone's head and into the hedge for a four bagger. As Piken said later, "I played against him this summer and knew he was a curve ball hitter. I just forgot and hung one a little high."

Neither team did much then until the fourth, when the rain began to fall. After two were out, Al Nordberg walked and Jim Kuczynski singled passed the shortstop to put men on second and first. Parmelee however made Piken hit a sharp ground ball to the first baseman to end the inning.

UCONN had its first man walk in the fifth inning, but once again the strong arm of Kamena erased him as he tried to steal. By now it was really pouring, but the play continued before a few brave souls who ignored the rain. With one out, Bill Crane singled and was sacrificed by Apicella. Awdycki followed with a slow grounder to short and just beat the throw on a close play. Parmelee then went to work on Della Piana, and struck him out as he kept the ball low. With that action the umpire called a halt to the activities, and a torrential downpour followed that washed out the game.

This marked the second year in a row that the club has finished in the cellar of the conference. Last year the club had the pitching, but no hitting. This season, the team had both Simone and Awdycki above the .300 mark, the former at .333 and the latter at .306. In addition Della Piana had a .280 average and many of the other players hit for power. The one single problem would have to be pitching and defensive lapses at crucial times. A case in point was the UNH game last Saturday. Two errors and a pitching lapse accounted for the first three runs. And a little pitching trouble accounted for the last four by the grand slam homer. The first UConn game saw Mass losing on two unearned runs. Such are the fortunes of the baseball wars.

THE LAST HOME GAME for the team will be June 6 against Amherst. In that game, Apicella, Awdycki, Simone, Rick Farrell, Neil Harris, Rod Corey, and Mike Johnson will be making their final bows for the Redmen. All of these men at one time or another came through for the Redmen, either pitching or hitting. There will be a strong nucleus returning next year including, Piken, Kamena, Crane, Kuczynski, Nordberg, Della Piana, Steve Wojnar, Jim Ritchie, and Bill Cleary. The club should have a good season next year.

UMass Golfers Down MIT; 10-3 Record For The Season

by DAVE MACIVER

The varsity golf team finished up the season Monday with a 4-3 victory over M.I.T. The match was played at the Redmen's home course, the Orchards C.C., in South Hadley. Medalist was senior Jack Donasky. Winning their matches were captain George DeFalco, Frank Pluta, Dave Wells, and Charlie O'Rourke.

THE LINKSMEN HAD A FINE SEASON, their 10 and 3 record gives them the most wins of the 64 spring season. The 3 losses were all close 1 point decisions. On the season Jack Donasky and captain George DeFalco proved the most consistent as they average in the 70's for all 13 matches. Sophomore Dave Wells was the highest point winner as he won 10½ points out of a possible 12; basketball captain elect Charlie O'Rourke won 9 out of 11; and DeFalco also won 9 points. Team wise the Redmen outscored the opposition 50 to 33.

Jack Donasky and Bill O'Donnell are the only seniors on the squad. Returning next year will be juniors George DeFalco, Frank Pluta, Charlie O'Rourke, and Bill Glass, along with sophomores Dave Wells, Howie Atkinson, and Bob McNeil. Coach Chet Gladchuk can also look to the freshmen for help next year; several members of the frosh have shown good potential, as their 4 and 1 record indicates.

What Recruiters Are Looking For

Prospects For June Grads

WASHINGTON (CPS) — A thoughtful workhorse seems to be the apt description of the June graduate sought by U.S. business.

A survey shows that personnel officers of the nation's leading firms have placed emphasis on the college graduate willing to work long hours while learning the rudiments of his job.

The survey was compiled by Careers Inc., and published in the 1964 edition of "Careers: For the College Man."

Graduates afflicted with the "instant executive syndrome" are going to find jobs harder to come by this year than ever before.

"The jump from college to business is often larger than the graduate anticipates. Using the case-study method, he's had too much practice making decisions at the board of directors level."

R. M. Coyner of Burroughs Business Machines paints an even dimmer picture.

"Many graduates will never be in a true management position," he said. "Those who do succeed will do so as a result of excellence in a specific area."

Don't be aimless when seeking a job says H. W. Wittenborn of Cook Electric Co.

"In interviewing many college seniors, we find a major portion of them seem to be in a fog. Many have no established aims or goals. My advice is: set your sights," he said.

One way to score with a campus recruiter is to be familiar with his firm and its products.

"Our interest is in the young person who can give us some idea of what he feels he may be able to contribute to our organization," said Winston Blount of Blount Brothers Corp.

A new trend among businesses recruiting college talent is the desire for the graduate who will be both an outstanding specialist in his field and a "generalist" in his outlook.

Summarizing U.S. business attitudes was James Helms of the American Investment Co. of Illinois.

"College graduates can realize their full potential only through a continuation of the learning process in their work environment, hard work and proper application of their abilities. Success or failure depends on job performance.

"A college degree is not sufficient — advancement must be earned," Helms concluded.

The publication also contains a schedule of companies planning to visit campuses, and the dates of their visits. Other articles include information on military obligation, job resumes and other helpful advice for June graduates.
